ADDRESS.

UNDER auspices of the highest and most extensive patronage, the Proprietors have at length the proud satisfaction of fearlessly submitting the Second Volume of the NATIONAL COMMERCIAL DIRECTORY to public approbation; and as the principle of its general arrangement is so similar to the first, or preceding Volume, it stands but in little need of explanation; yet, as the embellishments are so much more profuse and costly, they will doubtless claim particular attention, being a series of elegant Maps of the Counties contained in the Work, which are ornamented with a picturesque Vignette of a Cathedral, or principal Church in each County, and the whole engraved on steel plates; also a large sheet Map of England, the whole having been executed by and under the superintendence of the most skilful Artists. The County Maps are designed upon a peculiarly novel and useful plan, having round their boundaries the outline of the attached Counties, distinctly shewing the roads to the principal Towns in those adjoining, which, the Proprietors are confirmed in the opinion, will prove a source of interesting utility to their numerous Subscribers, the Traveller, and the Public at large.

Throughout this arduous compilation, the Proprietors have been impelled, by a due sense of the honourable patronage so long and extensively bestowed on their labours, to effect all the improvements possible for a Work of this nature to embrace; and being impressed with the conviction that accuracy in the collection of the names, designations, and addresses of the inhabitants, and authenticity in the delineations of the various and numerous Cities, Towns, Seaports, &c. is the primary object in the typographical display of a Work like the present; to this have their views been unremittingly pointed, and they have availed themselves of all the first rate auxiliary assistance that could be procured to complete it in every department with fidelity and despatch. The historical view of each place is necessarily brief, yet, from the local information gained by personal enquiry, many curious facts before unpublished are inserted; and it is hoped the topographical portion of this Volume will be found sufficiently descriptive to render it interesting and useful.

Before closing this Address, Messrs. PIGOT and Co. cannot forego the opportunity of most respectfully announcing the Third and Last Volume of this great Commercial Work being in progress (which will be compiled and published with equal facility and accuracy as the preceding Two Volumes) an account of which is annexed at the end of this Work; and as a tribute of unfeigned acknowledgement for a succession of favours to an extent they never contemplated, they, with sincere respect, offer their most grateful thanks, and beg to assure their patrons and the public, they will ever most scrupulously endeavour to realize all they profess in their future publications, and which they will effect as far as industry, human exertion, ability, and practical experience will enable them.

CHESHIRE

IS one of the western counties of England, and a county palatine; bounded on the north by the Irish sea, and the counties of Lancaster and York; on the east by the counties of Derby and Stafford; on the south by the county of Salop; and on the west by the counties of Flint and Denbigh. Its extreme length, from the hundred of Wirral to the confines of Yorkshire, is about 58 miles; its breadth, from north to south, about 30 miles, and the acreage of the county about 676,000. Its soil, generally speaking, is composed of clay and sand: the former prevailing in the hundreds of Broxton, Wirral, and Macclesfield, and the latter in the hundreds of Eddisbury, Northwich, Nantwich, and Bucklow. Large tracts of peat moss and black moor land exhibit themselves in that part which lies upon the confines of Yorkshire and Derbyshire. Cheshire was celebrated some centuries ago for the great extent of its forests and heath lands. Its principal forests were those of Delamere, or Mara and Mondram, Wirral, and Macclesfield; all of them well supplied with timber. The forest of Delamere must have been of great extent, not less than fifty townships being within its boundary: within the last two centuries it contained upwards of 11,000 acres, the soil consisting chiefly of gravel and white sand—2000 acres were inclosed, pursuant to an act of parliament passed in 1812, and the land now sustains thriving plantations of various timber. Some of the rising grounds, in the neighbourhood of the old and new pales, which have been detached by royal grants from the forest land, are much indebted for their rising beauty to the taste and expenditure of Thomas Cholmondeley, Esq. and Nicholas Ashton, Esq. whose plantations are as extensive as they are useful and adorning.

The general appearance of the county is that of an extended plain, and is, for the most part, a flat country, whence it has obtained the name of the "Vale Royal of England." On the eastern side is a range of mountainous country, connected with the Derbyshire and Yorkshire hills, of about 25 miles in length and 5 in breadth, extending from near Congleton to the north-eastern extremity of the county. From Macclesfield, in a north-western direction, the surface is irregular and hilly, but continues of that description no further than Alderley, about six miles from Macclesfield. On the Shropshire sides the surface is likewise broken and irregular; and about ten miles east from Chester is another range of hills, between the rivers Dee and Mersey, extending about twenty-five miles from Malpas, on the south side of the county. About a mile to the south of Altrincham rises an elevated tract of ground, called Bowden Downs, which extends a considerable distance from east to west; its western extremity being covered with the wood of Dunham Park.

Although it is stated that the general appearance of this county is flat, it must not be thence inferred to be deficient in varied beauty and picturesque landscape, as partial topographers have unfairly written—on the contrary, various parts of Cheshire possess high claims to the notice of the artist, and the admirer of diversified scenery; and from the several prominences may be contemplated nature clothed both in magnificent and simple garbs. Wirral boasts many delightful marine views: the prospect of the Welch coast, from Park-gate and its neighbourhood, is interesting, and includes the venerable ruins of Flint Castle, the town of Flint, Holywell, &c.; while the active scenery, produced from vessels in the coasting and coal trades, continually passing to and fro, gives a lively and pleasing colouring to the picture. The vicinities of Macclesfield, Astbury, Nantwich, Sandbach, Bunhill, Kelsall-Hill, and from the summit of Beeston, afford prospects extensive and luxuriant. The view from Halton is also very wide, enriched by the meanderings of the Mersey; and the eye is carried over a large district of Lancashire. From Beeston the "Vale Royal" of the county is seen in all its beauty, highly cultivated and spotted with woods and coppices; in the distance are the towering Welch mountains, and the estuary of the Dee gives a pleasing perspective to the whole. From other elevations, besides those of Mowcop, Alderley Edge, Bucklow Hills, the hills of Shuttingslow, and at Frodsham, may be enjoyed a visual banquet of no ordinary excellence and interest.

The principal rivers of Cheshire are the Dee, the Mersey, the Weaver, the Bollin, the Dane, the Wheelock, the Peover, and the Tame. Besides these, there are other inconsiderable streams, which either rise in or wash the lands of this county, and are tributary waters to the other rivers; as, the Gowy, the Betley, the Ashbrook, the Biddle, the Birkin, the Croco, the Walvern, the Mar, the Grimsditch, and the Flookersbrook. Cheshire is also noted for its beautiful sheets of water called meres, lakes, and pools; among these is the noble COMBERMERE, more than a mile in length, giving name to Combermere Abbey. Chapel-mere and Moss-mere are fine pieces of water, in front of Cholmondeley Castle. The other meres are Bar-mere, Quoisley-mere, Rosthern-mere, Bag-mere, Pick-mere, Oak-mere, Mere Pool, &c. The principal canals of this county are, the Duke of Bridgewater's, which was commenced in 1761, the communication between Manchester and Liverpool opened in 1772, and the whole finished in 1776; the Grand Trunk canal, the act for cutting which was passed in 1766; the Ellesmere canal, the act obtained in 1793; the Chester and Nantwich canal (now united with the Ellesmere) obtained its act in 1772, and was completed in 1776; and the Peak Forest canal, which obtained the sanction of government in 1794. These grand works of labour and art afford uninterrupted and cheap intercourse between the towns of Chester, Liverpool, Manchester, &c.; besides communicating with the north of England, Staffordshire, Shropshire, and adjacent counties.

The veins of metal which have been discovered and worked in this county, are those of copper and lead, at Alderley Edge, where also, in 1807, was found cobalt; lead and copper ore have likewise produced profit from the mines at Mottram; and those metals, as well as iron, have been found in other parts, though in veins not rich enough to inspire speculation. Coal is found in great plenty in numerous parts of the county, particularly on its north-east side, in the townships of Adlington, Bollington, Hurdsfield, Norbury, Pott-Shrigley, Poynton, Worth, &c.; these collieries supplying Manchester, Macclesfield, Stockport, &c. with this article, now so essential to manufacturing purposes. One of the most extensive collieries in the kingdom is at Dennah, near Park-gate, the property of Sir Thomas S. M. Stanley, Bart.

SALT and CHEESE have been considered as the chief staple commodities of this county, both of them being exported to a great amount. The annual average weight of rock salt for exportation, for the purpose of fish curing, &c. sent down the Weaver for the last twenty years is estimated at upwards of 55,000 tons; and the annual average of white salt, for the like period, has been about 140,000 tons, chiefly for exportation, the fisheries, and colonies. The principal pits are at Wheelock, Lawton, Roughwood in Leftwich, Middlewich, Anderton, Betchton, near Northwich, Nantwich, and Frodsham. These several works give employment to upwards of 3000 hands. The quantity of cheese taken off by the London market annually, is said to be upwards of 14,000 tons—Bristol and York 8000 tons, besides large quantities sent to Scotland, Ireland, &c.; added to which, the home consumption and immediate well populated neighbourhood must take off considerable quantities. In 1823, it is stated, about 94,000 cows were kept in Cheshire, but this number is evidently erroneous, being insufficient to the production of the immense weight of cheese made in this county; without taking into account the consumption of milk, cream, and butter. The other productions of this prolific county are potatoes, which are cultivated to much advantage; corn, millstones, timber, &c. The present members serving in parliament for the county of Cheshire are Wilbraham Egerton, Esq. and Davies Davenport, Esq. There are also two members returned for the city of Chester, being all that the county sends to parliament. The diocese of Chester comprehends all Cheshire and Lancashire, and various parts of Westmoreland, Cumberland, Yorkshire, Denbighshire, and Flintshire; is divided into two archdeaconries, and the county apportioned into seven hundreds, viz. BROXTON, BUCKLOW, EDDISBURY, MACCLESFIELD, NANTWICH, NORTHWICH, and WIRRAL. It contains 101 parishes, 1 city, 11 market towns, and 670 villages.

POPULATION.—According to the parliamentary returns for 1821 there were houses inhabited 47,094, uninhabited 1,212, and houses building 414. The total number of persons living in the county in the year 1700 was 107,000—in 1750, 131,600—in 1801, 198,100—in 1811, 234,600—and in 1821, 132,952 males and 137,146 females, total of the last named year 270,098 persons. The increase of population in the 50 years from 1700 was 24,600, from 1750 to 1801 the increase was 66,500, from 1801 to 1811 the increase was 36,500, and from 1811 to 1821 the increase number of persons was 32,498, the grand total increase of population in the county, from the year 1700 to the census of 1821, being 160,098 persons.

ALTRINCHAM,

AND THE VILLAGES OF ASHTON-ON-MERSEY, BOWDON, CARRINGTON, DUNHAM, LYMM, PARTINGTON, TIMPERLEY, WARBURTON, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

ALTRINCHAM is a clean market town, in the parish of Bowdon and in the hundred of Bucklow: it is 183 miles from London, 30 from Chester, 9 from Stockport, and 8 from Manchester. The chapel of ease (to Bowdon) is a brick erection, built by subscription in 1799. In its external and internal appearance it possesses nothing remarkable, but is plain and neat, correspondent with the appearance of the town, which is that of uncommon cleanliness, and through which an air of quiet comfort and respectability is pleasingly apparent. The curacy of the chapel is in the presentation of the vicar of Bowdon, and the Rev. Oswald Leicester is the present incumbent. Here are also chapels for the Wesleyans, unitarians, and those of the new connexion; two Sunday schools and a savings bank. A court leet is held by the Earl of Stamford and Warrington, (who is lord of the manor), when the mayor and constables are chosen for the whole barony of Dunham. Although the chief officer is dignified with the title of mayor, he does not exercise any magisterial functions. The privileges attached to this town were granted by Hammond de Massey, in the time of Edward I, when a guild mercatory, i. e. a society for free traffic was granted to the townsmen, and freedom from tolls throughout the barony, right of pasture, &c. Dunham park is the principal seat of consequence in the immediate neighbourhood, but there are many delightful residences possessed by opulent individuals which border the town, the gardens of which are laid out with great taste. The town is about a mile in length, at the extremity of which passes the Duke of Bridgewater's canal, where is also the Navigation Inn and Packet House, where passengers receive every accommodation while waiting for the packets. Here are some manufactures of thread, woollen yarn, bobbin turning, &c. and a power loom factory; but agriculture is the chief employment of the labouring class here, the produce of the gardens, &c. assisting to supply the Manchester markets. The situation of the town is dry and healthy, the views, upon the high grounds about Bowdon, extensive and pleasing, and the soil remarkably productive. Market day is on Tuesday. Fairs are April 29th, August 5th and 6th, and November 22nd, principally for cattle, toys, &c. The population, in 1821, was 2302, but it has since increased to about 3000.

ASHTON-UPON-MERSEY, in the hundred of Bucklow, is 7 miles south of Manchester. In the reign of Henry

IV. a portion of the manor was held by the Carringtons. The other portion descended, through various possessors, to Viscount Allen, who, in 1749, sold it to George Earl of Warrington. The present Earl of Stamford and Warrington is now the proprietor of the entire manor, for which a court baron is held. The Old Watling-street, leading to the ford over the Mersey, adjoins this township. The church is rather a handsome building of stone, with a nave and chancel, and at the west end a small belfry. There are but few monumental memorials in this church, and none that claim particular notice. The entire advowson became, by purchase, the property of the Rev. R. Popplewell Johnson, who is the present patron and rector. The township of Ashton-upon-Mersey contained, in 1821, about 900 inhabitants.

BOWDON, or Bowden, is a scattered village and parish, beautifully situated on an elevated piece of land, washed on one side by the river Bollin and on another by the Duke of Bridgewater's canal; lying on the left of the main road from Manchester to Knutsford, about ten miles from the former, five from the latter place, and about a mile and a half from Altrincham, in the hundred of Bucklow. A short distance east of the village is the extensive and rural park of Dunham Massey, of which mention is made in the account of Dunham. After the dissolution, the estate of Bowdon was attached, together with the church, to the bishopric of Chester; and afterwards the lands were divided, but the advowson of the church still continues vested in the bishops, which, with the remaining lands, are held on lease by the Earl of Stamford and Warrington. The manor is within the leet of Dunham Massey. The church, which, it is said, existed previous to the conquest, stands on very high ground, and is of Gothic structure, consisting of a nave, chancel, and side aisles, the ceilings of which are neatly carved in oak. From the summit of the tower (which contains six bells) the views are extensive and beautifully picturesque, the land being clothed with fine timber and highly rich in cultivation. Several handsome monuments are in the church, amongst which may be particularized two in the Dunham chancel, one to the memory of Langham and Henry Booth, younger sons of Henry Earl of Warrington—date 1724—6. The other to Henry Booth Earl of Warrington, the inscription on which states that this nobleman was tried for high treason, in 1685, and acquitted: he died in 1693. There are also, in the Carrington chancel, curious whole length figures of William Brereton, of Ashley, and his wife, with seven kneeling figures beneath—date 1627-30. In the nave is a handsome monument, by Westmacott, to the members of the Assheton family, with a female figure elegantly executed—date 1759-74. Many other ancient respectful mementos add an interest to the interior of this church. The present vicar is the Rev. William Henry Mann, A. M. There is an ancient grammar school here, to which a bequest was made, in 1600, by Edward Vawdry, of £4. per annum: in 1806 the school-house was rebuilt. There are also charity schools at Seaman's Moss and Little Heath, endowed by Mr. Walton, with the interest of £1000. The soil throughout this parish is principally of a light and sandy nature, peculiarly favourable to the growth of potatos, great quantities of which wholesome and necessary root are produced here. Bowdon parish embraces twelve townships, and contains about 7,400 inhabitants, while the population of the village is only about 400 of that number.

CARRINGTON is a chapelry to the parish of Bowdon, in the hundred of Bucklow, distant about three miles and a half N. W. from Altrincham. It is not noticed in the survey, but was held in fee of the barons of Dunham Massey, and gave name to a family (the Carringtons) which took the local appellation: they flourished here for nearly 400 years; and the estates eventually passed to the Booths, in Elizabeth's reign, by the marriage of Sir George Booth, of Dunham, to Jane, sole heiress of John Carrington, Esq.; he having no issue by her, the property was recovered or rather secured to him by a tedious law suit. The entire township is now possessed by the Earl of Stamford and Warrington. Here is a chapel of ease, under Bowdon, in the patronage of the earl: the curacy is perpetual, and the incumbent is the Rev. O. Leicester. The population of the chapelry is about 550.

DUNHAM MASSEY is an agreeable village and township in the parish of Bowdon, about ten miles from Manchester, on the right of the road through Altrincham. It is skirted on one side by the beautiful park of Dunham, which divides it from the village of Bowdon, and is washed on another side by the waters of the Duke of Bridgewater's canal. Dunham Massey takes its name from Hamon de Massey, the first baron, who existed prior to Edward I. Through various descendants and conveyances the estates have become possessed by the present Earl of Stamford and Warrington. This village has neither church or chapel; nor is there any manufactory here. The principal objects of attraction are the park, and the mansion of Dunham; the latter is a large brick building, of quadrangular form, and contains a collection of paintings familiar to all admirers of the fine arts; amongst the portraits are rare specimens from the pencils of Hans Holbein, Jansen, Vandyke, Sir Peter Lely, Sir Godfrey Kneller, &c. The family plate is said to excel, in splendour and value, most in the kingdom. The parks, which abound with fine lofty timber, give pasturage to more than 500 head of deer. The grounds are much frequented by parties from Manchester and its neighbourhood: joyous groups may be seen, on a summer's day, solacing themselves upon the verdant sward, beneath the umbrageous foliage, or rambling amidst the cool recesses of this truly sylvan scenery. There is still a heronry here: and ancient records state that, in the reign of Henry II, a castle was held here, by Hamo de Masci, who withstood the attacks of that monarch. Not a relic now remains of the structure, nor can its site be satisfactorily pointed out. Here is a comfortable inn (the Dog i'th' Wall) well situated, to afford refreshment and accommodation to the holiday visitors. The population of the village is about 1100.

LYMM, or Lymme, is a village and parish in the hundred of Bucklow, about five miles east from Warrington, on the Knutsford road. The church, of which the Rev. Bertie E. Johnson is the rector, is of great antiquity, dedicated to the Virgin, and consists of a nave, chancel, and side aisles, with a strong tower: there are two chancels, one belonging to the Domvilles, the other to the Warburtons. The steeple was rebuilt in 1521. But few monuments adorn this church, and none of great antiquity or possessing much interest. The edifice stands upon elevated ground, and is the best point from which the scenery of the neighbourhood can be contemplated; which is varied, picturesque, and heightened in beauty by several fine falls of water, from an extensive mill dam, into a romantic vale, where they join the stream of the Dane. This mill was some time ago used for splitting iron. Lymm hall, commandingly situated, the seat of Robert Taylor, Esq. is a building of considerable antiquity, partially moated. The bay windows of the principal entrance room have some fine specimens of stained glass. Opposite the gates is the ancient cross, the lower steps of which are cut in the solid rock. Dane bank, formerly the residence of the Halsteads, is now the seat of James Wylde, Esq. Oughtrington hall, the seat of Trafford Trafford, Esq. is a handsome building, commanding fine prospects of the country round. This is a very ancient family, and one of those who opposed themselves to an invasion of the Normans. There is a free grammar school here, endowed in 1698, by Sir George Warburton, and William Domville, Esq. The school house, which is of stone, is near to the church. There is also an establishment for clothing the poor, which is endowed with about £40. per annum, and is divided every new year's day. The tithes of the parish are taken generally, and equally divided by the two rectors, who perform divine service alternately. The parish of Lymm includes the hamlets of Brown Edge, Heatley, Oughtrington, Reddish, and Statham, containing a population of about 2,100 persons.

PARTINGTON is a small township and village, in the same parish and hundred as Altrincham, about four miles N. W. from that town. This township was anciently of the fee of the barony of Dunham Massey, and it is now vested in the Earl of Stamford. Partington hall is now occupied as a farm house. The only place of worship here is a meeting-house for dissenters. Partington is but of little consequence in the way of trade, and the only manufactory established in it is that for paper, by Messrs. James Greaves & Co. at Mill bank. The population is about 450.

TIMPERLEY is a township in the same parish and hundred as Partington, about eight miles and a half N. N. W. from Knutsford, and is also united to the Dunham estates. Timperley hall, the residence of Joseph Sutton, Esq. is a handsome modern brick building, in a very pleasant situation. AGDEN, a part of this township, is about three miles distant, where is the hall, which is now going fast to decay. The township of Timperley contains about 700 inhabitants.

WARBURTON, a parish and village in the hundred of Bucklow, is about nine and a half miles N. W. from Knutsford and six and a half from Warrington. The estates are possessed by the Warburtons, who hold courts leet and baron for the manor; the advowson of the church is also vested in the same family. Near the bank of the river Mersey stands the church, which consists of a brick tower at the west end, and a nave, chancel, and side aisles; parts of the edifice bear marks of considerable antiquity, but the period in which it was erected does not appear; it is supposed to have existed so long since as the priory of Warburton, the history of which has nearly passed away, and its site not to be distinguished. About ten years since three stone coffins, lying on the north side of the church, were examined, and in one was found a remarkably large human skeleton. The coffins bore undoubted marks of great age, and were supposed to contain the remains of some of the canons of the former monastic establishment. The Rev. Edward Lloyd is the present incumbent. The population of Warburton parish, in 1821, was somewhat under 600.

POST OFFICE, New-street, ALTRINCHAM, William Knowles, Post Master.—The KNUTSFORD mail is despatched at nine in the evening, meeting the LONDON and BIRMINGHAM mails, and arrives at five in the morning.—The MANCHESTER mail is despatched at five in the morning, and arrives at nine in the evening.—A foot post, from WARRINGTON to LYMM, every morning (Sunday and Tuesday excepted), and returns at twelve at noon.—Office hours from seven in the morning until half-past eight in the evening.

CHEADLE, NORTHEN, & NEIGHBOURHOOD.

CHEADLE, or Cheadle Bulkeley, is a village and township in the hundred of Macclesfield, six miles south of Manchester and three west from Stockport. The Bulkeleys held a portion of the manor for many generations, and, about 1558, Sir Richard Bulkeley, Knight, obtained entire possession of it by his marriage with the daughter of Sir John Savage. In 1756 the manor was sold to the Rev. Thos. Egerton, of Cheadle, who devised it to the Beresfords ; and in 1806 part was conveyed to the Worthington family, of Ringway, whose trustees hold a court on the 25th October for Cheadle Bulkeley, and Lloyd Hesketh Bamford Hesketh, Esq. on the 24th of June as lord of the manor for Cheadle Hulme and Cheadle Mosely. The church of Cheadle consists of a nave, chancel, and side aisles, with a tower, containing six bells : in the north aisle is the Cheadle Mosely chancel, and in the south aisle the Hondfurd chancel. The monuments are but few in number, those only worthy of notice are to the Brereton and Bulkeley families : the dates of these are 1673 and 1678, but the period when this church was erected does not appear. The Rev. Henry Delves Broughton is the rector and patron, and the Rev. Matthew Dunn the present curate. Here is also a Wesleyan chapel. A school was founded here by John Robinson, for the education of eight children. John Gatley, of Manchester, left £100. to the establishment, which now gives instruction to fourteen children of Cheadle Bulkeley, Cheadle Hulme and Cheadle Mosely. Upon the Mersey are some corn mills, and there are in the township some print and bleaching works. The country, although flat round here, is fertile and pleasing. Cheadle parish embraces the townships of

CHESTER,

AND THE PARISHES OF ECCLESTON AND CHRISTLETON.

CHESTER is an ancient, respectable & wealthy city, bishop's see, and seaport, giving name to the county in which it is situated, and which is styled "the county of the city of Chester." It is, by the nearest route, 182 miles from London & 39 from Manchester. Although in size and population it cannot rank with many other cities of England, yet, in point of antiquity, local interest, and objects claiming attention from the curious and refined, it is parallel with most, and superior to many. Palin's MS. says, "the city of Chester, noted of all writers for a place of great antiquity, honour and reputation, was first built by Lyl, king of the Britons, anno ante Christo 917, at which time Jehosaphat and Ahab governed Israel and Judah : it was afterwards repaired by Julius Cæsar, at which time the houses were built in form of castles, and were garrisoned by Roman legions." Those writers, therefore, who attribute its foundation to the Romans, have been evidently misled by the many vestiges still remaining of buildings, &c. created by these invaders, without carrying their researches to a more remote period. The city is of a square form, (the figure of the Roman camps) with four elegant gates, facing the cardinal points, four principal streets, and a variety of smaller ones crossing others at right angles, dividing the whole into squares. The carriages are driven far below the level of the kitchens, on a line with ranges of shops, over which passengers walk, in galleries, called the Rows—in the Rows are likewise ranges of shops, with steps into the streets. The walls are considered the only entire specimen of ancient fortification in the kingdom, and form a fashionable promenade. The gates are of modern erection ; Bridge-gate and Water-gate were built by the citizens—Castle-gate by Richard, late Earl Grosvenor—and North-gate, in 1811, by Robert, the present Earl. The old bridge is an inconvenient one, of seven arches, thrown over the Dee, which is navigable at high spring tides for vessels of 300 tons ; near to this bridge is the tower called the "Water Tower." A new stone bridge, of 200 feet span, is now constructing from the design of Mr. Harrison, to be executed by Mr. Trubshaw.

The leading objects of curiosity are the city walls, which are nearly two miles round, the castle, the cathedral, St. John's church, the Roman Hypocaust under the Feathers Inn, &c. The cathedral, once a monastery, is an antique building of the 10th and 16th centuries, and has lately been thoroughly repaired. To describe or even enumerate the many beautiful specimens of antique architecture, and other objects worthy of inspection, contained in this venerable church, would much exceed the limits appropriated to this city. The points of attraction, however, here noticed, will perhaps be the means of leading the visiter to other beauties not equally prominent. The length of the cathedral, from east to west, is 349 feet, and the width, including the side aisles, 75 feet. The nave is divided from the choir by a handsome Gothic screen, of the workmanship of the 14th century; above which is a very old organ, supposed to have been built by the celebrated Smith. The choir is deservedly admired by every beholder; the spiral tabernacle work highly enriched, the stalls of the officiating dignitaries, the vicars choral, &c. probably are not equalled in elaborate workmanship by any in the empire. The bishop's throne, which is on the south side of the choir, is one of the most splendid specimens of early Gothic architecture extant. The great western doorway is only to be seen to be admired; and the elegant vestibule to the chapter-house, with its beautifully groined roof and clustered pillars, is in as fresh and perfect a state as if the chisel had just finished its admirable work, although it was produced in the 12th century. Many are the monuments that impart at once ornament and solemnity to this sacred pile; yet there are but few to be seen of great antiquity, or remarkable in other respects. Dr. Blomfield is the bishop of the diocese. The parish churches are nine in number, viz. St. Oswald, St. Olave, St. Michael, St. Bridget, St. Peter, the Holy Trinity, St. Martin, St. Mary, and St. John the Baptist, which last named invites the particular notice of the lover of ancient building. It is asserted to be the only perfect specimen of the later Saxon architecture in this kingdom; and supposed to have been erected in the year 689. That part of the church now in ruins is of a most imposing character, and gives to the whole building a most venerable and interesting appearance. It is beautifully situated near to the river Dee, and the church yard commands extensive views of the fine meadows along its banks, while the Shropshire hills, and the promontary of Beeston Castle, give interesting objects in the perspective scenery. The view from the North-gate to the Water Tower is rich and variegated. In St. John's church-yard is an anchorite's cell, in which it is said Harold ended his days, after the battle of Hastings. The chapels here are for Methodists, Independents, Lady Huntingdon's followers, Roman Catholics, and an Unitarian meeting-house.

The government of this city is vested in a mayor, twenty-four aldermen, and forty common councilmen. The first name handed down of the person who bore the honourable office of mayor was Walter Lynnett, Knight, or, as he has been called in record, Walter of Coventry: this was in the 26th of Henry III, 1257, but it is contended that a mayor had been ordained a century before. Before the city had any charters they used certain liberties by prescription, and enjoyed a Guild Mercatory, i. e. a brotherhood of merchants; the members of which society alone could hold trade or traffic within the city, to the exclusion of others who did not belong to such guild. The keepers of the guild, or leave-lookers, were head and chief of the citizens, before a mayor was ordained, and they still are reputed the head of the forty or common council. The charter by which the corporate body is to this day constituted was granted by Henry VIII. Chester city returns two members to parliament—its present representatives are Viscount Belgrave and the Hon. Robert Grosvenor. The right of voting is in the resident freemen who have been residing in the city not less than twelve months; the number is about 1600, and the sheriffs are the returning officers.

At the castle is a tower, ascribed to Julius Cæsar; a new built stately hall, where the palatine courts and sessions are held, offices for the records, a prison for the county, an armory for 30,000 men, and barracks. The great sessions are held twice a year, at which the mayor presides, assisted by the recorder; and the court has all the powers of the county courts of assize. There are likewise an infirmary, founded in 1760, and supported by voluntary contributions, having a funded property of about £20,000.; a blue-coat hospital, exchange, subscription news-room, two libraries, and theatre. Horse races are held annually, in the first week of May, on the Rooddee, a beautiful meadow of about 80 acres, of which the city wall commands a full view. On the banks of the Nantwich canal a shot tower and lead manufactory, pyrolignous acid works, and a cotton mill are established. Ship building is carried on extensively. There are also a number of roperies, and manufactures of fringe, whips, thread, gloves, tobacco, leather, &c. There are likewise some productive stone quarries worked here. Upon the Ellesmere canal a packet boat affords a cheap and pleasant conveyance to Liverpool.

Chester is memorable for a siege of twenty weeks, which it sustained against the parliamentary army, commanded by Sir Wm. Brereton; and it did not then surrender until every hope of relief was lost, and the garrison literally starved out. The governor was Lery Byron, the ancestor of the present Lord Byron.

There are two weekly newspapers published in Chester, viz. the Courant, by Mrs. Margaret Monk, on Tuesday, and the Chronicle, by Mr. John Fletcher, on Friday.—Market days are Wednesday & Saturday. Fairs are the last Thursday in February, July 5th, and October 10th; the two latter last a fortnight each, for the sale of all sorts of shop goods, &c. The population of Chester, by the last parliamentary returns, was males 8,975, females 10,974, total, 19,949 inhabitants.

EATON HALL, the splendid and noble mansion of the Right Hon. the Earl Grosvenor, is seated in a beautiful park, three miles from Chester, on the left of the road to Shrewsbury. The present magnificent edifice is erected upon the site of the old hall (which has been pulled down about fifteen years), and is a splendid specimen of the ornamented Gothic. The entrance on the east side is approached by an extremely wide flight of steps, to an extensive terrace 350 feet in length; another flight of steps, under ornamented arches, lead to the house, the saloon of which is entered through folding doors of costly stained glass. The entrance to the west front is under a lofty portico, vaulted and profusely enriched with carved work. The great hall is vaulted, large and lofty, nearly square, and its pavement of rich coloured variegated marble. But humble and imperfect justice can be done in describing the richness, taste, and value of the decorations which display themselves in the interior of this princely residence. The paintings are of the first merit, and the library is stored with the most rare gems of early and modern literature. The bed chambers, and the dining and drawing rooms are finished and furnished in a style of the most sumptuous magnificence; dead and burnished gold ornaments heightening the brilliant effect, and at once dazzling, surprising, and gratifying the privileged visiter. The stables, which form a large quadrangle on the north side, have been erected in the style of architecture of Edward III, without any regard to expence, and are cut off from the house by a small shrubbery. In 1821-2 the north and south wings were built, and a Gothic temple erected at the south end of the terrace, for the reception of a Roman altar, which was discovered in 1821, in Great Boughton, near Chester. The higher parts of the park afford some delightful views of romantic and rich scenery; indeed, the situation of this seat, the general beauty of the grounds, which have been perfected by the united powers of labour and art, render it well deserving of being styled the Elysium of the "VALE ROYAL OF ENGLAND."

ECCLESTON is a beautiful and interesting little village, about two miles from Chester, and is much resorted to by the inhabitants of that city and strangers, from its vicinity to Eaton house. All the houses in Eccleston have a neat and unostentatious appearance, being uniformly built or painted in the Gothic style. About 400 inhabitants form the population of Eccleston parish, 300 of whom are of the village.

CHRISTLETON is a parish and small village in the lower division of the hundred of Broxton, about two miles from Chester. The manor is vested in John Brockwood, Esq. Christleton hall is a modern built house, very delightfully situated; it was erected by Robert Townshend, Esq. and is now the seat of Townshend Ince, Esq. The church is a very ancient building, and is said to have existed at the conquest; it has a nave, chancel, and side aisles: the tower is of stone, and contains six bells. The present rector is the Rev. Griffith Lloyd, A. M. In 1800 a school house was built here, principally at the expense of John Higuett, Esq. for the education of poor children of Christleton and Littleton. The entire parish contained, in 1821, 954 inhabitants, 701 of which number being resident in the village.

CONGLETON,

AND THE VILLAGES OF ASTBURY, BOSLEY, BRERETON, BUGLAWTON, GAWSWORTH, MORETON, SMALLWOOD, &c.

CONGLETON, a market and borough town, but not enjoying the elective franchise; is 161 miles from London, 55 from Birmingham, 43 from Liverpool, 31 from Chester, 24 from Manchester, and 8 from Macclesfield. It is situated in a highly interesting part of the county, on its eastern side, upon the south of the river Dane, in the parish of Astbury, in the hundred of Northwich, and in the diocese of Chester. It has a charter of incorporation, granted by Henry de Lacy in 1310, and is governed by a mayor, eight aldermen, sixteen common councilmen, a recorder, town clerk, and other inferior officers. The peculiar privileges enjoyed by the burgesses of Congleton, are exemption from attending as jurymen at Chester and Knutsford, and from the payment of tolls in all the market towns in the duchy of Lancaster. Quarter sessions are held for the borough, and two courts leet; one in July, called the mayor's court, and one at Martinmas, when the officers for the ensuing year are elected. Here is also a court of pleas, which has jurisdiction in civil cases to an unlimited amount, for all debts contracted within the borough. In 1637 the celebrated president Bradshaw served the office of mayor of Congleton. Amongst the ancient records is the curious anecdotal one regarding the strong predilection of the people of this borough for bear-baiting. One of these animals, a favourite one, which had long contributed to their enjoyment, dying at a period when their finances were exceedingly low, it is stated, in the accounts of the town for the year 1622, that the townsmen appropriated money which had been saved to purchase a new church bible to the purpose of supplying the place of their deceased ursa major; which circumstance has, to this day, been taken up by the malignant against the good people of Congleton, in the expression that "they will sell their bible to buy a bear;" the inhabitants, however, have the good humour and sense to laugh at the application, and even themselves facetiously style their borough "Bear town." The trade of this place is very considerable in the manufacture of silk, silk throwing, cotton spinning, &c. The first silk mill was established here in 1754, and there are now upwards of forty—many upon a large scale. The ribbon trade is also a branch of consequence in the town. A canal is now cutting, which will form a junction between the Staffordshire and Peak Forest canals, at Whaley, about two miles and a half distant. The church, which is only a chapel of ease to the mother church at Astbury, stands on the south side of the town, in a high situation, and is, in outward appearance, rather mean than otherwise, but is well finished and neat in the interior. The incumbent is the Rev. Samuel Williamson, and the curate the Rev. Charles Bishop Hodges: the curacy is in the gift of the mayor and corporation. Here are also methodist, calvinistic, and unitarian chapels; to each of which is a Sunday school. The free grammar school, founded by the corporation in the sixteenth century, is free to the sons of the burgesses only, of which the Rev. Edw. Wilson is master.

The appearance of the town is clean and respectable, and that of the surrounding country very pleasing; gradually rising into picturesque hills, and sinking into fertile valleys. The highest hills are the barren ridges of the mole, cop, and cloud, which form the back ground of the scene, at the distance of about four miles eastward, constituting part of the Staffordshire moor-lands. There is a delightful prospect from either Daisy-bank or the Hill-field, on the north of the town; commanding at one view the grounds beneath, the church on an eminence, the high grounds behind, and the hills of Biddulph, near Congleton edge mole, in the perspective. The principal seats of note in this neighbourhood are Hulmewalfield, the seat of Lady Warburton, and Eaton Hall, the seat of G. C. Antrobus, Esq. M. P. The market, which was chartered by Edward I. to Henry de Lacy, is held on Saturday. The fairs are the Thursday before Shrovetide, 12th of May, 10th of July, and 22nd of November, principally for the sale of cattle and Yorkshire woollen cloths. The population, in 1821, was 6,400, but the number of inhabitants has increased since that year; and it is estimated that more than 8,000 persons form the population at this period.

The village of ASTBURY, or Newbold Astbury, is situated about one mile from Congleton, on the Manchester road. It is a parish, and embraces the townships of Buglawton, Congleton, Davenport, Eaton, Hulmewalfield, Great Moreton, Odd Rode, Radnor, Smallwood and Somerford Booths. It is partly in the hundred of Macclesfield, and partly in that of Northwich. In the reign of Edward III. the Venables family claimed the manor of Astbury, and through many descendants it became vested in Sir John Grey Egerton, who holds a court for it.—Wall Hill Hall, now a farm house, was formerly the seat of a branch of the Rode family. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is one of the handsomest country churches in this county, and although much defaced and despoiled in the time of the civil wars, (when a beautiful organ was demolished) is still an object of attraction and well worth inspection. The building is of Gothic construction, and consists of a nave, chancel, and side aisles, with porches on the west and south sides; pointed arches, springing from clustered pillars, divide the nave from the aisles, and similar arches separate the private chancels from the chancel; the east window is highly finished, and some fine specimens of ancient stained glass adorn this edifice. The roofing of the church is of oak, beautifully carved; screens of the like material and workmanship divide the chancel from the nave; and in a rood-loft, on the west side, are oak stalls, &c. The name of Richard Lownes, carpenter, and the figures 1616 and 1617, appear in the body of the church. The tower is crowned with an elegant spire, indeed the whole building must have been, in its pristine state, most elaborate and tasteful. There are several very ancient mural and other monuments in good preservation, with legible inscriptions. The tithes of the whole parish are vested in the rector. Newbold Astbury by itself contains about 600 inhabitants, and the whole parish, embracing the several townships, in 1821, contained, including Astbury village, about 10,400 persons.

BOSLEY is a chapelry in the parish of Prestbury, and hundred of Macclesfield, about five miles E. N. E. from Congleton. It was anciently called Lea Boseley, and the manor was vested in the Earl of Salisbury by royal grant, dated 1337: it is now, along with Gaws-worth, the property of the Earl of Harrington. The chapel of Bosley is built of brick, with an ancient tower. The vicar of Prestbury is the patron; the registers commencing in 1728. The number of inhabitants, in 1821, was 546.

BRERETON is a parish in the hundred of Northwich, about six miles east of Middlewich, and three north of Sandbach. The hall of Brereton is a noble mansion of brick, erected by Sir Wm. Brereton, and has the date 1577 in several of the windows. In 1817 some of the richly stained glass windows were taken to Liverpool for the convenience of sale. A court leet and court baron is held at Brereton, including Smethwick. The church is dedicated to St. Oswald, and was formerly dependent upon Astbury, but made parochial in the time of Richard I. The building is of stone, of the pointed Gothic style, with oaken roof richly carved: it contains a nave, chancel, side aisles, and a tower with five bells, and the interior is adorned with several elegant monuments. The number of inhabitants, in 1821, was 624.

BUGLAWTON is a township in the parish of Astbury, and in the hundred of Northwich, about two miles from Congleton. The manorial rights are enjoyed by Wilbraham Egerton, Esq. M.P. In this township is a spring containing sulphur, a small quantity of Epsom salts, and calcareous earth, which has been found beneficial in scorbutic cases. The principal trade of the place is in the manufacture of silk in its various ways, which gives employment to a great number of the inhabitants. The population is about 1000.

GAWSWORTH is a parish in the hundred of Macclesfield, about three miles south-west from that town, on the side of the road to Congleton. The township is built in a very straggling manner, but the situation is picturesque. The church, which is a rectory, is of considerable antiquity, dedicated to St. Oswald, and consists of a nave and chancel, the windows containing some fine remains of stained glass. The tower, which is ornamented with finely sculptured pinnacles, contains a ring of five bells, and the interior of the church is embellished with some fine monuments of the 17th century, principally to the Fitton family. The old hall of Gawsorth is a short distance from the church, in the grounds of which is a memorial to Mr. Samuel Johnson, the author of the play of "Hurlo-thrumbo," acted at the Haymarket theatre in 1722. The date of the inscription is "May 5, A. D. MDCCCLXXIII, aged 82." The last built hall of Gawsorth was erected by Lord Mohun; it is of brick, very plain in its design, and has occasionally been the residence of Lord Harrington. The rectory house is a very ancient mansion, the entrance hall of which is truly singular. The population of this township, in 1821, was about 800.

MORETON, Moreton-cum-Alcumlow, or Great Moreton, is a very small township in the parish of Astbury, and hundred of Northwich, about two miles and a half from Congleton. Great Moreton once formed part of the Kinderton barony; the manor is now vested in James Ackers, Esq. but no court is held. Great Moreton Hall is a large ancient building of timber and plaster. The hamlet of ALCUMLOW is attached to this township, and is held, by the same title as Astbury, by the proprietor, Sir J. G. Egerton, Bart. The joint population is under 200.

SMALLWOOD is a township in the parish of Astbury, and hundred of Northwich, about three miles south-east of Sandbach, and its present possessors are the same as of Moreton. In the township is Overton Hall, belonging to the masters and fellows of Caius College, Cambridge, now occupied as a farm house. No court has been held for the manor for some years. The number of inhabitants is about 600.

FRODSHAM, OVERTON & NEIGHBOURHOODS.

FRODSHAM is a small market town, giving name to a parish, in the hundred of Eddisbury, 10 miles from Chester and 29 from Manchester. It is situated upon an eminence near to the confluence of the rivers Weaver and Mersey, and consists of a street, wide and open, about a mile in length, crossed by another which leads to the church. This edifice, which is in the township of Overton, stands on very elevated ground, and is a vicarage; it is dedicated to St.
Lawrence; and the living is in the gift of the fellows of Christ church, Oxford. The incumbent is the Rev. John Fanshawe, and the present curate is the Rev. John Mure Shakespeare. The church contains a nave, chancels, and side aisles, and in the tower is a peal of six bells. In the parish are also calvinistic and Wesleyan chapels. Courts leet and baron are held here in the spring and autumn, before Daniel Ashley, Esq. steward, on behalf of the Marquis of Cholmondley, who is lord of the manor. The principal production of trade in this place is salt;
and there is a large range of flour mills, called the Sutton mills; some few quarries of coarse red stone are also worked here, but not to much extent. Near the church is a free grammar school, of which Mr.
William Scarlet Littler is the master. Frodsham, in common with many other towns in this county, has the advantage of being placed amidst beautiful scenery and fertile plains: the natural charms in its vicinity include the windings of the rivers Mersey and Weaver, which quietly glide through rich meadows and valleys, until the eye, in following their course, rests upon the more distant parts of Lancashire. Several elegant and rural seats are in the immediate neighbourhood, among which may be noticed Park place, the residence of Daniel Ashley, Esq.; Peel hall, the seat of Samuel Plumb, Esq.; and the mansions of Thomas Ashton, Esq. and Lieut.-Col. Baldwin, at Newton. Here are two good inns, the "Bear's Paw" and the "King's Head," where respectable and comfortable accommodation for travellers is met with.

The weekly market is on Thursday, and the fairs are the 15th May and 21st August. The population of the whole parish, in 1821, was 5451, of which number 2529 were resident in the township and lordship of Frodsham.

OVERTON is an elevated ridge of land above Frods-ham, and is only to be noticed as containing in its township the parish church. Agriculture is the prevailing occupation of the inhabitants, and their number is included with Frodsham.

POST OFFICE, FRODSHAM, Ellen Fanall, Post Mistress.—The mail from LIVERPOOL and MAN-CHESTER arrives at six in the morning and is despatched at half-past six in the evening.

KNUTSFORD,

MOBBERLEY, ROSTHERN, OLLERTON, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

KNUTSFORD, a market town, is 176 miles from London, 25 from Chester, and 15 from Manchester. It is the principal town in the hundred of Bucklow, and is seated in a fertile part of the county, on the great road between London and Liverpool. This town is undoubtedly one of great antiquity, and the derivation of its name is traced to the circumstance of king Canute having crossed the brook Birken with his army, after a victory; hence it was called "Canute's ford," and afterwards "Knutsford." It is divided into two parts (Over and Nether Knutsford) by the brook Birken, which rises about half a mile south of the town, passes under the turnpike road, and falls into Tatton-mere a short distance below. The principal business of this town is that of handicraft trades, obtaining much of its support from the opulent gentry residing in the neighbourhood, who are numerous. The annual races, which are in July, also contribute both to the amusement and emolument of the inhabitants; and at that time the town is much enlivened by the presence of a great number of persons of rank and fashion. There is a handsome church, a modern structure of stone and brick, with a square tower, containing six bells and a clock: the patronage is in Peter Legh, Esq. and Ralph Leicester, Esq. There are also three meeting houses for dissenters, and two charity schools. Here is also a large and convenient prison for the county, in the front of which is a beautiful and commodious sessions house, where the sessions are held on 11th July and 10th October. The market day is on Saturday, which is not much frequented, and the fairs are held on the 23d April, Whit-Tuesday, and the 8th of November, chiefly for horses and cattle. The population is upwards of 2000.

MOBBERLEY is a parish and township about 3 miles north-east of Knutsford, in the same hundred as that town. About 1206 Patrick de Mobberley founded a small priory of the order of St. Augustine, in honour of the Virgin and St. Wilfred, no traces of which now remain. The church, which is dedicated to St. Wilfred, consists of a nave, chancel, and side aisles, with a tower, containing six bells. The chancel is worthy inspection by the curious in church architecture; it contains a rood loft, a relic closet, two stalls for the priests, and a piscina. In the windows are some remains of very ancient inscriptions, and in the church are many memorials to the several families who heretofore possessed the lands of Mobberley. The steeple, it appears, was built and the church repaired in 1533, but its original structure is supposed to be coeval with the priory; it has also lately undergone some repairs. The parish tythes are vested in the rector, who is the Rev. J. H. Mallory. In 1669 a free grammar school was founded here by the Rev. William Griffiths, who endowed it with the interest of £200. The manorial rights are vested in Lawrence Wright, Esq. Ralph Leicester, Esq. and the present rector. Here is a large cotton factory for doubling fine yarn. The population of the parish is about 1200.

ROSTHERN, or Rosthorne, is a parish and village three miles and a half north of Knutsford and twelve from Manchester. The vicinity of this village is truly delightful, and the aspect of the village itself is most picturesque and pleasing, being ornamented by a beautiful sheet of water, called Rosthern-mere, upon the banks of which stands the venerable church. It is dedicated to St. Mary, and is ascertained to have existed long prior to 1188: the steeple, which is of stone, was erected in 1538, and the registers commence in 1599. Some monuments, in good preservation, of the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries, add an interest to the interior of this edifice. Besides the church here are two beautiful chapels under the establishment, at HIGH LEGH, the property of George J. Legh, Esq. and Egerton Legh, Esq. Tatton park, the seat of Wilbraham Egerton, Esq. M. P. is of great extent, and one of the largest in England. The mansion is a very handsome stone building, the views from which are extensive and luxuriant. The owner of this valuable property is lord of the entire manor of Rosthern, and holds a court for it. In this township is BUCKLOW HILL, which gives name to the hundred.

HOO GREEN, a short distance from this place, is much resorted to by the gentry of the neighbourhood; and on Fridays a meeting of the magistrates takes place here, which circumstance, joined with the attendance of the members of a bowling club, composed of the leading gentlemen of the county, gives this little place a high degree of consequence, which its beautiful situation so well entitles it to. The bowling ground is at the Horse and Jockey inn. The parish of Rosthern contains eight townships and two chapelries, and, in 1821, 3,791 inhabitants, about 400 being resident in the village.

OLLERTON, or Owlerton, is a small township in the parish of Knutsford, three miles south-east from that town, and in the same proprietary as that of Rosthern, &c. With the exception of the beauties of nature, and the high state of cultivation which surrounds this place, it is unimportant, and to the man of business of but very little consequence. The number of inhabitants is about 300.

MACCLESFIELD,

AND THE VILLAGES OF BOLLINGTON, BUTLEY, HURDSFIELD, PRESTBURY, RAINOW, SUTTON, AND WINCLE.

MACCLESFIELD is a considerable corporate town, situated in the Prestbury division of the hundred of Macclesfield, in the county of Chester: it is 167 miles from London, 13 from Leek, 12 from Stockport and Knutsford, and 8 from Congleton. It was incorporated by charter granted by Prince Edward in 1261,
and is governed by a mayor and twenty-four aldermen,
of whom, including the mayor, 4 are justices, annually elected by the freemen of the borough. There is a court leet for the hundred and forest of Macclesfield held here. The hundred division includes Stockport and several other large towns. There is also a court of record for the hundred and forest of Macclesfield, for the trial of civil causes; these causes are tried twice a year, in the town hall, before John Gamaliel Lloyd, Esq. of Stratford-upon-Avon, the steward of the hundred: the clerk of the court is Mr. D. Browne, who is appointed by the Earl of Derby, the hereditary steward of the manor. By virtue of his office Mr.
Browne is keeper of the copyhold court rolls of the manor, which are in good preservation as far back as Edward III: there is also a court for the passing of surrenders of copyhold tenements, held every Monday before the deputy steward, Mr. John Clulow. Mr.
Browne appoints his own deputies, and also the bailiff of the courts. This town is a parochial chapelry under Prestbury, the curate is appointed by the mayor, with the sanction of the Bishop of Chester: the present curate of the parochial chapel or old church, is the Rev. Lawrence Heapy, M. A. The Rev. William C. Cruttenden, M. A. is the minister of the new church, which was built in 1774, at the expence of the late Charles Roe, Esq. The town contains also many other places of worship for the different denominations of dissenters and methodists, and a chapel for Roman catholics. The principal trade of the place was formerly the manufacture of twist buttons, but this has been superseded by the manufacture of silk in its various textures; and the magnitude and number of the factories exhibit the extent to which this important and beautiful branch of manufacture is carried on in this town; there are also several cotton factories here. The river Jordan or Bollin runs through the lower part of the town, and though the stream is inconsiderable, it turns several mills. A canal is now being cut from the Peak Forest canal in Marple, to join the canal from the Trent to the Mersey at Harding Wood Cork, near Talk-o'-th-hill, in Staffordshire, and it will pass close to the town. There is here a grammar school, founded by king Edward VI. the head master of which is the Rev. D. Davies, D. D. Mr. D.

Browne is the agent. Here also are a national school and several extensive Sunday schools, supported by donations and subscriptions, and three alms-houses, endowed by Mr. Stanley, for the reception of three poor widows. Among the objects of interest in this town the antiquarian will not overlook the "Savage Chapel," adjoining the old church. In this chapel were deposited the remains of the Rt. Hon. Thomas Earl Rivers, Viscount Colchester, of Rock Savage, in Cheshire, buried 14th Oct. 1694: and Sir Peter Legh, who was slain in the battle of Agincourt, was also buried in this town. Neither will "Bate Hall," in Chestergate, escape the exploring eye of the antiquary; it is a fragment of the mansion once occupied by Lord Courtown, but is now a public house! On entering the old church the visitor will be gratified by a fine modern painted window, which has been recently finished at the cost of £500. This edifice was founded by Edward I. and Eleanor, his queen, in 1279, and it was nearly rebuilt in 1740. The newly erected town hall merits also the notice of the stranger; the assembly and concert room within it, is highly creditable to the taste and public spiritedness of the town: the stained glass lights in the ceiling have a novel and beautiful effect. There are several gentlemen's seats within a few miles of the town which possess considerable attractions, particularly that of Lyme hall and park, the seat of Thomas Leigh, Esq. M. P. for Newton; and the park and pleasure grounds of John Ryle, Esq. the banker, though on a smaller scale, being contiguous to the town, deserve to be noticed for the taste with which they are laid out, and the natural beauties they display.

The neighbourhood of Macclesfield yields abundance of coal, slate and stone. The appearance of the country around Macclesfield is agricultural, and the chain of lofty hills to the north and east give beauty and even grandeur to the situation of the town. The views from those eminences are commanding and picturesque, extending to North Wales, and, on a very clear day, even the town of Manchester may be discerned.

Two newspapers are published in Macclesfield every Saturday morning, one called the "Macclesfield Courier," and the other the "Macclesfield Herald."—Market days are Tuesday and Saturday; and there are five fairs in the year, viz. May 6th, June 22nd, July 11th, Oct 6th, and Nov. 11th, for cattle, wool, cloth, and various commodities.—The population has considerably augmented since the census of 1821, in which year it amounted to 17,746, consisting of 8,421 males, and 9,325 females.

BOLLINGTON is a township in the parish of Prestbury and hundred of Macclesfield, about two miles north from that town, and is included in the manor of Macclesfield forest: the landowners are copyholders from the crown. There are some collieries in this township; but the principal portion of the land is appropriated to agriculture, in which pursuit the inhabitants are for the most part engaged: the number is about 1700.

BUTLEY, Butleigh, or Butley-cum-Newton, is a small township in the same parish and hundred as Bollington, and is about three miles N. W. from Macclesfield. Ulric, a Saxon, possessed estates in this township; and before 1267 the Pigots had possession of the manor, which is now enjoyed by R. C. Legh, Esq. who holds a court leet and baron for it. Butleigh, it is asserted, was one of the spots inhabited by those ancient persons connected with druidical superstition: and this assertion is supported by the interesting and minute researches of a gentleman of this neighbourhood highly talented. He says, "Some years ago were discovered, in a field called the Bleaklets, several ancient tumuli or barrows, in which were found two urns, of coarse materials. The contents of one had been bones, ashes, earth, oak leaves, and the shells of acorns, the kernel being decayed, but the leaves were for the most part fresh, and in colour of the autumnal yellow, or feuille morte." Other tumuli have been discovered in an adjoining field, tending to confirm the conjectures alluded to. Thomas Newton, the celebrated latin poet was born here. NEWTON, which is connected with Butley, contained once a chapel. The number of inhabitants, in 1821, in Butley was about 600 and in Newton about 100.

HURDSFIELD is a township in the same parish and hundred, about two miles E. N. E. from the town of Macclesfield. In this township is Swanscoe Park, formerly belonging to the Derby family, as an appendage to the stewardship of the forest: Mr. T. Ward is now the proprietor of the ground, and there are but few remains of the old park wall. Almost all the land is copyhold. Some respectable silk works are established in this township. The number of inhabitants is about 1000.

PRESTBURY, although so inconsiderable a village in point of size, gives name to one of the largest parishes in the county of Chester, it is pleasantly situated about three miles N. W. from Macclesfield. The manor of Prestbury was at one time possessed by the Earls of Chester; and in the time of Elizabeth the Leighs of Adlington became the proprietors, and the manor and rectory have descended to their representative, Richard Legh, Esq. who holds a court leet and baron. The church is situated near to the bridge, at the north end of the street; it is dedicated to St. Peter, and consists of a nave, chancel, and side aisles, with a tower, containing six bells. Some parts of the building are of considerable antiquity, as may be seen from several of the monuments, which have legible inscriptions of the sixteenth century. The Rev. John Rowlls Brown, of Butley Hall, is the present vicar, and one of the magistrates for the county. A building, contiguous to the church, called the "Old Chapel," is the original and ancient mother church of the parish: it is now used as a day school, as well as a Sunday school. The Wesleyan methodists have a small chapel here, to which is attached a Sunday school, giving instruction to about 200 children of the neighbourhood. There are two fairs for cattle in the year, viz. on the 28th of April and 22nd of October. The parish of Prestbury contains thirty-three townships and chapelries, and, not including the town of Macclesfield, according to the census of 1821, 17,230 inhabitants, only about 500 of which number are resident in the village of Prestbury.

RAINOW is a chapelry in the parish of Prestbury, about three miles N. E. from Macclesfield. The village consists of about 300 houses, chiefly cottages, nearly the whole of them built of stone. The chapel of Rainow was rebuilt some years ago; and is in the patronage of the vicar of Prestbury. Salterford Chapel is also in this township, near Jenkins' Cross, and was built by subscription in 1739. In a secluded situation below this chapel is Salterford Hall; the Earl of Courtown, descendant from the Stopfords, is the present proprietor of the estate, and derives his title of Baron of Salterford therefrom. From Kerridge Hill the eye takes in the prominent features of the scenery around here, which is at once dreary and barren, abounding with inequalities of surface, deep vallies, and small streams. On the Bollington side of the hill is a large quarry of stone, flags and slate. It is supposed a small Roman station was in this township; certain it is the Roman road from Manchester to Buxton crossed it. It is recorded of this place that it gave birth to a female named Margaret Broadhurst, who lived to the extreme age of 140 years; and that a daughter was born to her when she was eighty years old. It is stated that she was buried at Prestbury in 1650, but the registers make no mention of the fact. This chapelry contained, in 1821, 1,530 inhabitants.

SUTTON DOWNES, or Sutton, is a township in the same parish as Rainow, about two miles S. E. from Macclesfield; owing its importance principally to its intimate connexion with that town, and to some respectable establishments for the manufacture of silk goods, which give employment to many of the inhabitants. It is included in the forest of Macclesfield, and was formerly two mesne manors, Sutton and Downes, and enjoyed by families of those names as early as 1153. In 1819 the property was vested in the Countess of Lucan, from whom it passed to her heirs. The Hall of Sutton is romantically situated about a mile from Macclesfield, at the juncture of two streams, which add to the waters of the Bollin, and is surrounded by some fine old timber. This ancient building is now used as a farm house; the hall of the fabric is still worthy inspection. The township of Sutton Downes contained, in 1821, about 3000 persons.

WINCLE, or Wincell, is a small chapelry in the same parish and hundred as Sutton, about six miles from Macclesfield. The chapel of Wincle is a fabric of stone, and the windows contain some ancient stained glass: the curacy is in the gift of the vicar of Prestbury. The number of inhabitants is under 500.

POST OFFICE, Market place, MACCLESFIELD, Harriet Bell, Post Mistress.—Letters for LONDON, and all parts of the south, must be in the office by a quarter before eleven in the morning; for MANCHESTER, LIVERPOOL, and all parts of the north and west, must be in the office by half-past one in the afternoon.—Letters from London and the south are delivered in Macclesfield at half-past two in the afternoon, from the north at twelve at noon, and from the west at eight in the morning.—Office hours from eight in the morning until nine in the evening. No attendance on Sundays during divine service.

MALPAS

IS a small market town and parish in the high division of the hundred of Broxton, about 15 miles from Chester, 45 from Manchester, and 169 from London. The derivation of its name is from Mulus Passus, signifying a bad way. It consists of four streets, forming a cross, the houses of which are, for the most part, mean and irregularly built, but the situation of the town is by no means unpleasant. It is a place of no manufacture, and very little trade, being surrounded by a great farming district. The church, which is a rectory, and dedicated to St. Oswald, is very ancient; situated upon an eminence, and is a fine specimen of the enriched Gothic, which prevailed in the reign of Henry VII: it has a nave, chancel, and side aisles, with a low tower, containing six bells. Several very ancient and elegant monuments, some of which well deserving attention, grace the interior of this fabric. From time immemorial the rectory has been divided into mediety, which is by tradition thus accounted for:—King James, travelling incog. stopped at the house now called the Red Lion Inn, which was frequented in the evenings by the most opulent and respectable part of the inhabitants, among whom were the rector and curate of the parish. The king entered familiarly into their conversation, and enjoyed the hilarity of the evening, to which he himself contributed in no small degree. When the company were about to separate, the curate (whether from the dictates of a pure and liberal spirit, or whether by his sagacity he had discovered about James some hidden mark of royalty,) proposed to the company, that they should confer upon the stranger some mark of their hospitality, such as, that he should be exempt from paying any part of the evening's expenses, and so forth; this was agreed to by the whole company except the rector, who insisted that every

tub should stand upon its own staves, with several other expressions, which convinced the monarch there were better rectors in the kingdom than the then one of Malpas, and laying by his disguise, he pronounced to them, as their King, that from thenceforth the curate should also be a rector, and enjoy the same privileges and emoluments. The chair in which the monarch sat was preserved, and is at this day placed in the hall of the said inn, and is a curious specimen of chair making in those days: the Scottish chair exhibited in Westminster abbey does not exceed this in strength or beauty. The Rev. Sir Philip Grey Egerton, Bart. is rector of the higher mediety, and the Rev. William Wickham Drake rector of the lower mediety. Besides the church here are an independent chapel, a free grammar school, a national school, and a charity, instituted by Mrs. Elizabeth Taylor in 1748, for the clothing of poor men and women: the rectors are the trustees. The manor is a joint lordship, two-thirds being in Thomas Tyrwhit Drake, Esq. and one-third in the Marquis of Cholmondley; the former of whom holds a court yearly; when two constables are chosen. From the higher parts of the town a fine prospect is obtained, taking in the vale of the Dee to the westward and north-west, the castle and park of the Marquis of Cholmondley, which is about four miles to the eastward, Iscoyd park, the seat of Miss Congreve, Edge hall, the seat of Thomas Crewe Dod, Esq. and the ancient remains of a baronial castle. The market day is Wednesday; and there are three fairs in the year, viz. April 5th, July 26th, and December 8th, for cattle, linen drapery, &c. This parish contains twenty-five townships, and, by the census of 1821, 4,917 persons, of which number 1,127 were inhabitants of the town of Malpas.

POST OFFICE, Receiving Houses at William Smith's, grocer, &c. Windmill-street, and at Mr. Hooper's, druggist, &c. Old hall street. The office is at WHITCHURCH (five miles from MALPAS), from which place the letters arrive, by a foot post, every evening at half-past seven, and are despatched the same evening at eight.

MARPLE, DISLEY, ROMILY, & NEIGHBOURHOODS.

MARPLE, about 5 miles E. S. E. from Stockport, is a chapelry in that parish, in the hundred of Macclesfield. Wyberslegh hall, now a farm house, is noted as the birth place of the notorious John Bradshaw, who was president of the high court of justice which condemned King Charles I. In the registers of Stockport church his birth is thus entered: "1602, John the Sonne of Henry Bradshaw, of Marple, was baptized the 10th of December." In the margin is the word traitor, with a line under it. It is said the following prophetic lines were written by this staunch adherent to republican principles, on a stone in the church-yard of Macclesfield :

My brother Henry must heir the land,
My brother Frank must be at his command :
While I, poor Jack, will do that
That all the world shall wonder at.

He died in 1659. The probate copy of his will, which may be seen yet at Marple hall, contains a bequest of £700. to purchase an annuity for maintaining a free school, at Marple ; the changes brought about with regard to property, at the restoration, prevented this provision from being available. Henry Bradshaw, who survived his brother, however, founded a small school here, and endowed it with the interest of £100. which has since been augmented by other benefactions. Marple hall is a noble old house, finely situated on the rise of a hill above the Goyt, and is the property, as well as Wyberslegh hall, of John Isherwood, Esq. a descendant of the before-named president Bradshaw. Here is a chapel of ease to Stockport, recently rebuilt of stone, with a tower, containing the old bells of Stockport church. The living is in the gift of the rector of Stockport, and the Rev. Robert Littler is the curate : the registers commenced in 1655. Besides the chapel of All Saints here is a Wesleyan methodist chapel. In the neighbourhood of this village is a noble aqueduct over the river Mersey, supported by three lofty arches. A branch from the Peak Forest canal, to Macclesfield, is in a state of forwardness, and will, when completed, be of material convenience to the neighbourhood. The spinning of cotton in the township is to some extent, and on the Goyt are DISLEY, or Distley, anciently spelt Dystelegh-Stanlegh, is a village and chapelry, in the hundred of Macclesfield and parish of Stockport, about six miles S.E. of the latter town. In the time of Edward I. Disley was held by Jordan de Dystelegh, and a hamlet on the north side by Grym de Stanlegh ; hence the compound modern appellation of Disley-Stanley. The situation of the village is very pleasant on the immediate borders of Derbyshire, upon the high road to Sheffield : a respectable and convenient inn and posting-house, the Ram's Head, is in the village. St. Mary's chapel here was rebuilt in 1558 ; it consists of a nave and chancel, with a stone tower, containing a ring of six bells ; the chancel and vestry are of brick : in the chancel window are some beautiful specimens of heraldic stained glass. The curate is the Rev. James Sumner. Lyme hall is the seat of Thomas Legh, Esq. Several cotton spinning and printing works are in the neighbourhood. It was in this village that the first examination took place of Mr. Edward Gibbon Wakefield, for the abduction of Miss Turner, daughter and heiress of Wm. Turner, Esq. of Shrigley hall, near Macclesfield, from a boarding school at Liverpool, on the 7th March, 1826. In 1821 the number of inhabitants in this chapelry was about 1,500.

ROMILY is a township and village, about four miles east of Stockport, in that parish, situated on the hills bordering on the neighbouring county of Derby.—CHADKIRK CHAPEL is in this township, nearly opposite to Marple hall. The number of inhabitants, in 1821, was about 1,200.

MIDDLEWICH, OVER,

AND THE VILLAGES OF KINDERTON, LITTLE BUDWORTH, NEWTON, & WINSFORD.

MIDDLEWICH is a parish and market town, partly in the hundred of Northwich and part in the hundred of Eddisbury, situated near the confluence of the rivers Dane and Croco, 167 miles from London, 24 from Manchester, 20 from Chester, 9 from Knutsford, and 5 from Sandbach. It is a town of some antiquity, deriving its name from its local situation, being the middlemost of the Wiches, or salt towns. The town is tolerably well built, and has a respectable and agreeable appearance: the government of it is vested in two constables, sworn in at a court held at the Wright's Arms, by the crown lessee, Miss Ann Wright. The trade of the place is chiefly derived from the surrounding neighbourhood, which is a great farming district; to which may be added the extensive salt works, and some silk factories; the whole combining to render it a flourishing little town. The Trent and Mersey canal runs through here, and the rivers Dane and Wheelock glide along about a quarter of a mile from the town, upon which are several corn mills. The church, which is a vicarage, dedicated to St. Michael, is a fine old building, consisting of nave, chancel, side aisles, and a handsome tower, with six bells. The monuments of particular note within the church are to the Kinderton barons. The Rev. Isaac Wood is the patron of the benefice, and the present incumbent. Besides the church are other places of worship for the methodists, calvinists, Wesleyans, and a friends' meeting house. "Newton grammar school" was founded in the 16th century, for the education of 8 boys, nominated by the churchwardens: its endowment is about £30. per annum. The country around here is for the most part flat, very luxuriant, and in a high state of cultivation. The vallies are very beautiful, and the immediate neighbourhood boasts many delightful residences, among which are Kinderton lodge, the seat of J. T. Braband, Esq., Manor hall, the seat of W. Court, Esq., Bostock hall, Ravencroft hall, and Crange hall. The market day is on Tuesday. Fairs are the first Monday after the 13th of April, Holy Thursday, August 5th, September 27th, and October 29th; the commodities brought for sale are various, but these fairs are of little importance in the way of trade. This parish contains 15 townships, and, in 1821, 4,350 inhabitants, 1212 of which number were resident in the town of Middlewich.

OVER is a parish and small market town of the same name, in the hundred of Eddisbury, about 5 miles from Middlewich, on the main road to Chester. It is a borough by prescription, governed by a mayor, annually chosen at a baron and court leet held by Mr. Cholmondley, who is lord of the manor. Within the borough and lordship the mayor executes all the functions of a justice of the peace, and at the quarter sessions takes his seat on the bench. The charter for a market, held on Wednesday, and the fair, which is for three days, at the feast of the exaltation of the cross, was obtained in the 10th of Edward I. The town of Over consists principally of one long straggling street, in which are several remains of crosses; and tradition gives to the place a fallacious importance, arising from marvellous stories, which are not substantiated by historical facts. Here is said to have been born the idiotical prophet William Nickson, whose foretellings were much venerated by the superstitious and illiterate; writers are at variance as to the periods of his birth and decease; some say he lived in the reign of James I. and that his most remarkable prophecies applied themselves to the early branches of the Cholmondley family, whose descendants are said to have preserved with care MSS. regarding this person. The church is dedicated to St. Chad, and was rebuilt by Hugh Starky, Esq. in 1543. In the east window, and in that of the south aisle, are some fine specimens of tabernacle work, and stained glass: an altar monument to Hugh Starky, with his figure in brass thereon, the date of which is partly obliterated, is the only one worthy of note. A school was founded in 1689, by Mrs. Elizabeth Venables, and her son Thomas Lee, Esq. endowed by them with lands producing now about £60. per annum. It is situated at the corner of the church road, near the cross, and is for the education of children in Over, Whitegate, and Weever. The self trade of the town is very inconsiderable, no manufactory of any sort being established within it. The parish of Over contains the townships of Oulton-Lowe and Wettenhall, and, in 1821, 2514 inhabitants, 2157 of which were in the township of Over, including the dependent hamlet of WINSFORD.

KINDERTON is a very small township, about a mile and a half from Middlewich. The early and powerful "barons of Kinderton" had possessions here at the conquest, and down to 1597 they exercised the right of inflicting capital punishment on felons for crimes committed within the barony. The population of the township was, in 1821, under 500.

LITTLE BUDWORTH, or Budworth-cum-Oulton, or Budworth in the Frith, is a very inconsiderable parish, without any other dependent township, in the hundred of Eddisbury, forming once a part of the parish of Over. The old church, dedicated to St. Mary and All Saints, consisted of a tower, nave, and chancel; but the tower only remains of the original fabric, the body of the church being rebuilt of stone, according to a bequest of £1000. by Mr. Ralph Kirkham, of Manchester, who was educated at the school within this parish. The living is an augmented curacy, in the patronage of the Bishop of Chester. Near the park wall of Oulton is the school house, erected in 1706, in which twenty poor children are educated. The number of inhabitants, in 1821, was 524.

NEWTON adjoins to Middlewich, and is a township in that parish. Most of the houses here are very respectable in appearance, and those the property of John Braband, Esq. and Isaac Wood, Esq. are handsome. The manor of Newton became vested in the Crews, of Crewe, subsequent to Henry VI, and afterwards passed, with the estate called the Manor house, to William Court, Esq. So intimately connected is this township with Middlewich, as to situation and trade, that nothing can be said of it different to what has already been given of that town. The whole township contains about 1500 inhabitants.

WINSFORD, or, as it is sometimes called, Winsford Bridge, from there being a bridge here over the Weaver, is a hamlet of the township of Over, between that place and Middlewich, about 2 miles from the former, and 3 from the latter town, on the high road to Chester. The brine pits, which are extensive, and on both sides the river, are the only objects that attach importance to this hamlet. The population is made up with Over parish.

MOTTRAM,

HYDE, GEE CROSS, TINTWISTLE, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

MOTTRAM, or Mottram-in-Longdendale, is a township and parish in the hundred of Macclesfield, between seven and eight miles north-east of Stockport, and twelve from Manchester: the parish extends to the borders of Yorkshire, and includes a bleak and dreary promontory, while other scenery in the neighbourhood of Mottram is very grand; diversified by rugged steep rocks, swelling eminences, and vallies clothed with verdure. Most of the hills have springs, either issuing from their sides or summits, all which are of soft water. The Car Tor, in this parish, is a singular precipice, eighty feet in its perpendicular height. The summit and sides have oak trees growing on them, and the face of the precipice exhibits various strata of rock, coal, or slaty matter, and free stone, all regularly disposed as if laid by the hand of art. Between the Car Tor and the hills of Derbyshire the Mersey bubbles along its craggy bed, contributing to the variety of the romantic prospect. There are extensive moor grounds in this neighbourhood, which abound with grouse. Before the year 1300 the de Burghs had property here; in 1406 it reverted to the crown by the attainder of Lord Lovell; soon after, it was possessed in fee by Sir Wm. Stanley, of Holt, and in 1495 it again was in the crown: the lord of the manor now is John Richard Delap Tollemache, Esq. who holds a court leet and baron in May and November. The church, which is dedicated to St. Mary, has a tower of eight bells, and consists besides of a nave, chancel, and side aisles, with private chancels at the end; in one of which is a monumental full length figure of Ralph Stanley, in complete armour, with his wife on his left side; and on an altar tomb is a figure of Serjeant Bretland—date 1703. It is supposed this church was erected about 1480; the registers commence in 1562. A fine toned organ has lately been added. It is a vicarage, in the gift of the Bishop of Chester: the present vicar is the Rev. Wm. Johnson. Besides the church there are other places of worship for dissenters, &c. and a free school and two Sunday schools. The most distinguished native of this town was Lawrence Earnshaw, a most ingenious mechanic, universal artist, and musician; he invented a curious piece of mechanism, tending to save labour in the operation of spinning and reeling cotton: this machine, having exhibited to his friends, with a philanthropy that did honour to his heart, he destroyed, leaving it to subsequent artists, less charitably fastidious, to discover and employ similar works. In clock making his elaborate genius was eminently conspicuous: he died about 1764. In the parish are some respectable concerns in the spinning and manufacturing of cotton, and calico printing. A coal mine is also worked in the neighbourhood of the town. Two fairs are held here, viz. April 27th and October 31st, for cattle.

The parish of Mottram contains the townships of Godley, Hattersley, Hollingworth, Matley, Newton, Stayley and Tintwistle, and a population of 10,086 persons, of which number 1,944 are in the township of Mottram.

HYDE is a populous township and village, in the parish of Stockport, four miles and a half from that town, and is a place deriving its consequence from the extensive establishments for spinning, and manufacturing cotton goods by the power loom. The invention of the mule has bestowed upon this village astonishing benefit, and perhaps no place in the manufacturing district has, for its size, attained more importance in the last twenty-five years. Coal, which is found in great quantity here, adds also to the comfort and prosperity of the inhabitants. The only places of worship here at present are for the calvinists and methodists; but the commissioners for building churches have very properly granted £4,500. for the erection of a church; and George Clarke, Esq. has munificently given an acre of land for the site of the proposed edifice. This gentleman is lord of the manor, and holds a court baron in May and November. A court is also held before Hyde John Clarke, Esq. the magistrate, for the hearing and deciding petty causes, at the office of Messrs. Chorlton and Hibbert, solicitors. This township enjoys the advantages of water conveyance by the Peak Forest canal, which, as well as the river Tame, passes through this township. Hyde mill, or Hyde hall, the seat of H. J. Clarke, Esq. is a building of some considerable antiquity; recent improvements have deprived the exterior of its ancient appearance, but a great part of the interior is in its original state. It is pleasantly situated on the river Tame, but the rapid progress made in manufactures, and the introduction of machinery to such a vast extent and power, has materially deteriorated from the beauties of the adjacent scenery. The number of inhabitants in Hyde, in 1821, was 3,355, but the population has increased since that period.

GEE CROSS is a populous village, in the townships of Hyde and Werneth, in the parish of Stockport, four miles N. E. from the latter town. It derives its name from the circumstance of an ancient and opulent family named Gee erecting a cross here, of stone, the remains of which have but recently been removed. The only place of worship here is an unitarian chapel, of which the Rev. J. Brooks is the present officiating minister. Two fairs are held, viz. 28th April and 20th November, for cattle, pedlary, &c. The population returns are made up with Hyde.

TINTWISTLE, or Tintwisle, is a village and township in the parish of Mottram-in-Longdendale, 13½ miles from Manchester and 2 from Mottram, pleasantly situated on the great road which passes into Yorkshire. This is also a village thriving by means of the manufactories, which give employment to so many hands. The only place of worship here is a chapel for the calvinists, of which the Rev. J. C. Potter is the minister. The number of inhabitants, in 1821, was about 1,600.

AND THE VILLAGES OF ACTON, NEWHALL, WRENBURY, WYBUNBURY, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

NANTWICH, a market town and capital of the hundred of the same name, is 164 miles from London, 36 from Manchester, 20 from Chester, 12 from Middlewich, and 9 from Tarporley. It is situated near to the borders of Staffordshire and Shropshire, upon the banks of the river Weaver, which is not navigable at this place; to compensate for this circumstance, however, the town has the advantage of water conveyance by canal to Chester, Birmingham, Newport, Wolverhampton, &c. The government of the town is in constables;
and there are courts leet and baron, held in May and October, by the Marquis of Cholmondeley, who is lord of the manor, alternately at the Crown and Lamb inns. A court also sits for the recovery of small debts under 40s. The inhabitants of Nantwich are privileged not to serve on juries, that are not within the jurisdiction of the town. This place was nearly destroyed by fire in 1438, and in 1583 it sustained the like calamity, when the damage was computed at upwards of £30,000. The manufacture of salt was at one time extensive here, but it is now reduced to a single establishment. The principal trade of the place now is in the manufacture of shoes, which are for the most part disposed of to the London and Manchester dealers: here is also a cotton twist manufactory, and a small manufactory for gloves. The church, which is dedicated to St. Mary, is an elegant structure, in the Gothic style of architecture, of the 14th century:

it has a nave, chancel, side aisles and two transepts.
The fine octagonal tower is 110 feet in height, and contains six bells: the whole of the building is of stone, in the cathedral form; its exterior is considerably delapidated, but its interior is very perfect, and the elaborate art of the chisel, in the tabernacle work, &c. is very conspicuous; yet is the elegance
of the interior much deformed, and many beauties

hid by the modern erection of injudiciously placed galleries. A great ornament to the church is a beautiful stone pulpit, projecting from the piers of the central tower: it is said there are only two besides this in the kingdom. The monuments are numerous, and some deserving the notice of the curious. The living is a rectory, in the gift of Lord Crewe. The Rev. Richard Henry Gretton is the incumbent. The other places of worship are for the Wesleyan methodists, calvinists, baptists, socinians, unitarians, and a friends' meeting house. Here are a free grammar school, for six boys, and a blue cap school for 40 boys; thirteen alms-houses, a commodious workhouse, and a market house. The vicinity of Nantwich is particularly favoured by being the residence of several persons of distinction, besides many most respectable families, whose grounds and mansions add much to the beauty of the surrounding scenery: amongst these are Crewe hall, the seat of Lord Crewe, about four miles from the town; Doddington park, the seat of Sir John Peters Broughton, bart.; Combermere abbey, the seat of Lord Combermere, &c. &c. The country about here, although flat, is not unpleasing, it is agricultural and exceeding fertile. Market day is on Saturday; a large market for cattle is also held on the alternate Saturdays, in the months of February and March. Fairs are March 26th, the 1st Tuesday after 18th June, September 4th, and December 4th. In 1821 the entire parish of Nantwich contained 5,633 inhabitants, of which number 4,661 persons were resident in the township.

ACTON, or Aghton, about a mile from Nantwich, is a parish and small village. The church, which is dedicated to St. Mary, is of considerable antiquity. In a deed of endowment, dated 1285, Nantwich church is stated as a dependent chapel upon this foundation. The edifice is of red stone, and well finished; the tower was much injured by a storm in 1757, which, with the interior of the church, was repaired at a great expence. Several monuments to the members of the Wilbraham family are in the chancels and other parts of the edifice. The whole parish contained, in 1821, 3,767 inhabitants, but not above 300 are of the village.

NEWHALL is a township, in the parish of Acton, about five miles from Nantwich. Lord Combermere is lord of the manor, and holds a court leet and baron, at which constables are appointed. The site of the ancient Castle of Newhall is not now to be ascertained; it suffered devastation from the incursions of the Welch, and it is long since that any of its remains were visible. The township contains about 900 inhabitants.

WRENBURY-CUM-FRITH is a parish and village, five miles from Nantwich. The manor of Wrenbury is vested in Lord Combermere and John Cross Starkey, Esq. but the Marquis Cholmondley holds a court leet; and the district of Wrenbury frith is divided in equal shares between these noblemen. Wrenbury hall, the property of J. C. Starkey, Esq. is a handsome mansion, sheltered by extensive plantations. The chapel here is in the Gothic style, with a handsome tower. The curacy is in the gift of the vicar of Acton, who is charged with the payment of £10. per annum to the curate; the Rev. Gilbert Vawdrey is the present minister. The number of inhabitants, in 1821, in the parish, was about 1,000, of which number about 500 were in the township.

WYBUNBURY is a parish and village, three miles E. from Nantwich, situated close upon the borders of Staffordshire. The church, which is dedicated to St. Chad, consists of a nave, chancel, side aisles and a tower: the tower, which is lofty and surmounted by pinnacles, is apprehended to be in a dangerous state, as it can be perceived to lean considerably in a north-east direction, so much so as to affect the body of the church. It is a rectory, and the Rev. James Hayes is the present incumbent. In 1707 a school house was built and endowed by Mr. Thomas Heath, for the instruction of a limited number of poor boys of the parish. The entire parish contained, in 1821, 4,116 inhabitants, and the township about 430 of that number.

NESTON, GREAT & LITTLE, PARKGATE, & WILLASTON.

GREAT NESTON, formerly called Nesson, is a parish and market town, in the higher division of the hundred of Wirral, nearly 11 miles N.W. of Chester, and about 47 from Manchester. It is pleasantly situated, close upon the shore on the south-west side of a peninsula, formed by the estuaries of the Dee and Mersey.
As a place of trade Neston is unimportant, being a town supported chiefly by the number of visitants to it in the summer season; attracted by the salubrity of the air, and the interesting views which present themselves around here, as well as the opposite coast of Wales. A court leet and baron is held annually, by Sir Thomas Mostyn, baronet, who is lord of the manor; and petty sessions are held monthly. J.
Williams, Esq. is lord paramount of the hundred, by grant from the crown, and is thereby entitled to all wrecks, &c. within the hundred. The church is of considerable antiquity, the tower of which was repaired in 1697, and in 1809 an organ was erected on the north side of the church: it is dedicated to St. Mary and St. Helen, and is a vicarage, in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Chester: the present incumbent is the Rev. Thomas Ward. Here are also other places of worship for methodists and the followers of Emanuel Swedenborg, and a national school.
In the immediate neighbourhood are the beautiful residences of Sir Thomas Stanley, baronet, Hooton;
Joseph Hayes Lyon, Esq. Ashfield; Robert Congrave, Esq. Burton, &c. There are some productive coal mines worked in this parish. Market day is Friday;
and the fairs are 2nd of February, 1st of May, and 29th September. The entire parish of Neston contains eight townships, and, in 1821, 3,216 inhabitants, of which 1,418 were in Great Neston.

LITTLE NESTON, or Neston-cum-Hargreave, is a township, about a mile S.E. of Great Neston. A court leet and baron is held here in right of the Troutbecks, for the manors of Little Neston and Hargreave.

at eight in the morning and are despatched at four in the afternoon.

Here are some extensive coal works held under the Cottinghams. In 1820-1-2 were continued litigations regarding these mines between Mr. Cottingham and Sir T. S. M. Stanley, baronet, the result was a verdict against the latter gentleman for £2,000, which finding was confirmed in 1823. The number of inhabitants is about 320.

PARKGATE is about a mile below Neston, and is of importance only as being the resort of visitors to it, in the bathing season. The houses, which are neat and modern, are disposed in a long range, facing the estuary of the Dee. A regular ferry from hence to Flint affords great accommodation to those residing on the Welch shore, desirous of visiting Liverpool. A custom house is still supported, at Parkgate, but nearly the whole of its transactions are confined to vessels frequenting the contiguous collieries. About fifteen years ago Parkgate partook of all the importance and bustle of a sea-port, and at that time packets and other vessels were employed here in the trade with Ireland; but at this period, as a packet station, it is neglected, no vessel of burthen being enabled to approach within a considerable distance of the quay, from the large sand bank which occupies the channel. The population, which has increased since 1821, consisted then of about 400 persons.

WILLASTON is a neat little village, about three miles east of Great Neston, and originally gave name to the hundred of Willaveston, now Wirral. The manor was originally vested in the Orrebies, and subsequent to 1502 the Earls of Oxford sold it to the freeholders, who exercise the manorial rights. The family of the Bennetts, of Chester, have enjoyed a great portion of the property since the time of the Veres. The hall is an ancient brick building, with bay windows, and was built in 1558, by the ancestors of the Bennetts. In 1821 the number of inhabitants was about 300.

NORTHWICH,

AND THE VILLAGES OF GREAT BUDWORTH, DAVENHAM, LEFTWICH, WEAVERHAM AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

NORTHWICH is a large and ancient market town, in the parish of Great Budworth, giving name to a hundred in which it lies. It is situated on the conflux of the river Dane with the Weaver, and is one of the great thoroughfares between Liverpool and London, and between Manchester and Wales, via Chester: it is 174 miles from the metropolis, 20 from Manchester, 18 from Chester, 12 from Frodsham, and 6 from Middlewich. Its name applies to its local situation, being the northernmost of the wiches, or salt towns. The streets of Northwich are formed without respect to uniformity, and many of the houses are of great antiquity. The parochial chapel, which is in the township of WITTON, is a neat Gothic structure, situated on rising ground, and consists of a nave, chancel, and side aisles, and a neat embattled tower, containing six bells. The living is in the gift of Lord de Tabley, and the present incumbent is the Rev. George Okell: here are also independent and methodist chapels. At HARTFORD is also a protestant chapel, of which the Rev. T. Ainsworth is the minister. A well endowed grammar school and a national school impart instruction to a great number of children. Courts leet and baron are held here by the lord of the manor, John P. Heywood, Esq. at which are chosen two constables, market lookers, &c. The salt trade is conducted here to an immense extent; indeed, the neighbourhood of Northwich may be considered the concentration of this peculiar branch of manufacture. It is estimated that upwards of one hundred thousand tons, from the brine springs, are sent down the Weaver annually, for exportation. The salt from the rock mines, (the principal ones being at Wincham), though not so much in demand as that from the springs, give, nevertheless, employment to a great number of hands, and are wonderful subterranean curiosities. To a stranger who never visited similar excavations, the effect, when the caverns are lighted, upon the stupendous arches and crystalline arcades, is truly astonishing, and well worthy of delaying the curious traveller. The advantageous situation of the town on the banks of the Weaver, and its contiguity to the Grand Trunk canal, which has opened a source of cheap communication with so many parts of England, have all combined to render Northwich pre-eminent in the salt trade. Its central situation also, and its being surrounded with gentlemen's seats, has rendered the town a place of considerable resort for the transaction of public and other business. The principal seats in this vicinage are, Vale Royal, the seat of Lord Delamere; Delamere Lodge, the seat of G. Wilbraham, Esq.; the seats of J. F. Stanley, Esq. Winnington; J. S. Barry, Esq. Marbury Hall; Jos. Leigh, Esq. Belmont; George Eaton, Esq. of the Pole, &c. &c. The general appearance of the country is rich and interesting, the views upon the Dane and Weaver romantic, and the land is noted for its fertility. The market day is on Friday, and the fairs are the 10th April, 2nd August, and 6th December; at the two last named fairs considerable quantities of Manchester, Yorkshire, Birmingham and Sheffield goods find ready purchasers: these goods are exposed for sale in a place called York buildings, which consists of more than a hundred shops, and covers more than an acre of ground. The township of Northwich, of itself, in extent, is inconsiderable, and does not cover above six acres of land, nor contain above 1,500 inhabitants, but the suburbs embrace various other populous townships, principally in the parish of Great Budworth, which parish contained, in 1821, upwards of 14,000 inhabitants. WITTON-CUM-TWAMBROOK is a chapelry, and forms part of the township of Northwich. The number of inhabitants, in 1821, in Witton was 2,405.

GREAT BUDWORTH parish is the most extensive, with the exception of Prestbury, in this county, being nearly 15 miles long and 10 wide. It is partly in the hundred of Northwich, partly in Bucklow hundred, and extends also into the hundred of Eddisbury. The village of Budworth is about two miles from Northwich, pleasantly situated on a gentle acclivity, near two large sheets of water, called Pic-mere and Budworth-mere. The church of All Saints stands in a delightful situation, and consists of a nave, chancel, side aisles, and two transepts, with a fine tower, containing eight bells. The present vicar is the Rev. G. H. Webber. The school, in the churchyard, was founded in 1600, by the Rev. John Dean. This village is so intimately connected with Northwich, that what has been said regarding the trade, &c. of that town, in a great degree applies to Budworth. In 1821 the village contained about 500 inhabitants.

DAVENHAM is a township, in a parish of the same name, situated on the river Dane, in the hundred of Northwich, from which town it is distant about two miles, and from Middlewich N.E. about four. The greater part of the estates are the property of J. H.

POST OFFICE, High-street, NORTHWICH, Mark Topham, Post Master.—The mail arrives at half-past five in the morning, and is despatched at six in the evening to KNUTSFORD, where it meets the LONDON mail.

RUNCORN,

PRESTON BROOK, WESTON POINT, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

RUNCORN is a small market town, in a parish of the same name, 188 miles from London, 28 from Manchester, 15 from Chester and 6 from Frodsham. It is in the hundred of Bucklow, seated on the banks of the Mersey, which is here suddenly contracted from a considerable breadth to a narrow channel, by a projecting point of land from the Lancashire side. Runcorn is a place of great antiquity, supposed to have been erected by Elfrida, wife of the governor of Mercia, about the year 916; who also built a castle opposite the gap, for the protection of this extremity of her domain; no vestige of this building remains, but its site is marked by a triangular piece of land, to which is given the name of the castle; and which, jutting out into the river, is guarded on the water side by ledges of rocks and broken precipices, and cut off from the land by a ditch, six yards in breadth. The parish church of All Hallows, which stands in a most romantic situation, above the castle rock, surrounded by trees, is supposed to have existed prior to the conquest, and coeval with the castle; as it was bestowed by Nigell, Baron of Halton, one of the followers of William the Conqueror, on his brother Wolfrith, a priest. It is a vicarage, in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Christ church college, Oxford, and the present incumbent is the Rev. Frederick Master. The building consists of a nave, chancel and side aisles; the pillars in the north aisle are clustered with rich capitals, from which spring pointed arches. The uniformity of the interior of this interesting church has been much invaded by the erection of a gallery on the north side, which caused the removal of the pillars in that aisle. A great number of monumental memorials, some of which are deserving attention, from their chasteness of design and excellence of the sculpture, are in the church; and the church-yard is also much crowded with these respectful mementos. The other places of worship are, a chapel for the Wesleyan methodists, and another for Lady Huntingdon's connexion. In the succeeding reigns to that of the Conqueror Runcorn retrograded in consequence, and up to a very recent period, remained in comparative insignificance; indeed, but just previous to the completion of the Duke of Bridgewater's navigation, it was an obscure village; but since the perfecting of that great work it has rapidly risen in consequence, and is at this time a genteel and thriving town, and a place of some importance in trade; so much so, that government has established a custom-house, and proclaimed it a free port. It has also lately become a place of resort for salt water bathing; the pure air, the pleasantness of the neighbourhood, the fine views, (particularly at Halton Castle), and the exhilarating effects derived from the busy scene upon the river, constitute useful auxiliaries to the effects of the bath. The inns here are very respectable, among which may be noticed, the New Inn, and Wilson's Hotel and Bowling Green. The Castle Inn, at HALTON, is pleasantly situated, principally on the site of the ancient castle, a portion of the ruins of which has been converted to the uses of the inn: here it is that courts leet and baron are held in the spring and autumn, by the lord of the manor, when the constable of the township is sworn into office. Many respectable seminaries for young ladies are at Runcorn; and at HALLWOOD, about two miles distant, is a boarding school for young gentlemen, in which the various branches of literature are taught, under the able conduct of Mr. Joseph Blake. A national school here, upon the Lancasterian system, educates upwards of 200 children of both sexes, supported by subscription.

POST OFFICE, RUNCORN, Samuel Wylde, Post Master.—The mail is despatched by horse to Warrington, every afternoon at four, and arrives every morning at eight.

Runcorn has the honour of giving birth to that celebrated scholar and physician, Dr. Nathan Alcock, whose memory, as a man of science, philanthropy, and exalted virtues, will long be cherished: he was born in December, 1707, and died 8th December, 1779. In manufactures Runcorn does not rank high; it is, however, noted for soap making, Messrs. Hazlehurst & Co.'s concern being very extensive in that trade, and in the distilling of turpentine. Here is also a manufactory for school slates and black lead pencils, by Messrs. Wilson & Co. From the quarries in the immediate neighbourhood, a fine grey and white free stone is obtained in great quantities; this trade is highly befriended by the facility of water conveyance; the Duke of Bridgewater and the Mersey & Irwell navigation company's canals, affording communication with Manchester and Liverpool, Birmingham, the south of England, &c. The seats and mansions in the vicinity of Runcorn are numerous and tasteful, and placed in beautiful situations; commanding views, varied and extensive, over a fertile and interesting country. Among the most attractive residences is Norton Priory, at Halton, the lovely and romantic seat of Sir Richard Brooke, Baronet. The market day is on Friday; and there are two fairs for cattle, viz. the last Friday in April and the last Friday in October, but neither the fairs or the markets are well attended. The population of the whole parish of Runcorn, in 1821, was 7,738, of which number 3,100 were in Runcorn town, and about 1,000 in HALTON; but since those returns were made the number of inhabitants has increased to upwards of 5,000.

PRESTON BROOK, or Preston on the Hill, is a township, in the parish of Runcorn, about 2 miles from that town and 4 from Frodsham. It consists principally of a large range of warehouses; this being the place where much business is transacted in the trans-shipment of goods, &c. between the Mersey navigation and the Grand Trunk and Duke of Bridgewater's canal. In 1821 the number of actual inhabitants was about 400, but the population has considerably increased since that period.

WESTON, or Weston Point, a small village and township, in the parish of Runcorn, about two miles N. W. from Frodsham, is delightfully situated at the conjunction of the rivers Mersey and Weaver. It is, at present, possessed in parcels, by the executors of the late Robert Cheshire, Esq. but no court is held. This place is also increasing in importance and population, and participating in the advantages enjoyed by the neighbouring towns, from the influx of visitors in the warm season of the year. The population, in 1821, was under 300.

SANDBACH,

WITH THE VILLAGES OF WHELOCK, HOLMES CHAPEL AND WARMINCHAM.

SANDBACH, a parish and small market town, in the hundred of Northwich, is 162 miles from the metropolis, 26 from Manchester, 25 from Chester, 9 from Congleton, and 5 from Middlewich. It is very pleasantly situated on an eminence, near to the little river Wheelock; and has within the last twenty years advanced in consequence and prosperity, from the several manufactories established in the town and its immediate neighbourhood, for the throwing of silk and weaving it into various textures. It was formerly famous for its malt liquor; and the manufacture of worsted yarn, the weaving of stuffs, and shoe making; but these several trades have fallen off in proportion as the more costly article of silk has obtruded itself upon the attention and ingenuity of the artisan and capitalist. In this parish are brine springs, and it has the advantage of water conveyance by the Grand Trunk canal, which passes the borders of the township. The parish church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient erection, of red sand stone, of pointed Gothic architecture, and consists of a nave, chancel, side aisles and tower, in good repair: it is a vicarage, in the patronage of the Rev. John Armistead, and in the incumbency of the Rev. Richard Lowndes. Here are also two chapels each for the Wesleyan methodists and calvinists, and meeting houses for a sect calling themselves primitive methodists. The schools here are national and Sunday schools, and one with a small endowment for a master to teach twenty poor children, and £10. a year besides to prepare three others for the university. In the seventeenth century Sandbach obtained its privilege as a market town, through its lord, Sir John Radcliffe, of Ordsall. Lord Crewe holds a manorial court at irregular periods; and petty sessions are held here by the magistrates, when two constables are appointed, who act under them. This town has been long noted for its crosses; the remains of some of these religious erections, much to the credit of the inhabitants and the exertions of Mr. Ormrod, were rescued from entire demolition in 1816, when the fragments were collected and placed upon their original site, in the market place, and their deficient ancient beauties supplied by modern art. The land around here is generally fertile, and the views agreeable; from certain situations, particularly towards the hills of Staffordshire and Derbyshire, over the Vale Royal, they are extensive and interesting, the rich landscape being terminated by the mountains of Wales. The weekly market is on Thursday. Fairs are Tuesday and Wednesday in Easter week, and the first Thursday after the 11th of September: there is also a great market, or statute and pleasure fair, which begins on the 27th December, for cattle, haberdashery, toys, &c. In 1821 the population of the whole parish of Sandbach was 6,369, of which number about 3,000 were resident in the township.

WHELOCK is a township, two miles from Sandbach, situated on the north and south banks of the river, from which it derives its name. It is principally to be noticed from the productive brine springs in the township, which are about sixty yards from the surface. On the south side of the river are warehouses, a brewery, silk mills, and an iron foundry. The Grand Trunk canal passing through here adds to its importance, and affords convenience for the transmission of its staple production, salt. The population has augmented since 1821, when it contained about 500 inhabitants.

HOLMES CHAPEL, Hulme, or Church Hulme, is a chapelry in the parish of Sandbach, four miles N.E. from Middlewich. The chapel consists of a nave, chancel, and side aisles, with a square tower, terminating in battlements and pinnacles. The curacy is in the gift of the vicar of Sandbach. Its dependent townships are COTTON and CRANAGE, and the number of its inhabitants about 400.

WARMINCHAM, or Warmingham, is a parish and township, about three miles south from Middlewich. The estates are the property of Lord Crewe, who holds a court leet and baron for this manor and those of Elton and Tetton. The church, dedicated to St. Leonard, is situated near to the Wheelock river, and consists of a body and chancel, which were rebuilt in 1797; the tower was erected in 1715. The monuments in the church, which possess no remarkable character, are principally to the Crewe and Vernon families. A free school was founded here by Mr. Thomas Minshull, who endowed it with land producing £15. per annum. The inhabitants of this parish (which embraces the townships of Tetton, Elton and Moston) are for the most part in agricultural employ. The number, in 1821, was 1,069, of which about 400 are in Warmincham township.

STOCKPORT,

HEATON NORRIS, PORTWOOD, BRAMHALL, BULLOCK SMITHY, POYNTON AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

STOCKPORT, a market and principal manufacturing town, in the hundred of Macclesfield, is 179 miles from London, by way of Macclesfield, 12 from that town and 7 from Manchester. Much controversy has arisen amongst etymologists and antiquarians relative to the derivation of the present accepted name, "Stockport;" the spelling of which is at variance with all the old authorities. Three centuries ago it was written in a deed, Stopford; in the civil wars, when occupied by the parliamentary forces from Manchester, it was called Stopworth; and in the twelfth century, it was written Stopport; probably a corruption from Stoke-port. Certain it is, that in the survey no mention is made of the town, but its great antiquity is undoubted; and it has been made to appear, that it was the grand centre of many diverging Roman roads. Formerly Stockport was an incorporated town, and it has now its mayor, but the office is merely nominal; the government of the town being in the resident and neighbouring magistrates, and three constables, who in turn sit daily, at the police office, and once a fortnight hold a petty sessions. The lady of the manor is the Hon. Frances Maria Warren, of Poynton, who holds a court leet and baron twice in the year; and at the Michaelmas court, the mayor, constables, and other officers are appointed. Here is also a court, sanctioned by an act of parliament, for the recovery of small debts, within the townships of Stockport, Brinnington, and for the hamlets of Edgley and Brinksway. The parish church of St. Mary is erected upon the site of the ancient church, (which was taken down in 1813.) The first stone of the present edifice was laid by Wilbraham Egerton, Esq. M. P. July 5, 1813, and the building was completed early in 1817, at the expence of £30,000. It is a noble pile, built of the Runcorn stone, and occupying a commanding site at the east side of the market place. It consists of a nave, chancel, side aisles, and a lofty square embattled tower, surmounted by pinnacles, with a fine ring of eight bells. The style of architecture is of the florid Gothic, and the design is creditable to the artist, as the work is to the spirit and piety of the town. The living is a rectory, estimated at £1,200. per annum, and is in the patronage of the Viscountess Bulkeley: the present incumbent is the Rev. Charles Kenrick Prescott. The new church, dedicated to St. Thomas, was begun on the 7th September 1822, under the million act, towards which the commissioners applied £16,000. St. Peter's chapel was erected in 1765—8, at the sole expence of Wm. Wright, Esq. who endowed it with £200. per annum: it is a neat brick building, worthy of the pious founder, whose ambition was more alive to the purposes for which it was erected, than to the display of extrinsic ornament, or internal grandeur. The other places of worship here are, three independent and three methodist chapels, one of which is on the Lancashire side of the river, with a stone front school room underneath; here are also a chapel for the new methodist connexion, a baptist chapel, a catholic chapel and a friends' meeting house: most of these have their Sunday schools. The Stockport Sunday school reflects high honour upon the town; it was built by subscription, in 1805, at the cost of upwards of £6,500. The great national school is a noble erection, it was completed in 1826, and bestows upon an unlimited number of poor children of both sexes the unmeasured benefits of education. It is situated in the new road, called the Wellington road, which was opened on the 3rd July, 1826; when a procession was formed of the authorities of the town, the trustees of the road, the members of the Wellington club, &c. The road extends from Heaton Chapel to Rowcroft Smithy, and is a grand improvement upon this line of thoroughfare, as it avoids the narrow and sudden turnings and precipitous ascents and declivities in the town. The free grammar school was founded in 1487. The dispensary was established in 1792, and to this institution has been added a house of recovery. There are also six almshouses, for as many poor men; and an auxiliary bible society has been established with success.

The original manufacture of this town was silk, and the first mills in England for winding and throwing silk upon the Italian principle were established in this town. There are at this period some respectable silk spinning, silk throwing, and manufacturing concerns; but the great staple manufacture of the place is in cotton, which employs in its various processes the estimated machine power, by steam and water, of 1,900 horses, exclusive of the steam power used in calico printing, machine making, and the grinding of corn, besides nearly 6,000 power looms, chiefly worked by steam. The calico printing establishment of Messrs. Thomas Marsland & Son is most extensive, and is said to have paid to government, in one year, upwards of £100,000. The making of hats is also a considerable branch of business here; indeed, Stockport taken as a manufacturing town holds a high rank throughout the country. The conveyance of goods to all parts from this place is facilitated by the canal to Manchester, which, uniting with the Duke of Bridgewater's at that town, communicates with most of the navigable rivers and canals throughout the kingdom. The town of Stockport is most irregularly and closely built, upon ground in some parts precipitous, with an ascent from the north: at a distance, the houses on the higher ground appear to be supported by those below; while the lofty manufactories, rising in amphitheatric tiers, proudly overtop the whole. In the winter evenings, when those buildings are lighted with gas, the effect excited upon the passer through the town is that of astonishment, presenting to his view a wide illumination, grand and imposing. The country in the vicinity of the town is pleasant and picturesque; the prospect from some points is bold, and on all sides is rich in wood and water. The Tame and Goit glide through the valley, at the east of the town, to their confluence below Portwood bridge, where, upon their junction, the stream takes the name of the Mersey. The market place, which is on the summit of a hill, and difficult of access, is commodious: greater quantities of corn, oatmeal, cheese, &c. are sold here on the market day, Friday, than at any other in the county. Fairs are 4th and 25th March, 1st May, and 23rd October, chiefly for cattle. By the returns for 1821 the whole parish of Stockport contained 44,957 inhabitants, of which number 21,726 were in the town.

HEATON NORRIS, (Lancashire), a township and chapelry, in the hundred of Salford and parish of Manchester, six miles s. s. e. of that town. It is divided from Stockport by the river Mersey, and so intimately connected with that town, as to trade, manufactures, &c. that it may be said to form a part of it. Here is an elegant new chapel, called "Heaton chapel," which was built by the subscriptions of a few individuals, the most forward of whom were the Howard family. At HEATON MERSEY, which is a hamlet in this township, is a large Sunday school, founded in 1805, by the late Robert Parker, Esq. who bequeathed, in 1815, £500. for its perpetual support. The township contained, in 1821, 6,958 inhabitants.

PORTWOOD is a populous hamlet, in the township of BRINNINGTON, and may be said to form a component part of Stockport. A court baron is held for the manor and township of BRINNINGTON, at which the constables are sworn. The number of inhabitants, in 1821, was 2,124.

BRAMHALL, Bromhall, or Bromhale, is a township, about three miles s. w. of Stockport, in that parish. The "Hall of Bramhall," the seat of Salisbury Price Humphreys, Esq. is a venerable mansion, composed chiefly of timber and plaister, in a picturesque situation, on the banks of a small rivulet. Its erection is supposed to have taken place in the reign of Richard III. The township contained, in 1821, 1,359 inhabitants.

BULLOCK SMITHY is a populous manufacturing village, about two miles and a quarter south from Stockport; it consists principally of one long street, the houses of which are irregularly built, on the sides of the Macclesfield road, & in the hundred of that name. Cotton spinning is the chief employment of the inhabitants.

POYNTON is a chapelry, about four miles and a half s.s.e. from Stockport, in the parish of Prestbury. On the right of the road from Stockport to Macclesfield is Poynton chapel, rebuilt by Sir G. Warren, and is a very neat edifice. The patronage is vested in

TARPORLEY AND NEIGHBOURHOOD.

TARPORLEY, anciently spelled Torporley, is a parish and market town of small note, in the first division of the hundred of Eddisbury, 33 miles from Manchester, about 10 from Middlewich, Nantwich and Chester, on the great road leading from the last named place to London, from which it is distant 173 miles. In 1281 it appears to have been possessed by Hugh de Thorpley, who obtained the grant for a market and fair. The manorial rights are in the joint enjoyment of John Arden, Esq. and Sir John Grey Egerton, bart. In 1297, down to 1348, Tarporley had a mayor, but the government of the town then became and is now vested in two constables. The general appearance of the town is neat, and consists of a long, well paved street, at the south end of which is the ancient manor house, now the property of the dean and chapter of Chester. The church, dedicated to St. Helen, is built of red stone, and is of considerable antiquity: it consists of a tower, chancel, and side aisles, the east ends of which are enclosed as chancels; one on the north side belonged to the Dones, of Utkinton, the other to the Flaxyard's branch of that family. The living is a rectory, in the patronage of the dean and chapter of Chester, Lord Alvanley and the Rev. Sir Philip Grey Egerton, bart.; the last named gentleman is the rector, and the Rev. Thomas Okell the present curate. There are many monuments in this church, deserving of particular inspection. Lady Jane Done left £20. per annum to the school here, which is in the church-yard, and £200. for the apprenticing poor children. The master of the school, who is appointed by John Arden, Esq. has £20. per annum paid by the dean and chapter of Chester; the scholars pay for their education. Here are alms-houses for four poor widows, and one methodist chapel. The market is on Thursday; fairs 1st of May, first Monday after 24th August, and the 11th December. The parish of Tarporley contains 4 townships, and in 1821 about 2,200 inhabitants, 800 being in the township of Tarporley.

POST OFFICE, Gilbert Higgett, Post Master.—The mail is despatched to LONDON at nine o'clock in the morning, and to CHESTER and HOLYHEAD at half-past four in the afternoon.

TARVIN, KELSALL, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

TARVIN, a parish and township, is principally in the hundred of Eddisbury, and a small part in the Broxton hundred; it is situated about 6 miles N. E. of Chester, 33 from Manchester, and at the diverge of the roads to Northwich and Nantwich. The proprietor of the manor of Tarvin is William Cotgreave, Esq. who holds a court leet and baron for it. In 1550 Sir John Savage, the then owner of the manor, procured a charter for a market here, which has long since been disused; two fairs, however, are held on the 20th April and 2nd December. During the civil wars Tarvin was a considerable military post, occupied by the republicans. On the 30th April, 1752, this village was nearly destroyed by fire, when collections were made on behalf of the sufferers; and to the honour and humanity of the inhabitants of the city of Chester is ascribed a donation of £300. The church, which is dedicated to St. Andrew, consists of a nave, side aisles and chancels: the date of its erection does not appear, but it is known that in 1226 it belonged to the bishops of Lichfield and Coventry. The parish registers commence in 1563. In 1791 the waste lands in Tarvin were enclosed, when certain parts were appropriated to the impropriator and vicar, in lieu of tithes. A grammar school was founded here, in 1600, by Mr. Jno. Pickering, merchant, who endowed it with the sum of £200, which was laid out in lands, the value of which subsequently has much increased: the school educates 20 children, and is under the direction of twelve trustees. The whole parish of Tarvin contained, in 1821, a population of 3,485 persons; Tarvin township possessing rather more than 1,000 of that number.

KELSALL is a township and village, about three miles N. E. from Tarvin, in that parish. The general appearance of Kelsall is picturesque, and the scenery around of a most romantic description. Formerly this place was important as a military post, commanding the principal approach to and from Chester and the forest of Delamere. A quarry of very excellent free stone is worked in this township, and near the borders of the forest is a fine chalybeate spring, throwing up a considerable quantity of water, which, forming a small brook, falls into the Gowry. The number of inhabitants in the township, in 1821, was about 600.

WILMSLOW, ALDERLEY, & NEIGHBOURHOODS.

WILMSLOW, a parish and township, anciently called Le Bolyn, from its situation on the banks of the Bollin river, is about 7 miles from Macclesfield and Stockport, and 12 from Manchester. The township is entirely confined to the church and the church-yard; the great divisions of the parish being included in Bollin Fee, Pownall Fee, Chorley, and Fulshaw. The church, dedicated to St. Bartholomew, is situated on the bank of the Bollin, and consists of a nave, chancel, side aisles, and a tower, containing six bells. It is a rectory, in the patronage of Thos. Joseph Trafford, Esq. and the incumbent is the Rev. John Mathias Turner. A school is here for ten children, founded by the Rev. Henry Hough; the endowment is but £5. per annum. About 1780 a house of industry was built on Lindow common, which was supported by lands given by the freeholders, producing an annual rental of more than £200. A court baron is held by the Trafford family, in Pownall Fee, which extends over Chorley, Hough, and Morley, and a court leet is held by the Earl of Stamford, at Michaelmas. At HANDFORD is a respectable paper manufactory of Messrs. Saxon, Royston & Co. The parish of Wilmslow contained, in 1821, a population of 3,927 persons.

ALDERLEY parish contains the townships of Alderley Superior, Inferior, and Great Warford. The parish church is about six miles from Macclesfield, it is dedicated to St. Mary, and is a very ancient edifice, built of grey stone, in various styles of architecture. The living is in the gift of Sir John Thomas Stanley, bart. the rector is the Rev. Edward Stanley, and the present curate is the Rev. Isaac Bell. In the parish is one baptist chapel, and here is a school house, built in 1628, by the Rev. Hugh Shaw, the then curate. A court leet is held in December, by Sir J. T. Stanley, bart. who is lord of the manor: the seat of this gentleman, Alderley park, is of considerable extent, beautifully wooded, and boasts some of the largest beech trees in the country. The scenery from all parts of this domain are rich and beautiful, considerably heightened by the fine sheet of water called Radnor mere. Rising above the grounds is Alderley Edge, from the summit of which is presented one of the finest views in this county. The whole parish, which is decidedly agricultural, contained, in 1821, about 1,500 inhabitants.

CUMBERLAND

IS a maritime and northern county, bounded on the west by the Irish sea, on the east by the counties of Northumberland and Durham, on the south by those of Westmoreland and Lancashire, and on the north it is separated from Scotland by the waters of the Solway, the Scot's dyke, and the river Liddal. The greatest extent of the county is about 80 miles, but its mean length is not more than 60; its general breadth is 35, and its circumference 224 miles. It contains 970,000 acres, of these about 342,000 comprise the mountainous districts, 470,000 are enclosed, and chiefly under cultivation, 150,000 are in low commons, capable of improvement, and 8,000 in lakes and waters.

The ANCIENT HISTORY of Cumberland has given much interesting employment to the antiquarian: its name is derived from the Cimbri or Cumbri, who were the aboriginal inhabitants, but who were, in common with those of Yorkshire, Lancashire, Durham, and Westmoreland, called by Ptolemy, the Brigantes. When Cumberland was conquered by the Saxons it became part of the kingdom of Northumberland, and was then by its new lords first called Lumbra-land or Lumer-land, the land or county of the Cumbri; hence the easy transition to the present mode of spelling "Cumberland." A little below Carlisle was the famous Pict's wall, built in the year 121, by the emperor Adrian, across the island, from the German ocean to the Irish sea; about 100 miles in length, eight feet broad and twelve high, to prevent the incursions of the Picts and Scots: the remains of this wall are to this day still discernable in several places. At the time of the Norman conquest Cumberland was so impoverished, that William the Conqueror remitted all its taxations; for which reason it is not rated in the doomsday book as other counties are. The surface of this county is extremely irregular and broken; the districts to the south-west exhibit a gigantic combination of lofty and rugged mountains, promiscuously thrown together, but enclosing many beautiful though narrow vallies, as well as fine lakes, rivers, and some extensive woodlands: on the east side another range of hills stretches away to Scotland. Along the western shore is a strip of cultivated land, from two to four miles in width, but the woodlands are but few, and the general appearance of this district is bleak and naked, presenting extensive moors.

The SOILS are various: along the western boundary they have been classed under the divisions of fertile clays, or strong loams, which occupy but a small portion of the county, and are chiefly appropriated to the growth of wheat; dry loams and light sandy soils prevailing, with wet loam through other parts; and black peat earth in the mountainous districts. The climate varies considerably; the lower parts of the county are mild and temperate, while on the higher grounds, and upon the mountains and their vicinity, the air is cold and piercing; but all parts are healthy, though subject to great and frequent falls of rain, particularly in the autumn, which makes the harvests precarious. About eight miles to the S.E. of Carlisle is an immense bed of gypsum, or plaster of Paris, which is worked to great profit.

MINES and MINERALS.—The mineralogical productions of this county are rich and varied, and include lead, copper and iron ores, zinc, cobalt, antimony, and black lead. The lead mines are chiefly in Alstone moor; the most considerable copper mines are near Caldbeck, at Hesketh Newmarket, in Borrowdale; and at Newlands, in the neighbourhood of Keswick. At Crowgarth, in the parish of Egremont, is an iron mine, which is unrivalled for productiveness in Great Britain: in 1791-2 upwards of 20,000 tons were supplied to the Carron foundry and some other places. The famous black lead or wadd mines are situated at the head of Borrowdale, in a place difficult of access; and the richness and quality of the substance is unrivalled by any mine of the like material in the world. Valuable seams of coal are found in several parts; those about 12 miles to the east of Carlisle are productive, and of superior quality.

RIVERS and LAKES.—The rivers and smaller streams are numerous; the principal are the Eden, the Eamont, the Uddon, the Ehen, the Derwent, the Greata, the Cocker, the Ellen, the Waver, the Wampool, the Caldew, the Peteril, the Esk, the Liddal, the Line or Leven, the Irthing, and the Gelt. The greater number of those rivers are not benefited in their navigation by the flowing of the tide inland, to a larger extent than from two to three miles, though the county enjoys an extent of sixty-seven miles of sea coast. In 1823 a large ship canal, navigable for vessels of 100 tons burthen, was completed; it is 11 miles in length, and forms a communication between the city of Carlisle and the Solway frith. This romantic county abounds with lakes, the principal are known by the name of Ulls-water, about nine miles in length and three-quarters of a mile in breadth; Thirls-mere, or Leathes-water, a narrow irregular sheet, about three miles in length, skirts the bay of Helvellyn; Derwent-water, or Keswick lake, of an oval figure, about three miles in length and about one and a half in breadth; Bassenthwaite-water, or Broad-water, about three miles north of Keswick lake, is four miles long and one at its greatest breadth, and is surrounded with beautiful scenery; Over-water, in a barren situation, is about half a mile in length and a quarter in breadth; Lowes-water, above Mellbreak, about a mile long and a quarter broad; Crummock-water expands its pellucid bosom beneath lofty mountains, and extends nearly four miles in length and half a mile in breadth; Buttermere water, about a mile south of Crummock lake, from which it is separated by a beautiful and luxuriant vale, is about a mile and a half long and half a mile broad, into which numerous torrents pour down from the mountains, one of the roaring cataracts falling between four and five hundred yards; Ennerdale-water rests beneath the mountains, near to Whitehaven, and is guarded by craggy and almost impassable heights, its length being about two miles and its breadth three quarters of a mile; Waste-water expands its crystal surface in the bosom of Waste-dale to the length of three miles, and in breadth about three quarters of a mile; Burnmoor-tarn, lying among wild mountains, near Miter dale, covers about 250 acres; Devock-water, among the hills S.E. of Ravenglass; Talkin-tarn and Tindale-tarn possess about fifty acres each; and Turnwaddling covers a hundred acres, at Armathwaite.

The principal MANUFACTURES of Cumberland are the spinning and manufacturing of cotton into various fabrics, and calico-printing. Coarse linens, checks, woollens, &c. are also produced in several of the towns, and Carlisle has been long famous for its gingham: several paper mills are established in different parts of the county: earthenware is manufactured near Dearham and other parts: hats are also manufactured to a considerable extent; and near Workington are iron works, which employ several hundred workmen. Cumberland returns six members to serve in parliament, viz. two for the county, two for the city of Carlisle, and two for the borough of Cockermouth: the present members for the county are, Sir J. Lowther, Bart. and John C. Curwen, Esq. The county is divided into five wards, synonymous with the hundreds of other counties: they are ALLERDALE above Darwent, ALLERDALE below Darwent, CUMBERLAND, ESKDALE, and LEATH: these contain, one city (Carlisle), seventeen market towns, and one hundred and twelve parishes.

POPULATION.—According to the returns ordered by parliament, in 1821, there were houses inhabited 27,246, uninhabited 908, and houses building 155. The number of families then resident in the county was 31,804, comprising 75,600 males and 80,524 females, total 156,124: and by a calculation made by government, which included those in the army and navy, for which was added after the ratio of about one to fifty, to the returns made from the several districts, the population of the county in round numbers, in the year 1700, was 62,300—in 1750, 86,900—in 1801, 121,100—in 1811, 138,300—and in 1821, 159,300. The increase of population in the fifty years from 1700 was 24,600, from 1750 to 1801 the increase was 34,200, from 1801 to 1811 the increase was 17,200, and from 1811 to 1821 the increase number of persons was 21,000: the grand total increase of population in the county, from the year 1700 to the census of 1821, being about 97,000 persons.

ALSTONE & NEIGHBOURHOOD.

ALSTONE MOOR is a parish, containing an inconsiderable market town, in the ward of Leath, 14 miles from Kirkoswald and 29 from Penrith. This is the most eastern town in the county, and is situated on the declivity of a steep hill, near the river Tyne, over which is an ancient and narrow stone bridge. The houses forming the town are chiefly built of stone and roofed with slate. In the vicinity are some productive lead mines, which, prior to the rebellion in 1715, belonged to James, Earl of Derwentwater; but on the attainder of that nobleman, became the property of the crown, and were by his late majesty granted in aid of the revenues of Greenwich hospital. These mines afford employment to many hundred miners, by whom, and by persons connected with the business, the country is chiefly inhabited, and to which the town is principally indebted for the trade it enjoys. The country round here, and especially for many miles on the road to Kirkoswald, is bleak and desolate, and the produce of the soil insufficient for the supply of the population. Here is a church and a national school. The weekly market, which is on Saturday, is chiefly supplied with provisions from the borders of Northumberland. Fairs are the last Thursday in May and first Thursday in September, for horses, cattle, and linen and woollen cloths.

GARRIGILL, a chapelry, in this parish, contains about 1,300 inhabitants, & Alstone parish about 4,400.

BRAMPTON,

AND THE PARISHES OF HIGH & LOW CROSBY, NETHER DENTON, & NEIGHBOURHOODS.

BRAMPTON is a small market town, in a parish of the same name, in the ward of Eskdale, and is the capital of the barony of Gilsland. It is $9\frac{1}{2}$ miles from Carlisle, the like distance from Longtown, 27 from Penrith, by Longtown, and 21 by way of Kirkoswald, and 311 from London. The town is long and straggling, of considerable antiquity, situated in a deep and narrow vale, round which the country swells into considerable eminences. The working class here are chiefly employed in weaving checks, gingham, &c. for the manufacturing houses in Carlisle, and spinning and weaving linen for domestic uses. The church is a neat stone building, and has lately been repaired at considerable expence, when a square tower was added to it and a peal of good bells hung therein, presented by the Rev. Thos. Ramshaw, the vicar. Here are also three dissenting chapels and an hospital for six poor men. The lord of the manor or honour is the Earl of Carlisle, who holds a court in April and October, over the market place. The market day is on Wednesday, which is well supplied with corn and provisions of all sorts, woollens, drapery, &c. The two chartered fairs are the 13th June and 12th September, for cattle and merchandize. In 1821 the population of the whole parish of Brampton was 2,921, of which number about 2,450 were in the township.

HIGH CROSBY, four miles, and LOW CROSBY, three and a half miles east from Carlisle, are two small villages, in the parish of Crosby-upon-Eden, and in the ward of Eskdale. The parish contains about 400 inhabitants, and the two townships about 300 of that number.

DENTON-NETHER is a parish and village in the same hundred as Crosby, four miles from Carlisle, containing, in 1821, about 400 inhabitants.

CARLISLE,

AND THE VILLAGES OF STANWIX, DALSTON, WARWICK, WARWICK BRIDGE, CARLETON, BOWNESS AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

CARLISLE, an ancient city, and the see of a bishop, is in the district ward called "Cumberland," distant from the metropolis 301 miles, from Edinburgh 90, from Dumfries 39, and from Penrith 18.
It is situated on the great road between London and the north, is a great thoroughfare for mails and other coaches, and greatly resorted to by travellers.

The remote accounts of this city are involved in considerable obscurity; and those which relate to it previous to the time of the Romans should be received with caution. It was by them termed Luguballium or Luguvallum, signifying a place surrounded by waters;
the Saxons abbreviated it to Luel, and prefixed the word Caer or City, forming the word Caerluel, whence is derived its present name. The famous Picts wall ran near to the town, and vestiges of this ancient extensive work are still to be seen in many places. In the neighbourhood have been found at sundry times a vast number of Roman coins, altars and other antiquities; tending to establish the evidence of antiquarians, that this situation was one of importance to the Romans previous to the destruction of the city by the Scots and Picts. William Rufus was the great restorer of the city, and caused many public buildings to be erected, which he well defended. King Edward I. brought Carlisle into particular notice in the thirty-fifth year of his reign, when he summoned his parliament to meet here. In the civil wars between the houses of York and Lancaster, this city was much harrassed. During Aske's rebellion, Nicholas Musgrave, Thomas Tilby, and other favourers of that cause besieged Carlisle with 8000 men, but were repulsed, and on their return encountered by the Duke of Norfolk, who caused all the captains, except Musgrave, to be hanged on Carlisle walls. In the reign of Elizabeth, Mary Queen of Scots taking refuge in England, after the decisive battle of Langside, was imprisoned by her royal relative in the castle of this city. Its municipal government is vested partly in commissioners of police, under an act obtained in 1827, and partly by a corporation as old as Henry II; which consists of a mayor, aldermen, recorder, and common council, who elect their successors. Assizes for the county are held here twice in the year; and the quarter county sessions at Easter and Midsummer; the court of the mayor and bailiffs sits every Monday to try actions of debt and in trover, of forty shillings and upwards; and four times a year for the recovery of debts under forty shillings. A court of sessions is also held four times a year before the mayor and two senior aldermen, on the day preceding the county sessions; and the dean and chapter, and the Duke of Devonshire hold courts leet and baron in the suburbs for their respective manors. The city sends two members to parliament; the right of voting is with the freemen, in number about 800, their freedom being acquired by birth and servitude. The mayor is the returning officer. The present members are Sir J. Graham, Baronet, and Colonel Lushington; the latter gentleman having been elected after a severe contest, on Thursday, the 16th of August, 1827; when the number polled for Colonel Lushington was 362, and for W. Lawson, Esq. 323, giving a majority to the one elected of 39.

The town is regularly built, the houses in general good, and many of them finished in the modern style. English-street, leading directly to the north, is spacious and adorned with elegant buildings, and terminates at the Market-place. The town hall commands a view up this street, and likewise towards Scotch-street. It contains two spacious apartments, one of which is used by the corporation to transact all city business, the other for the purpose of holding the mayor's court, electing members of parliament for the city, holding the court of assize, &c. From the Market-place, the principal streets called Scotch-street, Castle-street, and Fisher-street, diverge as from a centre; and at the head of the latter, and facing the Market-place, is the ancient guildhall. Here are two parish churches, St. Mary's, attached to the cathedral, and St. Cuthbert's, both parishes extending into the suburbs. The cathedral is situated near the centre of the city, and is a venerable building, erected at various periods and of different styles of architecture. The bishopric was erected by Henry VIII. out of the spoils of a mitred abbey; the revenue of the bishop is supposed to amount to 6 or £8000. per annum: the chapter consists of a dean, prebend, minor canons, &c. The right reverend the bishop is - - - and the dean the Rev. Dr. Hodgson. The livings of St. Mary's and St. Cuthbert's are perpetual curacies, in the gift of the dean and chapter; the present incumbent of the former is the Rev. Wm. Reece, and of St. Cuthbert's the Rev. John Fawcett; this is a plain modern building, erected in 1778, on the site of the old structure, at the expence of the parishioners. The other places of worship are, chapels for the methodists, independents, Roman catholics, baptists, a Scotch presbyterian meeting-house, and one for a society of primitive methodists. The institutions and schools, which reflect honor upon the citizens and other supporters, are a dispensary and fever house, a large charity school for elementary instruction, a number of Sunday schools, and St. Patrick's school, founded in 1825, for the education of 400 children of all religious denominations, the ground for the erection of which was munificently given by the Duke of Devonshire. Here are also a mechanic's institute, a large subscription library, two news rooms, and an academy of arts, established in 1822, which has an annual exhibition. Two newspapers are published here on Saturday.

The manufactures brought to perfection in Carlisle are of an important character; they embrace the weaving of checks and gingham, and other cotton fabrics, calico printing, and the manufacture of cotton twist, much of which is exported. Hats are also made here of a superior quality; there are also extensive dye-works, and three iron foundries upon a large scale; but the cotton trade is by far of the greatest consequence to the manufacturing interest here. The barony of Gilsland, 12 miles to the east, abounds with excellent coal, and it is from that district Carlisle is chiefly supplied; other pits, about 15 miles w. s. w. also produce coal, but of an inferior quality. This town is very happily situated as regards the supply of water, that indispensable element towards the comfort of its inhabitants, and to the purposes of trade. The Caldew, a pure and rapid stream, upon the banks of which are turning machines and cotton mills, runs on the west side of the city, dividing it from the suburbs, and increases the waters of the Eden; which is a large and beautiful river, but too rapid for navigation, passing close by here, and is crossed by a very handsome bridge. The Peteril, on the south side, also flows into the Eden; which, in its turn, empties itself into the Solway Frith. In 1823 the "Carlisle Ship Canal" was completed, extending from hence to the Solway at Fisher's cross, a distance of about 11 miles, and is navigable for vessels of from 80 to 100 tons burthen. Between this town and Liverpool is an easy and swift communication by means of steam boats, which ply every other day. A rail-road from Newcastle-upon-Tyne is in progress, and, when completed, will certainly prove of incalculable advantage to the neighbourhood. The seats, mansions, and castles that surround this city, within the distance of about ten miles are numerous. Amongst the many eminently deserving of notice, are Naworth castle, a very ancient, noble, and baronial fortress, the seat of the Earl of Carlisle, about 10 miles east; Corby castle, about 6 miles south-east, the seat of H. Howard, Esq.; Warwick hall, 5 miles north-east, the seat of H. Parker, Esq.; Hayton castle, 9 miles south-east, the seat of T. H. Graham, Esq.; Netherby, 10 miles north, the seat of Sir J. Graham, Bart. M.P.; Scaleby castle, a very ancient edifice, the seat of R. Fawcett, Esq.; Rose castle, 6 miles south, the seat of the late Bishop of Carlisle; Armswithe castle, 11 miles south-east, the seat of Major Yates, &c. &c. These residences have each their peculiar beauties as to situation. Carlisle is delightfully situated in an extensive vale, surrounded by scenery which, whether contemplated from the city, or from other points in approaching to it, is of a most imposing and varied character. The grounds on all sides of the town are fertile and well cultivated; and at a distance are visible those celebrated mountains, Skiddaw, Saddleback, and Cross-fell. The approach from the south is beautiful and picturesque. The eye commands an extensive prospect towards the north and east, and in the middle the city rises, overtopped by the massive towers of the castle on the west; the cathedral still higher in the centre, and in the east arise the embattled towers of the new courts of justice, on the site of the ancient citadel. Passing Botchergate, the road winds round the western tower of the citadel, and passes the English gate and county gaol: on each avenue the city wall is visible. The market days are Wednesdays and Saturdays. Fairs on the Saturdays preceding Whitsuntide and Martinmas, for the sale of cattle and for the hiring of servants, on the 26th of August and for fourteen days after, the charter for which provides, that no attachment issuing out of the city civil courts shall be put in execution during the continuance of the fair: this is termed the "first fair;" and on September 19th is what is called the "second fair." Horse races are held here annually, which are well attended. By the census of 1821 the population of Carlisle was, St. Mary's parish 3,930 inhabitants, St. Cuthbert's 5,884, and in Caldewgate, Cummersdale, and Rickerate 5,662 inhabitants, total 15,476.

STANWIX, a village and parish, is part in the ward of Eskdale, and the remaining part in Cumberland ward, delightfully situated on a gentle acclivity, on the other side of the river, very near to Carlisle, the approach to which is across the Eden bridge.

DALSTON, a village and parish, is rather more than 4 miles from Carlisle and 17 from Penrith, pleasantly situated on the river Caldew, the stream of which is applied to working the machinery of three cotton mills, a flax mill, and a flour mill: at a forge in this parish are made a great number of spades and other instruments of husbandry. There is a small market on Friday, for the sale of butcher's meat, vegetables, &c. The population of the whole parish, in 1821, was 2,716, and of Dalston township about 1,000 of that number.

WARWICK and WARWICK BRIDGE, two small straggling villages, about five miles east of Carlisle, situated on, and separated by the river Eden. The parish church is in Warwick village, a small building, where service is performed every third Sunday, by the Rev. Mr. Stanger, who does also the duty of the two adjoining parishes. The extensive cotton mills of Messrs. P. Dixon & Sons, and a corn mill, are at Warwick bridge, and a small catholic chapel. The inhabitants of the villages are chiefly employed in agriculture. The parish contains about 500 inhabitants, 250 being in the township.

CARLETON is a very pleasant, genteel little village, three miles from Carlisle; in the parish of St. Cuthbert without, situate upon the river Peveril, and on the main road to London. The number of inhabitants is about 200.

BOWNESS, a small village and parish, situated upon the banks of the Solway, is 14 miles N.W. from Carlisle, and about 3 from Dumburg. The principal part of the inhabitants derive their support from fishing, the product of their labour being chiefly disposed of in Carlisle. There is a church in the village, the incumbent of which is the Rev. U. M. S. Preston. The Solway is fordable here at low water, but when the tide is in it appears like a vast expanse of sea, and is navigated by vessels of considerable burthen. During the season several vessels from North America discharge their cargoes of timber here. The parish, in 1821, contained about 1,200, and the township about 500 inhabitants.

POST OFFICE, Blackfriars-st, CARLISLE, Robert Porter, Post Master.—Letters are despatched to LONDON, LEEDS, all parts of YORKSHIRE, and all the towns between, and South of LONDON, every evening at seven.—To MANCHESTER, LIVERPOOL, BIRMINGHAM, and the West of ENGLAND, at a quarter before seven every evening.—To EDINBRO', GLASGOW, North & West of SCOTLAND, and NEWCASTLE-UPON-TYNE, at seven every morning.—To DUMFRIES, PORTPATRICK, DONAGHADEE and North of IRELAND, at seven every morning.—To DUBLIN, CORK, South of IRELAND and ISLE OF MAN, the letters go by the MANCHESTER mail.—To WIGTON, a horse post every morning at seven.—To the WEST INDIES, MEDITERRANEAN, GIBRALTAR, BUENOS AYRES, BRAZIL, PORTUGAL and AMERICA, the letters are sent by the MANCHESTER mail, via FALMOUTH: FRANCE, and the CONTINENT, EAST INDIES, &c. by the LONDON mail.—Office hours—the office opens for delivery of letters, from LONDON and the South, at half-past seven every morning.—The letters from SCOTLAND and the North are ready for delivery at seven every evening.—All letters for LONDON and the South must be in the office before six in the evening, and for SCOTLAND and the North by six in the morning.—The post office closes at nine every night, the letter box remains open all night.

COCKERMOUTH,

BRIGHAM, BRIDEKIRK, PAPCASTLE AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

COCKERMOUTH is a borough and market town, in the parish of Brigham, and in the ward of Allerdale above Derwent, 305 miles from London, 25 from Carlisle, 15 from Whitehaven, and 7 from Maryport and Workington. It is seated on the south side of the river Derwent, and at the mouth of the Cocker, whence its name is derived; the latter river flowing through the town previous to its junction with the Derwent, is crossed by a bridge connecting the eastern and south-western parts of the town. Another bridge of two arches, 270 feet in length, crosses the Derwent. The town, although neat and clean, is not regularly built; lying between two hills, upon one of which are the remains of an ancient castle, built by William the Conqueror, which was besieged and burnt by Oliver Cromwell; and upon the other, the church of All Saints, first erected in the reign of Edward III. rebuilt in 1711, and in 1825 considerably enlarged. It is now a commodious edifice, surmounted by a steeple, containing a peal of six bells, with a clock and chimes: the curacy is perpetual, in the gift of the Earl of Lonsdale, and the Rev. Edward Fawcett is the present curate. The other places of worship are, a methodist and independent chapels, and a friend's meeting house. Here are a free grammar school, charity and Sunday schools; and an alms-house for six poor widows, founded by the Rev. Thomas Leathes. The town is governed by a bailiff, returned by a jury of burgesses, at a court leet, held within a month after Michaelmas day in each year, by the lord of the manor, the Earl of Egremont. A court baron is also held every three weeks, for the recovery of small debts: and a court leet at Easter and Michaelmas, to try presentments for nuisances, &c. At the town hall are held the county Epiphany quarter sessions. Cockermouth has enjoyed the privilege of representation since the year 1640; it sends two members to parliament, which are elected by the burghage freeholders: the bailiff is the returning officer, and the present members are Lord Gariestown and Lawrence Peel, Esq. This town possesses many local advantages of situation, the surrounding country being populous and fertile, having a plentiful supply of water from two fine streams, and three sea ports within a short distance. Its trade comprises the manufacture of woollens, cotton checks, thread, tanned leather, hats, &c. Upon the streams of the Derwent and Cocker are corn and spinning mills, a paper mill, and a carding mill; and about three miles distant, at Greysouthen and Broughton, are extensive coal mines. The views from the high grounds over the country around here, are of a pleasing and varied character, embracing clear streams, fertile vallies, and wood-clad hills. At STANGER, in this neighbourhood, is a mineral spring of celebrated efficacy in the curing scorbutic and scrofulous complaints. Here is a market for corn on Mondays, and one for butcher's meat, vegetables, &c. on Saturday: there are also cattle shows every alternate Wednesday. The fairs are on Whit-Monday, and the Monday nearest to Martinmas, for hiring servants, &c. Cattle fairs, the Monday previous to Easter Monday, the first and third Wednesday in May, and the 10th October. In 1821 the population of the whole parish of Brigham, including about 3,800 inhabitants in the Borough of Cockermouth, was 6,037.

BRIGHAM village is about three miles west from Cockermouth, and is the name of a parish containing five townships, four chapelries, and the borough of Cockermouth: about 400 inhabitants are in the township of Brigham.

BRIDEKIRK is a small village and parish, in the ward of Allerdale below Derwent, about two miles north of Cockermouth. The small parish church here contains a very curious and ancient font, with a Danish inscription on it, in Runic characters. In the parish are about 1,700 inhabitants, of which number about 150 are in the village.

The village of PAPCASTLE is about two miles from Cockermouth, in Bridekirk parish, very pleasantly situated on the banks of the Derwent, and has been much noticed by antiquarians on account of the great number of Roman vessels, coins, &c. which have been dug up in its vicinity. In 1821 about 400 persons composed its population.

EGREMONT, ST. BEES, & THE VILLAGE OF CLEATOR.

EGREMONT, anciently spelled Egremond, is a small market town, in the ward of Allerdale above Derwent, 293 miles from London and 6 from Whitehaven. It is pleasantly situated, about two miles from the sea, on the northern side of a vale, watered by the river Ehen, upon which are a number of corn mills, and others for the spinning of flax, linen yarn, &c. also a large machine paper mill. In the reign of Edward I. this town enjoyed the privilege of representation in parliament, but it has long since been disfranchised, through the petition of the electors. The government of the town is in a borough serjeant, or chief constable, and a jury. The Earl of Egremont is lord of the manor, and holds a court leet, at the King's Arm's Inn, twice in the year; a court baron is also held once in three weeks, for the recovery of debts under 40s. The parish church, a neat erection, dedicated to St. Mary, is a rectory; the patronage is in the Earl, and the incumbent is the Rev. Alexander Scott. Here are also a methodist chapel, a national school, and a poor house. On the summit of an eminence, at the west end of the town, are the ruins of a castle, built by William de Mechines, about the twelfth century: though not very extensive, yet it appears to have been a building of great strength. In the parish are four iron ore mines, which are worked to advantage, and in the neighbourhood is great quantity of lime stone. The general appearance of the land round the town is agricultural, and a great portion is exceedingly fertile. The market day is on Saturday, and the fairs are 18th February for horses, and 18th September for cattle, &c. The population of the parish in 1821 was 1,741.

ST. BEES is a small village, in an extensive parish of that name, in the same ward as Egremont; the village is four miles from Whitehaven, and contains an ancient church, dedicated to St. Begh: Lord Lonsdale is the patron of the living, and the Rev. Dr. Ainger is the present incumbent. Here is an eminent school, founded by Archbishop Grindale, in the reign of Elizabeth, at which has been educated many respectable clergymen and learned men; the head master of which is appointed from Queen College. In 1819 a clerical institution was established here, by Dr. Law, the then bishop of Chester; from hence young men go to be ordained by the bishop. No fairs or markets are held here, nor is it a place of trade or manufacture. In 1821 the entire parish of St. Bees contained, including the town of Whitehaven, 19,169 inhabitants, of which number only about 650 were in the township.

POST OFFICE, EGREMONT, Isaac Bateman, Post Master.—Letters arrive from WHITEHAVEN at eleven every morning, and are despatched at one in the afternoon.—A mail gig (from WHITEHAVEN) to ULVERSTON, passes through EGREMONT every Tuesday, Friday, and Sunday morning, about eight o'clock, and takes letters and passengers through BOOTLE and BROUGHTON, and returns every Monday, Tuesday, and Saturday, hour uncertain.

HESKET, HIGH AND LOW, ARMTHWAITE, AND NEIGHBOURHOOD.

HESKET, HIGH and LOW, are two small villages, in the parish of Hesketh-in-the-forest, and in the ward of Leath, situated on the road from Carlisle to Penrith; Hesketh High being 9 miles from each place, and Hesketh Low 10 from Penrith and 8 from Carlisle. In the immediate vicinity of these villages are several valuable quarries of gypsum, of a fine quality. High Hesketh is peculiarly noted for the singular circumstance of the court of Inglewood Forest being holden in it annually, on St. Barnabas' day, in the open air, by the highway side, at a place marked only by a single thorn; where the dues are paid to the lord of the forest, and other manorial business disposed of.

In 1821 the number of inhabitants in the entire parish was about 1,800, and in the township of Nether and Upper Hesketh about 800 of that number.

ARMTHWAITE, Armathwaite, or Armsthwaite, is a small village, about 13 miles from Carlisle, pleasantly situated upon the banks of the Eden; a short distance from which is the castle of Armathwaite; seated in a deep vale, surrounded by scenery of the most romantic description.

HESKET NEWMARKET,

IREBY, CALDBECK, BOLTON, SEBERGHAM, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

HESKET NEWMARKET, a small market town, in the parish of Caldbeck, 9 miles south of Wigton, 13
south-west of Carlisle, and 14 north-west of Penrith:
it is situated in a secluded but delightful part of the county, upon the river Caldew, which runs close at the bottom of the town, and near it is a petrifying spring issuing from a rock: the country at a short distance round Hesketh is mountainous, and produces lead, silver, copper, and manganese, and about 3 miles distant, at a place called Carrickbeck, are some smelting works. The church is at Caldbeck, about a mile distant, and the population returns are made up with that parish.

CALDBECK, a small village, in the parish of the same name, one mile north-west from Hesketh, is very delightfully situated, and in its immediate neighbourhood are some beautifully romantic views. The old Caldew river runs close to the village, and in a sequestered part of it, about a quarter of a mile distant, is an interesting natural curiosity, called "Howk fall," where the river appears to have made its way through the rocks, and formed some large caverns, which may be entered from the bed of the river, in summer, when there is but little water. A manufactory has been long established here, for blankets, duffels, flannels, stocking yarn, &c.; here is also a brewery,
a small paper mill, a fulling mill, and a dye house.

Lead mines, about 3 miles to the south, have been a long time worked to but little advantage; they are,
however, likely to prove more successful, as ore to some encouraging extent has been discovered, and also a good proportion of silver. Here is a good sized church, the Rev. James Lynn, of Keswick, is rector, and the Rev. William Pattinson is curate. The whole parish contained, in 1821, about 1,600 inhabitants.

IREBY, in a parish of the same name, and divided into Ireby Low and High, is a very small market town of no note or trade, 8 miles from Wigton, on the road to Keswick, from which it is 13 miles.
The church, which is very small, is some short distance from the place, and is under the dean and chapter of Carlisle; the Rev. James Marshall is curate. Here is a small market weekly, and a horse fair is held on the 21st February, and one for sheep
the 18th of October. The parish contains about 500 inhabitants.

BOLTON is a small village, about 7 miles southwest of Wigton, and a mile from Ireby. The parish of Bolton is large, in which are extensive coal and lime works, belonging to the Earl of Egremont. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in agriculture, and the coal and lime works. Bolton, High and Low, contains about 1,100 inhabitants.

Cumberland. HESKET NEWMARKET, &c. Pigot & Co.'s

SEBERGHAM is a parish, in a picturesque vale, 3 miles north of Hesketh Newmarket, through the middle of which the river Caldew meanders. A small but handsome church is at a place called Sebergham Church Town. The number of inhabitants in the high and low townships is about 900.

KESWICK,

AND THE PARISH OF CROSTHWAITE, BORROWDALE, & NEIGHBOURHOOD.

KESWICK is an ancient market town and chapelry, in the parish of Crosthwaite, and in the ward of Allerdale below Derwent, 293 miles from London, 15 from Wigton, and 12 from Cockermouth. It is pleasantly situated in a deep valley, near the lower end of Derwentwater, and under vast mountains full of mines and minerals. The town consists of one long street, the houses of which are built of stone, and protected from the north winds by the stupendous mountain of Skiddaw, which rises 3,500 feet above the level of the sea, and has its base about 3 miles from the town. The commissioners and governors of Greenwich hospital, holding the Derwentwater estates, are lords of the manor, and hold a court in the town's hall, in the spring and autumn, when a constable is chosen, who is the only peace officer here. The parish church of Crosthwaite, standing about three quarters of a mile N.W. of the town, is an ancient structure, with a tower and six bells: it is a vicarage, the patronage of which is in the see of Carlisle; the Rev. James Lynn is the present vicar. There are besides in the parish, five chapels of ease under the establishment; one dissenting and one methodists' meeting house: here are also a free school and a workhouse. The manufactures of this place consist chiefly of coarse woollen goods; and an establishment for making some of finer textures has been recently opened by Mr. Thomas Banks. Upon the Greata river, which passes by here, are corn mills, and a forge for making spades, scythes, and edge tools. A great quantity of black lead pencils are made here; and in the mountains of Newlands mines of copper and lead were formerly worked to a considerable extent; a vein of lead ore is now productively working, below Derwent lake. Keswick is highly worthy of the note it enjoys as the fashionable resort of a great number of strangers in the summer season. Its situation is of the most romantic and picturesque character, diversified by lofty mountains, lakes, woods, and waterfalls. The beautiful limpid lake of Derwent, is half a mile south of the town, the banks of which are ornamented by several tasteful and rural seats, the summer residences of opulent individuals. A mile and a half south of Keswick is a remarkable arrangement of rude granite stones of various forms, about fifty in number, which form a circle, and is called the "Druid's Temple;" they are rough and unhewn, of different sizes, some being upwards of eight feet in height. A short distance to the south of Derwent lake are two mineral springs, which were formerly in high repute. The weekly market is on Saturday. Fairs are on the Saturday before Whitsunday, and the Saturday next to the 11th of November, for the hiring of servants; there is also another on the 29th of October for sheep, and cheese of a poor description. The population of Keswick has augmented since 1821, when it contained about 1,900 inhabitants.

CROSTHWAITHE can only be named as a parish, containing other dependent townships and the parish church. The whole parish contained, in 1821, about 4,000 inhabitants.

BORROWDALE is a chapelry, in the parish of Crosthwaite, and is the name of a district, wherein rude nature seems to have disported herself, and gathered together objects, at once awful, grand, and interesting: rocky chasms, dark caverns, inaccessible precipices, and beetling rocks, are the features that present themselves in wild variety round here. At the head of Borrowdale, about nine miles from Keswick, to the east of a very steep mountain, are the famous black lead mines, which are guarded by vast promontories and sudden projections of naked rocks, intersected by fearful and fathomless chasms. The chapelry contains about 350 inhabitants.

KIRKOSWALD,

AND THE PARISH OF LAZONBY, AND NEIGHBOURHOOD.

KIRKOSWALD, a small market town, in the parish of that name, and in the ward of Leath, is 292 miles from London, 15 from Carlisle, 14 from Alstone and Brampton, and 7 from Penrith. It is situated on the east side of the river Eden, surrounded by lofty hills and fertile land, beautifully interspersed with rivulets, waterfalls, and pleasant walks. In the neighbourhood, which is highly respectable, are the seats of several persons of distinction. Four miles to the west is Eden hall, the splendid mansion of the late Sir Philip Musgrave, baronet; about two miles north-east is the nunnery, the seat of Major Aglionby, in a picturesque and retired situation; and in the town is an ancient house called the college, a noble mansion, the residence of C. S. Featherstonhaugh, Esq. The church, dedicated to St. Oswald, is an ancient structure, situated near the foot of the town: it is a curacy, in the gift of the crown. About 200 yards from the church is the tower, placed upon a high mount, from the summit of which the views are very extensive. About a quarter of a mile east of the town are the ruins of an ancient castle, belonging, in the reign of King John, to Sir Hugh Morvil, but now the property of the Musgrave family. This is a place of very little trade: here are a paper and corn mills, and one for carding wool. The market is on Monday for corn, &c. The fairs are on the Thursday before Whitsunday and the 5th of August, but they are of very little benefit to the town. The population of the parish, in 1821, was 1,069, about 300 of that number belonging to the township of STAFFOLD, or STAFFIELD.

LAZONBY is a parish, containing a small pleasant village, about one mile from Kirkoswald, on the north bank of the Eden. It contains about 800 inhabitants, including 270 in the township of PLUMPTON WALL.

POST.—Letters are despatched for all parts of the kingdom on Tuesday and Friday morning, to Penrith, by a common carrier, who returns the same evening with letters for Kirkoswald, &c.

LONGTOWN, NETHERBY, AND NEIGHBOURHOOD.

LONGTOWN is a pleasant and small market town, in the parish of Arthuret, in the ward of Eskdale, 310 miles from London, 20 from Wigton, and 9 from Carlisle; situated on the mail road from the last named town to Edinburgh, and upon the banks of the Esk, near to its confluence with the Liddel. This town, which stands in the midst of the Netherby estate, is very respectable in its appearance; the houses are built in the modern style, and the streets are regular and spacious. The parish church of Arthuret is about a quarter of a mile from the town, of which the Rev. Fergus Graham is the rector, and the Rev. J. S. Nichol, curate. Petty sessions are held here every Monday, before the Rev. Thos. Ranishaw and Wm. Ponsonby Johnston, Esqrs. magistrates.

NETHERBY township, about 2 miles from Longtown, contains Netherby Hall, the elegant mansion of Sir J. R. G. Graham, Baronet, M. P. it is situated on an eminence, commanding an extensive prospect over a flat but well cultivated country, interestingly spotted with pleasant hamlets and neat cottages, which, being all whitened, have a remarkable and picturesque effect upon the verdant landscape. A market is held at Longtown on Monday. The entire parish of Arthuret contained, in 1821, 2,953 inhabitants, of which number 1,813 were in the township of Longtown, and about 500 in Netherby.

POST OFFICE, LONGTOWN, Robert Little, Post Master.—The LONDON mail is despatched at five o'clock every afternoon; and the EDINBURGH mail every morning at eight.

MARYPORT,AND THE VILLAGES OF ALLONBY, FLIMBY, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

MARYPORT, a sea port and market town, is a chapelry, partly in the parish of Cross Cannonby and partly in Dearham parish, both in the ward of Allderdale below Derwent; 312 miles from London, 28 from Carlisle, 15 from Whitehaven, and 7 from Workington and Cockermouth. But a few years prior to 1750 this was a very insignificant place, the resort only of a few fishermen, who occupied some miserable huts along the shore; it was then called Ellen foot, being a creek at the mouth of the Ellen. In the above named year the foundations of the present town and harbour were laid, and the new town named "Maryport," by Humphrey Senhouse, Esq. the proprietor of the soil, in compliment to his wife. From that period it has progressively been approaching to its present importance; and it has now three ship building yards, and various manufactures connected with the fitting out of ships: about 130 vessels belong to the port, forming an aggregate of 2,336 tons. Checks, linens, tickings, &c. are manufactured here, but not to a great extent. The herring fishery, at certain periods, is very productive, and there are salmon and salmon trout taken in the Ellen, in considerable numbers. This river flows through the harbour and divides the town into two unequal parts, the larger division being in Cannonby parish, and the remainder in the parish of Dearham. The principal articles of shipment are, coals from the mines at Ellenborough, Unerigg, Dearham, Broughton, and Flimby; limestone from the quarries in the immediate vicinity, and from the interior, and red free stone taken from the cliff above the sea, N.E. of the town. Its imports are, timber from British and North America; and iron, flax, and Baltic produce. A large corn mill adjoins the town, and a rail-way for the conveyance of coal waggons to the harbour. Maryport is in the manor of Ellenborough, and Humphrey Senhouse, Esq. the lord holds a court baron occasionally. St. Mary's, chapel, was built here in 1760, it is a curacy in the patronage of the lord of the manor; the Rev. Anthony Dixon is the present incumbent. Here are also meeting houses for the presbyterians, dissenters, Wesleyan methodists, and quakers; and a national school, supported by voluntary contributions. The mansions of consequence near to the town are, Nether hall, upon the banks of the Ellen, the seat of Humphrey Senhouse, Esq. and Unerigg hall, the seat of J. C. Curwen, Esq. about a mile south of the town. Maryport has within these few years been much frequented in the appropriate season for sea bathing, and it has besides considerable attractions as to scenery, &c. It is partly built upon the sea shore, and partly upon a cliff of moderate elevation. The adjoining land is fertile, rising gradually from the sea into hills of some height. A quarter of a mile N.E. of the town the site of a Roman station is very conspicuous, and many relics have been found there, which are preserved at Nether hall. The views from this spot are remarkably fine; on one side the Cumberland mountains, and on the other the Solway frith, bounded by the Isle of Man, and the fine outline of the Galloway mountains. The principal market day is on Friday, and there is a smaller one also held on Tuesday. The population of Maryport, in 1821, exclusive of 600 sailors, was 3,514; but it is estimated at this period to contain upwards of 5,000 inhabitants.

ALLONBY, a village and chapelry, in the parish of Bromfield, is situate on the sea coast, 5 miles N.E. of Maryport. The town is clean and tolerably well built, and of late years has been much frequented as a place for sea bathing. At one time the herring fishery employed a great many persons, but it has greatly declined on this coast for some years past. The places of worship here are, a chapel of ease and a friend's meeting house. The lord of the manor is Captain Samuel Window, who holds a court baron annually. In 1821 the number of inhabitants in Allonby was 700, and the whole parish contained about 2,000, but the population has augmented lately.

FLIMBY, a parish, with a village of that name, is two miles from Maryport. Flimby church is a perpetual curacy, in the patronage of the land holders, who have no lord of the manor over them: the present incumbent is the Rev. Wm. Mawson. The prosperity and population of the village depend upon the number of coal mines open: at this period there are but two working. The number of inhabitants is estimated at about 500.

POST OFFICE, High street, MARYPORT, Jane Kitchen, Post Mistress.—The letters from LONDON and all other parts arrive, via COCKERMOUTH, at half-past nine every morning, and are despatched at half-past two in the afternoon.—Letters to ALLONBY are sent every morning by the Royal Sailor coach about ten, and return by the same coach in the afternoon.—ALLONBY, receiving house is at Joseph Hodgson's. Letters arrive every morning at half-past eleven, and are despatched at half-past twelve at noon.

PENRITH AND NEIGHBOURHOOD.

PENRITH is a market town, in the ward of Leath, 283 miles from London, 18 from Carlisle, 14 from Appleby, 11 from Shap, and 7 from Kirkoswald. It is situated at the foot of an eminence, in a pleasant vale, within the district called Inglewood Forest. The town is irregularly disposed, but the houses in general are well built and convenient, mostly erected with red stone, and covered with slate. The church is a neat plain structure, and was partly rebuilt in 1722. The vicarage is in the gift of the Bishop of Carlisle; the Rev. John Fenton is the present vicar. In the church-yard is a singular monument of antiquity, called the "Giant's Grave," the origin of which has frequently employed the sagacity of eminent antiquaries. It consists of two stone pillars, standing at the opposite ends of the grave, about 15 feet asunder, 11 feet 6 inches high, and 7 feet in their greatest circumference, tapering upwards. The other places of worship are, a chapel each for presbyterians, Wesleyan methodists, independents, ranters, and a friends' meeting house: here is also a free grammar school. The ruins of the castle overlook the town from the west, and give it a majestic appearance: it is supposed to have been erected some time about Edward V. and was dismantled in the time of Charles I. The Duke of Devonshire is lord of the honour of Penrith, and the markets and fairs are regulated by his bailiff: the county magistrates conduct all other business, and hold meetings every alternate Tuesday. At one period, gingham, calicoes, and some other cotton goods were manufactured here, but the introduction of machinery in other districts has tended so to reduce the price of labour, that the trade of such nature is completely extinguished in this town. In the immediate neighbourhood are four rivers, viz. the Eden, the Eamont, the Lowther, and the Petteril, none of which are navigable; and about five miles distant is the beautiful serpentine lake of Ulswater, nine miles in extent and one in breadth. The seats which impart consequence to the vicinity of Penrith are many; among the most distinguished may be mentioned, Lowther castle, four miles s.s.w. the seat of the Earl of Lonsdale; Eden hall, the seat of the late Sir J. C. Musgrave, Baronet; Hutton hall, the seat of Frederick Vane, Esq.; Graystock castle, four miles and a half west, the seat of the Honourable H. Howard; Hallsteads, at Ulswater, the seat of John Marshall, Esq.; and Brougham hall, two miles south, the seat of Henry Brougham, Esq. M.P. On the heights, to the north of Penrith, is a square stone building, called "the Beacon," well placed for giving alarm in times of danger. The ascent to it is difficult, but the prospects from the summit of the hill are so extensive and beautiful, that all remembrance of fatigue is lost in the contemplation of the delightful views which present themselves to the eye: Helvellyn, Saddleback, and their attendant mountains are seen on the west, Crossfell and the eastern chain of hills, stretching from Stanemoor, in Yorkshire, through Westmoreland and Cumberland into Scotland, are taken in the range of sight: while the home scenery displays, in rich variety, mountain and valley, silver streams, and placid lakes, fringed and embowered by woods. Races take place annually, and a respectable hunt in the neighbourhood is well attended. Market day is on Tuesday. The fairs are on the 24th of April for cattle, on Martinmas Tuesday, and the Tuesday in Whitsun-week, for hiring servants. In 1821 the parish of Penrith contained 5385 inhabitants.

RAVENGLASS,

BOOTLE, THE VILLAGE OF CALDER BRIDGE, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

RAVENGLASS, an ancient and small market
town and sea port, in the ward of Allerdale below Derwent, is 300 miles, by way of Ulverstone, from London, 18 from Whitehaven, and 12 from Egremont;
built on the borders of a creek, near the confluence of the rivers, Eske, Mite, and Irt; consisting principally of one small neat street. The harbour is a very good one, affording safe riding for vessels when put in by stress of weather. The inhabitants carry on a small coasting trade, together with fishing and raking for oysters, and the building of small vessels. The church is a rectory, in the patronage of Lord Muncaster.
The lord paramount of the manor is the Earl of Egremont, who holds a court occasionally. About three miles east from the town are ruins of considerable magnitude, called the city of Burnsear, the ruins of which are nearly three miles in circumference:

its erection is ascribed to the Danes, but no historical document is known to exist regarding it. About one mile from hence is Muncaster castle, the seat of Lord Muncaster, who has greatly improved the neighbourhood, by his application of an improved system of agriculture. The country is exceedingly pleasing, fertile and healthy, abounding in fine views, both seaward and inland. The market day is on Saturday.
Fairs are 6th of May, 8th of June, and 5th of August.
The parish of MUNCASTER, with BIRKBY chapelry, contained, in 1821, 555 inhabitants, but the census
for that year does not return the population of Ravenglass.

BOOTLE is a small but ancient market town, in the same ward as Ravenglass, and six miles south of it, upon the road to Ulverstone, from which it is distant 16 miles. It has a small church, of which the Rev. John Fleeming is the rector, and the Earl of Lonsdale the patron. There is also a chapel for the independent dissenters. The market is on Saturday. Fairs, the 5th of April for seed, corn, and hiring servants, 26th of April, 3rd of August, & 24th of September.

POST OFFICE, RAVENGLASS, William Thompson, nurseryman, Post Master.—Letters are despatched to Whitehaven, by a mail car, from Ulverstone, which carries light parcels and four passengers, and calls here on its way through Broughton and Bootle, Mondays, Thursdays, and Saturdays, and returns Tuesdays, Fridays, and Sundays. The hour is regulated by the tides.

CARRIERS.

To ULVERSTONE, through Bootle, Stephen Benson, Wednesday & Saturday forenoons, and Thomas Mawson, Monday & Thursday: both return the same evenings.
To WHITEHAVEN, from Bootle, thro' Calder Bridge and Egremont, Stephen Benson passes through Ravenglass Monday and Thursday mornings, and Henry Kitchen Tuesday and Saturday mornings: both return the same evenings.

WHITEHAVEN,

AND THE VILLAGES OF HENSINGHAM, MORESBY AND PARTON.

WHITEHAVEN, the principal sea port in Cumberland, in the parish of St. Bees, and in the ward of Allerdale above Derwent, is 320 miles from London, 41 from Carlisle, 35 from Penrith, 15 from Cockermouth and Maryport, 8 from Workington, and 6 from Egremont. The town is seated in a remarkable creek, overlooked by high ground on three sides. From the south the town makes the best appearance, commanding a view of the interior of the streets, the harbour, and the castle belonging to the Earl of Lonsdale, which form fine objects in the landscape. Descending by an excellent road from the north, between two small eminences, the traveller approaches the town by a fine arch of freestone, decorated with the arms of the Lowther family. In the year 1556 this town is said to have had only six houses, subsequently, being supported by the fostering hand of the Lowthers, it has risen to wealth and consequence; being at present the most eminent port in the coal trade except Newcastle. Two acts of parliament, passed in the reign of Queen Ann, conferred great advantages on this port; by virtue of which, the harbour was considerably improved. Whitehaven is a regular and well built town, for the most part, the streets being broad and spacious, crossing each other at right angles, and the houses built with some display of taste. The government of the town is regulated by an act of the 7th of Queen Ann, which vests it in 21 trustees, called "the trustees of the port, harbour and town of Whitehaven," elected triennially, 14 by the inhabitants carrying on trade and paying harbour dues; the lord of the manor for the time being having the appointment of six other trustees, and which, with himself, makes the number (21) enjoined by the act. The present lord of the manor is the Earl of Lonsdale, who holds a court leet annually: a court baron is also held monthly, for the recovery of debts under 40s.; and petty sessions are held Thursdays and Saturdays. Here are three chapels of ease to the mother church at St. Bees, viz. St. Nicholas, of which the incumbent is the Rev. Andrew Huddleston; the Holy Trinity, the Rev. Thos. Harrison; and St. James's, the Rev. Wm. Jackson; they are all perpetual cura-

cies in the gift of the Earl of Lonsdale. The other places of worship are, Scotch, independent, methodist, anabaptist, Roman catholic, and society of friends' meeting houses. The other public edifices and institutions are the dispensary, the house of industry, the marine school, national and Sunday schools, the theatre, the public office, Lowther-street, custom house, baths, subscription library, philosophical society's room, harmonic society's concert room, a savings' bank, and mechanics' institute. In the market place are two neat buildings, one of them appropriated for the sale of corn, flour, meal, &c. the other for fish, both of which are amply supplied; there are also two markets for shambles meat. Upwards of 200 sail of vessels are employed in the export of coals. There are also a considerable number built for the American, the West India, and the coasting trade, and many are employed in the East India trade. The lighthouse, which is not very lofty, is constructed upon a novel and most useful plan, and has a pretty appearance. The port enjoys the advantage of a 20 feet tide at springs, is perfectly dry at low water, and is defended by three batteries of cannon level with the water. The principal manufactures of this town are linen, sail cloth, checks, ginghams, sheetings, thread, twine, cables, tobacco, &c. Here are also some chemical works, anchor foundries, and two breweries. The coal mines at Whitehaven are perhaps the most extraordinary in the known world, and have five principal entrances, called "Beermouths;" three on the south side, and two on the north side, by which horses can descend; the mines are sunk to the depth of nearly 150 fathoms, and penetrate under the sea to a great extent. These are the deepest coal mines that have hitherto been wrought below the surface of the sea. These mines are at all times liable to the destructive effects of fire damp, but which danger is now in a great measure obviated by the use of the safety lamp; while steam engines of extraordinary power keep the mines clear from water. Some idea may be formed of the importance of this great article of commerce, when it is stated, that at certain periods of great demand, upwards of 1500 tons per diem are brought down to the shore for the purpose of exportation.

POST OFFICE, 131 Queen street, WHITEHAVEN, Mary Cleasby, Post Mistress.—The letters from all parts are delivered every morning at half-past ten, and are despatched every day at half-past two in the afternoon, by the mail to KENDAL, for LONDON, LIVERPOOL, and the South of ENGLAND, EDINBORO', GLASGOW, and all other parts of SCOTLAND, YORKSHIRE, and the East of ENGLAND.—A bye post from ULVERSTONE, on Monday, Thursday and Saturday evenings, and returns the following mornings.—Letters from IRELAND and the ISLE OF MAN, are received via LIVERPOOL.—All letters by the mail for KENDAL must be in the Office by two o'clock, to go by the same day's post.

Besides the mines of coal there are rich ones of iron ore, about three miles from the harbour, and a lead mine near the Ehen, at Kinneyside; great quantities of fine lime are shipped in the course of the year to the Galloway coast; and fish are cured and exported annually to a considerable extent. A fine piece of mechanism, deserving the attention of strangers, is the "patent slip," by means of which ten or twelve men can draw the largest ship out of the water into the yard for the purpose of repairing. The river Ehen passes within 4 miles of the town, upon which are placed various mills, for spinning, paper making, grinding of corn, &c. A fine new pier is erecting on the south of the harbour, at a considerable expense. The general appearance of the country in this neighbourhood is hilly, and in many places mountainous, exhibiting a variety of pleasing views, including a distant view of the western coast of Scotland, of the Isle of Man, and inland over a fertile and well cultivated country. A fair is held on the 12th of August, and there are three weekly markets, viz. Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday, the principal being on Thursday. In 1821 the population of Whitehaven, according to the parliamentary returns, was 12,438, exclusive of 8,000 sailors, which were not classed with the actual inhabitants by that census.

HENSINGHAM is a township and pleasant village, in the same parish and ward as Whitehaven, one mile from that town. It contains one chapel, and a national and a Sunday school. About 860 inhabitants are in the township.

MORESBY is a parish and township, with a small harbour and village, rather more than two miles north of Whitehaven. Here is a small church, an endowed free school, and a Sunday school. An iron foundry is in the parish, and the inhabitants derive some profit from a little coasting trade: the number of persons in the township is about 450.

PARTON, which is a small sea port and fishing village, adjoins the south-east end of Moresby, in which parish it lies: a great quantity of coal is shipped here for the Irish ports. It contained, in 1821, about 500 inhabitants.

N. B.—Goods are forwarded by Water occasionally to Dublin, Cork, Belfast, and all parts of Ireland; and by various vessels, every week, to Douglas, Isle of Man, Ramsay, Peele and Castletown; and weekly, to Duddon, Ravenglass, Ulverstone and Lancaster, by Robinson Rigg, West Strand.

To LIVERPOOL, the Countess of Lonsdale, with goods and passengers, on Mondays and Thursdays, makes the voyage in about twelve hours—Fisher & Steward, 36 King st. Whitehaven, & Archibald Sinclair, Old dock, Liverpool, agents.

To LIVERPOOL and CARLISLE, the Solway, and a Cumberland Packet, call at Whitehaven, on their way to Carlisle, every Saturday & Tuesday, for passengers only, and return for passengers to Liverpool, the same days.

WIGTON,AND THE VILLAGE OF THURSBY AND NEIGHBOURHOOD.

WIGTON, a market town, in a parish of the same name, and in the ward of Cumberland, is 305 miles from London, 16 from Maryport, 15 from Keswick, 14 from Cockermouth, and 11 from Carlisle. The town is tolerably well built, and consists principally of one long spacious street, many of the houses being handsome and modern. The Earl of Egremont is lord of the manor, or barony of Wigton, and holds a court leet and baron twice in the year, at one of which a constable is appointed; but the general government of the town lies with the county magistrates. The church, a neat light structure, was erected in 1788, and is a vicarage, in the patronage of the bishop of the diocese: the present incumbent is the Rev. Jonathan Irving. Here are chapels for the Wesleyan methodists, independents, and a friends' meeting house; also a free grammar school, and an hospital for six clergymen's widows. Brookfield school, near the town, was established in 1826, by the society of friends, for the education of sixty scholars. Here are subscription, parochial, and diocesan libraries; the last named presented by Dr. Bray, for the use of the clergy. The principal manufactures of Wigton comprise checks, ginghams, calicos, and some linens: an extensive calico printing establishment; and a silk hat manufactory are also in the town. At a short distance from it pass the rivers Wampool and Waver, which

WORKINGTON,

HARRINGTON HARBOUR, & THE VILLAGES OF HARRINGTON, DISTINGTON, & SEATON.

WORKINGTON, a sea port, market town, and parish, in the ward of Allerdale above Derwent, is 312 miles from London, 32 from Carlisle, 36 from Penrith, 8 from Whitehaven, and 7 from Maryport and Cockermouth. The town is washed upon its northern part by the waters of the Derwent, which then falls into the channel. Some of the ancient streets are narrow and irregular, but those of modern erection are better, and more uniformly constructed, and many of the houses are handsome. The harbour is esteemed one of the safest upon the coast, the quays having undergone many improvements. In 1810, the number of vessels belonging to this port alone exceeded 160, of from 100 to 300 tons burthen: in 1822 the number was reduced to 117, and a further decrease has taken place since the latter period, chiefly attributable to the depression of the export trade with Ireland; but a great number besides those actually belonging to the port clear out from here annually, and about eight or ten foreign vessels arrive in the course of the year with timber and hemp, the duty upon which articles can be paid at Workington. There are still considerable shipments of coal to Ireland, furnished from the productive mines in this neighbourhood, of which the lord of the manor is the chief proprietor. The Seaton iron works are within half a mile of the town, but they are not worked to much advantage at present. Ship building, and the manufacture of cordage, sails, and other articles connected with that branch of trade is executed here to some extent; and there is a manufactory for straw hats, a clever imitation of Leghorn, for which Mr. John Guy, of this town, has obtained a patent. John Christian Curwen, Esq. M.P. is lord of the manor, and holds a court occasionally; and two county magistrates hold petty sessions every Wednesday, and transact other town's business. Here are two churches: the parish church of St. Nicholas, situate at the lower end of the town, and St. John's, placed at the upper end, lately erected by the parliamentary commissioners: the former is a rectory, in the patronage of J. C. Curwen, Esq.—the Rev. Peter How is the rector. The Rev. John Curwen is the curate of St. John's, and the Rev. John Swenburne the officiating minister. There are other places of worship for the presbyterians, Wesleyan methodists, independents, Roman catholics, &c. The town and neighbourhood of Workington are much indebted to the fostering patronage of J. C. Curwen, Esq. who has established an agricultural society, and founded a school upon the Lancasterian system, in which 250 boys and girls are educated: there are also a school of industry for 30 girls, several Sunday schools, an infant school, and a charity, called the "Dorcas society," which distributes blankets to the poor in the winter. The recreation of the inhabitants is partly provided for by a neat assembly room, and a small theatre; while for the reader, a subscription library and new's room are established. Workington hall, standing on a fine eminence near to the town, the seat of the lord of the manor, is a fine old mansion, formerly a castle of great strength, and it was in this edifice that Mary Queen of Scots took refuge, after her escape from Dunbar castle; and the chamber in which she slept is still called the queen's chamber. The land around here, although irregular, is not mountainous, and may he ranked upon the whole as fertile: the views are pleasing; and the river Derwent, while it improves the general aspect and adorns the walks contiguous to the town, affords ample sport to the angler. The market days are Wednesday and Saturday, the first named being the principal, and is well supplied with corn, butcher's meat, &c. The whole parish of Workington, by the census of 1821, contained 7,188 inhabitants, exclusive of about 500 sailors, reckoned by the returns as being from home, the township itself containing about 6,440 inhabitants.

HARRINGTON HARBOUR, a parish and small sea port, in the same ward as Workington, is three miles from that town. The principal trade of the place is in coals: and a great quantity of lime is shipped to the opposite coast of Scotland. Here are a ship building yard, a ropery, and some chemical works. The methodists have a chapel and Sunday school, and there is a small church under the establishment.

The village of HARRINGTON, about three quarters of a mile from the harbour, commands fine views of the ocean. The houses of respectability are occupied almost exclusively by retired ship masters. The number of inhabitants in the whole parish is about 1,850.

DISTINGTON village and parish, is in the same ward as Harrington, four miles from Workington, and the like distance from Whitehaven. The church is a rectory, in the patronage of the Earl of Lonsdale, and in the incumbency of the Rev. Henry Lowther, Lime, freestone, and coals are obtained here, and shipped at Harrington; and upon the stream are three corn mills. About 1,000 inhabitants are in the parish.

SEATON, a small village, in Cummerton parish, is about a mile from Workington, and at one period was a very flourishing little place, its welfare being derived from the extensive iron works, which of late years have been very confined in their operations, and thereby caused the prosperity of the village to decline. In 1821, the number of inhabitants was about 600.

DERBYSHIRE

IS situated nearly in the middle of the island, at an equal distance from the east and west seas. On the north, its boundaries are Yorkshire and part of Cheshire, the river Etherow separating it from the latter; on the west, it is divided from Cheshire and Staffordshire by the Goyt, the Dove, and the Trent; on the south, it is skirted by Leicestershire; and on the east, it is bounded by Nottinghamshire, its dividing limits on this and the north side being mostly artificial. The figure of Derbyshire is extremely irregular, its sides sometimes swelling into projections, and sometimes diminishing into curves. Its greatest extent from north to south is nearly fifty-five miles; its breadth, at the northern extremity, is about thirty-three; contracting as it advances south, and when near its junction with Leicestershire, narrowing almost to a point; its circumference is 130 miles: it contains 1,170 square miles, and 748,800 acres.

NAME and ANCIENT HISTORY.—The derivation of the word Derby, from which the shire takes its name, has given rise to much altercation among etymologists and antiquarians. By the Saxons it is said to have been called Northworthigie, which name was rejected by the Danes, who styled it Deoraby, of which Derby appears a contraction. Some accounts state, that the site of Derby was formerly a park for deer, from whence it was called Deer-by, and it is attempted to support this assertion by the figure of the county arms—a buck couchant in a park. But this position fails, when it is ascertained that it went by the name Deoraby long before the introduction of coat armoury into this kingdom. The most generally received opinion is, that the town derives its name from its situation on the river Derwent, and that it was originally called Derwent-by, which, in course of time, became corrupted into Deoraby, Deroby, and Derby.

SOIL, CLIMATE, &c.—The most common soil in this county is a reddish clay or marl; the southern district is in general composed of it, having little or no stone near the surface, but interspersed with small beds of sand or gravel; and in moist situations is found land of a blackish colour and loose texture: this kind of soil is likewise seen on the north-west of the county, where extensive beds of limestone abound. The large tract on the east side, extending from Stanton-dale and Morley to the borders of Yorkshire, is rich in coal, which is covered with clay of various colours, black, grey, brown, and yellow, the last colour prevailing. Similar soil is also met with in the north extremity of the county. In the vallies, near the banks of the larger rivers, the soil is very different from that of the adjacent parts, and has been evidently varied by the depositions from inundations. Peat bogs exist in the north parts of the county, even on the highest mountains, and in some of them trees have been found nearly perfect. The southern part of Derbyshire is appropriated both to pasture and tillage, in nearly equal proportions; but as the dairy is as much an object of attention as the production of corn, the same land seldom remains long in tillage. The general appearance of Derbyshire is exceedingly dissimilar, its south and north parts exhibiting a striking contrast; the former not being remarkable for hills or vallies, while the latter is eminently marked by a continued succession of both. The upper and middle parts of the county are denominated the High Peak, and the Wapentake, or Low Peak; but the south part has no particular appellation. The most considerable eminences in the tract of the High Peak are, the mountains Ax-edge and Kinder-Scout; the former is situated near Buxton, and is said to be 2,100 feet higher than the town of Derby, and 1,000 feet above the valley in which Buxton hall stands: the latter rises near the centre of the north-west angle, and overlooks all the neighbouring eminences. The High Peak is a region of bleak barren heights; but the scenery is in many parts romantic and sublime, yet not partaking of picturesque effect, beauty being resident only in the vallies; the high grounds appearing dreary and sterile, without a tree, or verdant sward, to relieve the wearied sight of the traveller. Barren and unpleasing as these highlands are, still they are not destitute of usefulness to the contemplative lover of nature; serving, by contrast, to heighten the beauty of the dales, vallies, and streams, by which they are intersected. The Low Peak abounds with eminences of various heights and extent: Brassington moor, Alport near Wirksworth, and Crick-cliff, are the most elevated, and command very extensive prospects: from Alport, the Wrekin, in Shropshire, may be clearly distinguished in an open day. On the east side of the county there is also a high ridge, beginning to the south of Hardwick, and continuing to the extremity of the county, where it enters Yorkshire. The south part is in general pleasant and well cultivated, presenting no particular variety of scenery. The CLIMATE of Derbyshire may be considered healthful: the atmosphere is pure, and the higher situations generally free from epidemic diseases, though agues and fevers sometimes prevail in the vallies: one disease is, however, endemic in those parts; this is the Bronchocele, or “Derby neck,” being an enlargement of the glands of the throat, and is a degree of the same disease known in the Alps and other mountainous tracts. The High Peak is peculiarly liable to violent storms, in which the rain descends in torrents, so as frequently to occasion great ravages in the lands; it is also subject to very high winds; which causes, with the elevation of the country, render it cold, so that vegetation is backward and unkindly. Some kinds of grain will not grow at all in the peak, and others seldom ripen until very late in the year.

MINES and MINERALS.—The sources of wealth in Derbyshire under this head, comprise mines of lead, copper, and iron ores; antimony, alabaster, millstones, limestone, various beautiful spars peculiar to this county, and coals. The principal tract containing lead is called Kingsfield; under this denomination the whole Wapentake of Wirksworth is comprised, as well as part of the High Peak. Iron stone is found in great abundance throughout the whole district in which coal has been discovered, the Chinley hills excepted. Calamine is obtained at Castleton, Cromford, Bonsall, and Wirksworth: coal in the liberties of Norton, Alfreton, and many other places. Limestone exists in abundance and variety; the marbles formed by it are extremely variegated and beautiful; the best are at Hopton, Money-ash, Ashford, Matlock, and Monsaldale. The flour spar, or blue John, is obtained in a mountain to the west of Castleton; and gypsum is found at Elvaston and Chellarton.

RIVERS, CANALS, and MINERAL SPRINGS.—The principal rivers of this county are the Trent, the Dove, the Derwent, the Wye, the Erewash, and the Rother. All these rivers are enriched either by the mountain torrents, or by small rivulets as they meander through the vales and animate the scenery, until they are lost in larger waters. The CANALS that pass through this county are the Ashby-de-la Zouch, the Chesterfield, the Cromford, the Derby, the Erewash, the Peak Forest, and the Trent and Mersey, or Grand Trunk. As might be expected in a county abounding with fossils, the mineral and medicinal waters are numerous. The most celebrated warm springs are those at Matlock and Buxton; those of sulphureous property rise at Keddleston. The chalybeate waters are numerous; those in most repute are at Quarndon, about three miles from Derby. A martial vitriolic spring, the only one that has yet been found in this county, is in the liberty of Heage, about midway between Crich and Belper.

MANUFACTURES and PRODUCE.—The manufactures which are carried on in this county are various and extensive. With Lancashire it partakes in the manufacture of cotton; with Nottinghamshire and Leicestershire in the weaving stockings; with Cheshire in the various textures of silk; with Yorkshire in woollen cloths and iron; and to these may be added a branch in which it stands unrivalled, viz. the forming numberless beautiful ornaments of Derbyshire spar. Besides the wealth derived from these several branches of trade, the profits arising from agricultural produce are by no means inconsiderable. Upon the banks of the Dove are rich dairy farms, many are large and produce excellent cheese, about 2,000 tons of which are supposed to be sent annually to London. Wheat is particularly fine from many lands, but in no part more luxuriant than in the extensive fields of Chaddesden and Chelleston. Barley is much cultivated in many districts, particularly in the parishes of Repton and Gresley, this sort of grain being much employed in the neighbouring town of Burton, in the brewing of ale, which has long been famous for its potency. The enclosures of Derbyshire within the last twenty-five years have been to a wonderful extent, and this laudable system is still going on. An uncommon species of culture, as a field crop, is practised in this county, viz. camomile, upwards of two hundred acres being devoted to the growth of this physical herb.

Derbyshire returns four members to parliament, viz. two for the county, and two for the town of Derby: the present county members are, Lord G. A. H. Cavendish and Francis Mundy, Esq. It is in the province of Canterbury, and diocese of Lichfield; is divided into six hundreds, viz. APPLETREE, HIGH PEAK, MORLESTON and LITCHURCH, REPTON and GRESLEY, SCARSDALE, and WIRKSWORTH: these contain one borough (Derby), eleven market towns, and one hundred and six parishes.

POPULATION.—According to the parliamentary returns for 1821, there were houses inhabited in the county 40,054, uninhabited 1,072, and houses building 305. The number of families then resident in the county was 42,404, comprising 105,873 males, and 107,460 females, total 213,333; and by a calculation made by government, which included persons in the army and navy, for which was added after the ratio of about one to thirty prior to the year 1811, and one to fifty for that year and the census of 1821, to the returns made from the several districts; the population of the county in round numbers, in the year 1700, was 93,800—in 1750, 109,500—in 1801, 166,500—in 1811, 191,700—and in 1821, 217,600. The increase of population in the fifty years, from the year 1700, was 15,700—from 1750 to 1801, the increase was 57,000—from 1801 to 1811, the increase was 25,200—and from 1811 to 1821, the increase number of persons was 25,900: the grand total increase of population in the county, from the year 1700 to the census of 1821 being about 123,800 persons.

ALFRETON AND NEIGHBOURHOOD.

ALFRETON, a parish and market town, in the hundred of Scarsdale, is 141 miles from London, 51 from Manchester, 15 from Derby, 9 from Wirksworth and Chesterfield, and 7 from Belper. The town, which is long and straggling, without any pretensions to uniformity in its arrangement, or beauty in its buildings, is seated upon a small hill. The church is an ancient rude structure, having embattled towers with pinnacles. Here is a dissenting meeting house, and at SWANWICK is a free school, and another at HALFIELD-GATE. A considerable manufactory for stockings is here, & in the immediate neighbourhood are iron foundries, and some productive coal mines. At SOUTH

WINGFIELD village, about half a mile hence, are the remains of an ancient manor house, once one of the most stately residences in Derbyshire; and even in its present ruinous state conveys some idea of its original magnificence. It was erected in the reign of Henry VI. and in 1569 was the place of confinement of the unfortunate Mary Queen of Scots, under the Earl of Shrewsbury. There are two fairs held in the year at Alfreton, on the 30th of July for horses and cattle, and a statute fair on the 22nd of November. The market day, which is on Friday, is a considerable one for grain. In 1821 the number of inhabitants in Alfreton, with Alfreton-outseats parish, was 4,689.

POST OFFICE, near the Market-place, ALFRETON, John Smedley, Post Master.—The LONDON mail arrives at half-past twelve at noon, and is despatched at a quarter past nine in the morning.

ASHBOURN,

AND THE VILLAGES OF BENTLEY, BRADBURN, MAPPLETON, THORPE, TISSINGTON, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

ASHBOURN parish is partly in the hundred of Appletree and partly in that of Wirksworth hundred; the market town is 139 miles north of London, 46 from Manchester, 13 from Derby, and 9 from Wirksworth. At an early period it was called Asseburn, or Esseburne, and it has been spelt in later times various other ways, until it has settled into "Ashbourn." The lord of the manor is Sir William Boothby, Baronet, who holds a court leet and baron in the town annually, at which the constables and head-boroughs are chosen. The church, which is a rectory, dedicated to St. Oswald, by Hugh de Patishull, bishop of Coventry, in 1241, is built in form of a cross, with a large square tower, terminated by a lofty octagonal spire. It contains many monuments, but one in particular, finely executed by Banks, to the memory of a daughter of Sir Brook Boothby, Baronet, fixes the attention. The figure of this lamented girl is in white marble, lying on her side, with inscriptions round the tomb in four different languages. The dean of Lincoln is the rector and patron of the living, and the Rev. Samuel Shipley is the present vicar. The calvinists, Wesleyan methodists, and general baptists have their several chapels; and here are a free grammar school, founded by Queen Elizabeth, a national school, two Sunday schools, four alms houses for clergymen's widows, and sixteen for decayed tradesmen or their widows. In Ashbourn two book societies and a subscription news' room are established. About one mile east is the river Dove, upon which are two cotton and several corn mills; upon Bentley brook is a cotton mill: and in the town are respectable malting and tobacco concerns. Compton brook, famous for its trout, and as having contributed to the sport of the poetical anglers, Walton and Cotton, glides by here. The romantic glen of Dovedale is situated about three miles and a half from the town, and about two miles from Ashbourn is Mudge meadow, where is a chalybeate spring, highly impregnated with sulphur. The town is situated in an interesting part of the country, rather hilly, and well wooded; interspersed with clear streams, rich valleys, and fine meadows. A well supplied market is on Saturday; the fairs are first Tuesday in January, February 13th, April 3rd, May 21st, July 5th, August 16th, October 20th, and November 29th; some of these may be more properly designated large markets for horned cattle, sheep, horses, pigs, &c. The whole parish of Ashbourn, in 1821, contained 4,708 inhabitants, and the township 2,188 of that number. BENTLEY, a village, containing a small church, is about three miles from Ashbourn, situated in a valley. The village of BRADBURN, four miles and a half from Wirksworth, is pleasantly situated on a hill, and contains about thirty houses, and a church, dedicated to All Saints, of which the Duke of Devonshire is the patron. MAPPLETON is a pleasant rural village, about a mile and a half from Ashbourn. The church is a small stone building, with a low square tower and dome, and is the mother church to Ashbourn. Here are three alms houses for clergymen's widows. THORPE is a parish, containing a neat church, dedicated to St. Leonard, which is situated on the brow of a hill, and so surrounded by trees, as to be highly picturesque. It is about three miles and a half north-west from Ashbourn. TISSINGTON parish is four and a half miles north of Ashbourn, containing a church, dedicated to St.

Mary. Tissington hall is the ancient seat of the Fitz Herberts, who have resided here since the end of the fifteenth century. The number of inhabitants in the five last named places is as follows; BENTLEY 242, BRADBOURNE 210, MAPPLETON 201, THORPE 203, and TISSINGTON about 500.

POST OFFICE, ASHBURN, M. Davenport, Post Mistress.—The letters arrive every forenoon at eleven, and are despatched at three in the afternoon.

BAKEWELL, HARTINGTON, WINSTER,

AND THE VILLAGES OF ASHFORD, BASLOW, YOULGREAVE, EDENSOR WITH CHATSWORTH, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

BAKEWELL, a market town, situated in the district of the High Peak, of which it is termed the metropolis, is 153 miles from London, 32 from Manchester, 25 from Derby, 15 from Ashbourn, 12 from Chesterfield, and 6 from Winster. It is an ancient town, situated at the foot of a hill, on the western banks of the river Wye; which stream abounds with trout and other fish, affording ample reward to the patience of the angler; while the rich and romantic scenery, enhanced in beauty by the noble appearance of wood-clad hills, offer strong inducements to the visitors of Buxton and Matlock to tarry a time in this vicinity. The church is a very ancient structure, standing on an eminence, and built in the form of a cross, with an octagonal tower in the centre, containing a fine ring of eight bells, and the church is enriched by a handsome organ. It is a vicarage, in the presentation of the dean and chapter of Lichfield; the present incumbent is the Rev. Francis Hodgson. Here are chapels for the Wesleyan methodists and calvinists, a free grammar school, and six alms houses for as many old men unmarried; founded and supported by the noble family of Rutland: the duke is lord of the manor, and holds a court at Michaelmas, for the appointment of constables, head-boroughs, and other business. William Ashby and Robert Arkwright, Esqrs. are the acting magistrates, and hold petty sessions here the first Friday in every month. At the bath, kept by Mr. White Watson, is a news' room; and an excellent inn, the Rutland Arms, affords most respectable accommodation to temporary sojourners. A large cotton manufactory gives employment to a great number of hands, and in the neighbourhood are mines of lead and zinc, and some valuable stone quarries. Some noble seats are in the vicinity of Bakewell, among which are, the seat of the Duke of Devonshire, at Chatsworth; Hadden hall, the seat of the Duke of Rutland; Hassop, the seat of the Earl of Newburgh, &c. The market day is on Monday, and a market for cattle every alternate Monday. The fairs are on Easter-Monday and Whit-Monday; and cheese fairs 26th of August, the first Monday after the 10th of October, and November 11th. The parish of Bakewell is the most extensive in the county, being more than 20 miles in length, from north-west to south-east, and upwards of 8 in breadth; containing nine chapels of ease, and more than 9,000 inhabitants, about 1,800 being in the township of Bakewell.

HARTINGTON is a parish, with four divisions, denominated the town quarter, middle quarter, nether quarter, and higher quarter. In the market town, or rather village, which is about seven miles and a half from Winster, is the parish church, a neat modern building. The market day is on Wednesday, and there are two well attended fairs held in the year, viz. the Tuesday before the second Wednesday in September, and October 30th, for cattle.

WINSTER, although but a chapelry to Youlgreave, and now an inconsiderable village, was once a market town of some note. It is 5 miles from Newhaven, consisting of one street, formed by the road from Ashbourn to Chesterfield: the houses, as well as the church, are but mean buildings. The market, which is on a Saturday, and fair on Easter-Monday, are of little or no importance to the place. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the mining business: the hapelry contains about 1,000 persons.

ASHFORD is a small village and chapelry to Bakewell, about one mile from that town, on the road to Buxton, to which place coaches pass daily. It contains about 700 inhabitants.

BASLOW, a small village, and chapelry to Bakewell, on the banks of the Darwen, eight miles w. of Chesterfield, is a neat place, containing a small church. The coaches passing through here infuse a degree of liveliness in it, but it possesses nothing otherwise interesting. About 900 is the number of its inhabitants.

YOULGREAVE, a parish, is distant from Bakewell four miles, and from Winster three and a half, stands partly on the side of a hill. The parish church is a good building, with a large square steeple. The whole parish contained, in 1821, about 4000 inhabitants, and the township about 1000 of that number.

EDENSOR-WITH-CHATSWORTH, a parish, remarkable as containing one of the wonders of the Peak, viz. the beautiful seat of his Grace the Duke of Devonshire, which is situate about three miles and a half N.E. of Bakewell. The house is built in the Ionic order, with a flat roof, surrounded by a neat balustrade. Its form is nearly a square, of about 190 feet, surrounding a spacious quadrangular court, having a fountain in the centre, with the statue of Orpheus. The principal entrance on the west is by a noble flight of steps to a terrace, the whole length of the building. The fronts, which form the quadrangle, are decorated with rich sculptures, representing military trophies. The stone of which this edifice is built is of an excellent sort, veined like marble; it was hewn out of the neighbouring quarries, and tumbled down the adjacent hill. Mary Queen of Scots passed thirteen years of her long captivity in the old house of Chatsworth, under the care of the Earl of Shrewsbury; and suits of apartments, supposed to correspond in situation with those inhabited by that unfortunate princess, are still called by her name. It was during her residence at Chatsworth that she wrote her second letter to Pope Pius, dated the 31st of October, 1570. The Devonshire Arms Inn, at Edensor, near to the lodge, is a house well conducted by Mr. Wm. Walters, where every attention is paid to parties visiting this grand and romantic neighbourhood. The population of the parish is about 500.

BARLBOROUGH,

ECKINGTON, CLOWN, WHITWELL, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

BARLBOROUGH, a small parish in a village of the same name, in the hundred of Scarsdale, is eight miles N. E. from Chesterfield, and about three miles from the village of Whitwell. Nothing calculated to arrest the attention of the tourist, or the man of business, is connected with this village. The hall of Barlborough, about a mile hence, is pleasantly situated. The church is a rectory, dedicated to St. James, and in the incumbency of the Rev. C. H. R. Rhodes, who is joint lord of the manor with S. C. Pole, esq., but no court has been held here these forty years. Here is a free school for the instruction of poor children, to which the present rector of St. James' bestows £20. annually. The whole parish contained, in 1821, only about 700 inhabitants.

ECKINGTON is also a parish in the same hundred, but much more extensive and populous; the lands of which are chiefly appropriated to agriculture. In the village, six miles N. E. from Chesterfield, is the parish church. The whole parish contains about 3,600 inhabitants, of which number about 1,000 are in the township.

CLOWN, a village and parish in the same hundred as

POST OFFICE, BARLBOROUGH.—Letters are forwarded to CHESTERFIELD and WORKSOP by a post cart every Monday, Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday, at eight in the morning, and are received on the same days at seven in the evening.

Barlborough, is 3 miles from that town and the like distance from Bolsover, in which manor it lies. The church is a rectory, in the gift of the crown, and in the incumbency of the Rev. Joseph Wilton Pawsey. Here are chapels for the Wesleyan methodists and calvinists, and a free school for twenty-four boys and girls, endowed in 1730. In the neighbourhood coals and lime stone are obtained, and there is a small manufactory for sail cloth, but the inhabitants are chiefly in agricultural employment. The number in the parish is about 600.

WHITWELL is a village and parish, in the same hundred as Eckington, and having no other dependant township. The village is situated at the N. W. extremity of the county, and is twelve miles from Chesterfield. The Duke of Portland is lord of the manor. The church, dedicated to St. Lawrence, is a rectory in the patronage of that nobleman, and in the incumbency of the Rev. George King. Here is a school, founded by the Duchess of Portland, in which seventy girls are taught sewing, reading, writing and arithmetic. In 1821 about 900 inhabitants composed the population of the parish.

BELPER,

AND THE VILLAGES OF RIPLEY, HEAGE, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

BELPER, a chapelry, in the parish of Duffield, and in the hundred of Appletree, one of the most flourishing villages in Derbyshire, is 134 miles from London, 54 from Manchester, 16 from Chesterfield, and 8 from Derby and Matlock. It was formerly written Belpert, and also Beau-re-poire; it is situated on the banks of the Derwent, over which is a stone bridge of three arches, and near it is a beautiful wear for working the extensive cotton mills of Messrs. Strutt, which give employment to upwards of 2,500 persons: besides this great branch of trade there are manufactures of hosiery, nails, stone bottles, pots, and considerable bleaching works; but the town derives its main importance from the grand article of cotton. Richard Paul Jodrell, Esq. is lord of the manor, and holds court leets here at irregular periods; the government of the town being in the resident county magistrates. A new church, dedicated to St. Peter, has been recently completed, since which no service has been performed in the old chapel; nor is there any other place of worship on the establishment. The Wesleyan methodists, unitarians, baptists, and independents have their several chapels. Here are two alms houses for as many poor families, endowed by Mr. Smith, of Denby; and a Sunday school, established by the benevolence of the manufacturers, for the education of poor children chiefly employed by them. About a mile from Belper have been recently discovered some seams of coal, which are being worked to advantage. The principal seats in this vicinity are Bridge Hill, the seat of George Benson Strutt, Esq. one of the magistrates of the county; and Green Hall, the seat of Jedediah Strutt, Esq. A market is on Saturday, and fairs are May 12th and October 31st, for cattle, sheep, &c. In 1821 the number of inhabitants was 7,235, being an increase of about 1,500 since 1811; and it is estimated that at this period the population exceeds 8,000.

RIPLEY, a township and village, in the parish of Pentrich, is not quite eight miles from Wirksworth. It has two fairs in the year, viz. Wednesday in Easter week & 23rd of October, for horses, horned cattle, and pedlary. The coal and iron works in the vicinity of this place give employment to the greater portion of the inhabitants; the number in the township is about 1,600.

HEAGE, a township and village, in the hundred of Appletree and in the parish of Duffield, is five miles from that village, and ten from Derby. It has attained some importance from a martial vitriolic spring having been discovered in the immediate neighbourhood, which is found useful in curing ulcerous diseases, and stopping inward bleedings; its properties being considered as efficacious as extract of Saturn. In 1821 the population of the township was 1,742.

POST OFFICE, BELPER.—Letters for DERRY are despatched by a horse post every morning at eight, and received at half-past twelve at noon.—Office hours: letters for WIRKSWORTH, CROMFORD, MATLOCK, and BAKEWELL, should be in the office by twelve at noon, and to all other parts by seven in the morning.

BOLSOVER,

AND THE VILLAGES OF CRESWELL, ELMTON, PLEASLEY, SOARCLIFFE & NEIGHBOURHOODS.

BOLSOVER, once a market town, in the hundred of Scarsdale, is 145 miles from London, 53 from Manchester, 24 from Derby, 12 from Matlock, and 6 from Chesterfield. It is situated on the side of a very steep hill, is well built, and commands extensive views. The Duke of Portland is lord of the manor, and holds a court every three weeks, at which is recoverable debts under 40s. At Lady day and Michaelmas are two great courts; a jury of copyholders and freeholders are there impanelled; and at one of these are constables and head boroughs chosen. The church is a vicarage in the patronage of the Duke, and in the incumbency of the Rev. Calcraft Tinsley. In the church is a noble monument, in memory of the first Sir Charles Cavendish; erected by his widow and his two surviving sons. Here are a chapel for the calvinists and one for the Wesleyan methodists, and a free school, with a small endowment, for the education of six poor boys. This town was once noted for its manufacture of buckles of a particular sort, but that branch has long declined; agriculture being now the chief occupation, of the labouring class. Bolsover still is possessed of a charter for a market, but it is not made available. A small fair is held on the 24th of June, for pedlary, &c. The number of inhabitants in the parish, in 1821, was 1,244.

CRESWELL village is partly in the parish of Whitwell, and partly in that of Elmtun, 11 miles N. E. of Chesterfield and 5 s. w. of Retford. The Rev. C. H. Rhodes is lord of the manor.

ELMTUN, a parish in the same hundred as Bolsover, 8 miles E. of Chesterfield and 6 from Castleton, contains a church, in the patronage of the Rev. C. H. Rhodes: the incumbent is the Rev. Francis Foxlove. This was the birth place of Jedediah Buxton, the great calculator. The parish contains about 350 inhabitants.

PLEASLEY, a parish in Scarsdale hundred, is 3 miles N. N. W. from Mansfield, and 2 miles from GLAPWELL, contains a church, and about 530 inhabitants. Here are two fairs in the year, viz. May 6th and October 29th, for horses, cattle, and sheep.

SCARCLIFFE is a parish and village, 8 miles S. E. from Chesterfield. The Earl of Bathurst is lord of the manor; and the patronage of the church, which is a vicarage, is in the Duke of Devonshire. The parish contains about 500 inhabitants.

POST.—Letters are forwarded to Chesterfield by various chance conveyances, but there is no receiving house.

BUXTON,

AND THE VILLAGE OF FAIRFIELD AND NEIGHBOURHOOD.

BUXTON is a chapelry, in the parish of Bakewell, in the High Peak hundred, 160 miles from London, 24 from Manchester and Chesterfield, 22 from Matlock, 20 from Wirksworth, 9 from Castleton, and 5 from Chapel-en-le-Frith. It lies in a pleasant valley, surrounded with hills of a most rugged aspect, and was formerly an insignificant village; but the goodness of the roads, its central situation, the salubrity of the air, and the medicinal effects of its springs, have contributed to its improvement, and it is now a place of fashionable resort, with accommodations suitable to the number and quality of its visitants. The baths, which are six in number, and adjoin each other, though in distinct apartments, are at an inn called the Hall. The bath appropriated for the gentlemen is in a room about 30 feet long and 15 feet wide, and of the same height. The bath itself is about 26 feet long and 12 feet wide, and at a medium of about four feet and a half in depth; at one side is a stratum of black limestone, through which the two principal springs rise. In the bath for the ladies, and in that appropriated to the use of the poor, the water issues through the crevices of the floor. The other two baths are private, for the use of persons of distinction. The springs, which are said to throw up about 60 gallons of water every minute, are capable of replenishing the baths in two hours and fifty minutes. The temperature of the water is in general from $81\frac{1}{4}$ to $81\frac{3}{4}$ of Fahrenheit. The Hall, formerly the principal place of accommodation, is still much frequented by the nobility and gentry resorting to Buxton; the centre part of the house was erected near four hundred years ago; the front is manifestly of more modern date, it has numerous apartments and conveniences for the accommodation of invalids, being very near the drinking well, and close to the baths, and all under one roof. Mrs. Bates conducts this house with the greatest reputation to herself. The Shakespeare, in Spring gardens, is also an excellent inn, under the able management of Mr. William Barlow. The usual place for drinking the water is at St. Ann's well, where a modern but elegant little building, in the antique style, has been erected for the accommodation of the visitants; here the water is conveyed from the original spring, through a grit-stone channel, into a white marble basin. This well is regarded as one of the seven wonders of the Peak, from the circumstance that both hot and cold water may be obtained within twelve inches of each other, from a double pump, situated on the side of this building. The late Duke of Devonshire erected a magnificent range of buildings, in the form of a crescent. At one end of the crescent is the Great Hotel, the other end is the St. Ann's Hotel, and the centre is called the Centre Hotel. The whole of the front of this building is faced with fine free stone, which was procured from a quarry about two miles distant. At the back of the crescent are the stables, an extensive pile, of an octagon form on the outside, but circular within the yard, in which is a riding house, where the company take exercise on horseback, when the weather renders shelter necessary. These buildings, with the crescent, were erected by the Duke of Devonshire, who is said to have expended 120,000*l.* in the completion of the whole. Over Stain Cliffs, opposite the crescent, a fine rising lawn has been laid out with very great taste, where the company promenade. There is also a small theatre in Buxton, generally open on Tuesdays, Thursdays, and Saturdays, during the season. The government of the town is in a constable, but there are no courts held here. There are two churches, both dedicated to St. John, one at the north and the other at the south end of the town, and chapels for the methodists, calvinists and unitarians. Here is a free school, to which all persons residing within the chapelry have the privilege of sending their children. The "Buxton Bath Charity," for the relief of the diseased poor, supported by the patronage and contributions of many distinguished individuals, aided also by the visitors to the baths, is a most excellent institution: from August, 1825, to September, 1826, its beneficial influence was experienced by upwards of 700 individuals. About two miles distant is a coal mine, and there are several lead mines in the neighbourhood, but none worked to any extent. The rivers Wye, Dane, Dove and Goyte have their sources in the mountain called Axe-edge. The Cromford High Peak railway passes about a mile hence, on to Whaley, where it meets the Peak Forest canal. Poole's Hole, an immense cavern under Coit-moss Hill, about one mile s. w. of Buxton, is a great natural curiosity, it runs in an horizontal direction for the length of 700 yards, in some parts it is 180 feet wide and 120 feet high. Various chambers and pillars compose this vast natural excavation, which are denominated according to the fancied resemblance they bear; as Poole's Chamber, Cellar, Saddle and Woolsack; the Lion, the Lady's Toilet, Pillion and Curtain, and a variety of other appellations bestowed by the guides. It is said Mary Queen of Scots penetrated far into the cavern; from which circumstance one of the pillars takes its name, and it is recorded that she left the following prophetic lines upon quitting Buxton:

"Buxton, whose fame thy milk warm waters tell,
Whom I am doomed no more to see, farewell!"

The appearance of the scenery around here is diversified, but principally hilly and barren, while other parts are in a state of cultivation, and present some pleasing views and romantic landscapes; and the country may be said to be progressively improving. The market day is on Saturday, which is pretty well supplied. Fairs are February 8th, April 1st, May 8th, the second Monday in September, and 28th of October, for cattle, horses, pigs, cloth, earthen, and iron and wood wares. The number of inhabitants in 1821 was 1036, but the population has augmented since that period.

FAIRFIELD, a chapelry in the parish of Hope, in the same hundred as Buxton, is two miles N. E. from that town, and contains about 500 inhabitants, chiefly employed in agriculture.

POST OFFICE, Crescent, BUXTON, William Moore, Post Master.—Letters from LONDON arrive at four in the afternoon, and are despatched at nine in the morning—from MANCHESTER, arrive at two in the afternoon, and are despatched at nine in the morning—from SHEFFIELD, arrive at nine in the morning, and are despatched at two in the afternoon.—All letters for IRELAND and SCOTLAND are sent and received by the Manchester Mail; and the South cross-post letters are sent and received by the Sheffield Mail.

CASTLETON, HOPE, HATHERSAGE,

AND THE VILLAGES OF BRADWELL, BROUGH, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

CASTLETON, a parish and village, in the High Peak hundred, is 164 miles from London, 25 from Manchester, 9 from Buxton, and 7 from Chapel-enle-Frith. It is situated at the bottom of the steep eminence at whose feet the Peak cavern discloses itself, and whose summit is occupied by an ancient castle that gives name to the place. The buildings are chiefly of stone; and the support of the inhabitants is derived from the mining business, and from the expenditure of those who are induced to visit the remarkable places in the neighbourhood, as also from the sale of various ornamental articles formed from spar, which are here obtained in great variety and beauty: the mine of flour spar, or blue John, is the only one of the kind in England, and its produce is worked into chimney, and other ornaments, slabs, table tops, &c. Among the number of lead mines hereabout, the most valuable and ancient is the "Odin," which is supposed to have been opened in the time of the Danes. Fustians and calicos are manufactured here, but not to any great extent. The entrance of the cave called the Peak cavern, and devil's cave, is 120 feet in width, 42 in height, and above 90 in receding depth; from hence a gentle descent conducts to the interior of this tremendous hollow, which must be explored by torch light. The entire length of the excavation is 750 yards, and its depth from the surface of the mountain 207. The chief objects of curiosity contained in this wonderful chasm are beautiful petrefactions and sparry concretions. The king is lord of the manor, and the Duke of Devonshire is grantee, by letters patent from the crown, and holds a court baron and court leet, at Easter and Michaelmas, and a court for the recovery of debts under £5. Here is one church upon the establishment, and one methodist chapel. The church, dedicated to St. Edmund, is a vicarage, in the patronage of the Bishop of Chester, who is also the improper rector; the present incumbent is the Rev. Charles Bates. Here is a free grammar school, endowed with lands producing £26. per annum, for the education of twenty-three children. The general surface of the country round here is very hilly; a great part may be considered mountainous, interspersed with several broad and fertile valleys: the views, though romantic, are deficient in wood; the agriculture is chiefly pasturage and meadow, and some corn is grown, but in small quantities. Two fairs have been lately established here, viz. on the 21st of April and first Wednesday in October, for the sale of cattle, horses, cloth, cheese, and agricultural produce. The entire parish of Castleton, including the chapelry of EDALE, contained, in 1821, 1,428 inhabitants.

HOPE is a considerable parish, containing a village of that name, in the same hundred as Castleton, about one mile from that town and five from Tideswell. The moors in this parish have afforded, in many instances, extraordinary properties in the preservation of human bodies buried in them; some having been discovered after thirty years of interment, perfect and free from decomposition. The church is a vicarage, in the gift of the dean and chapter of Lichfield: the present incumbent is the Rev. John Ibbotson. Here is a small free school for teaching reading and writing, established about a century ago. Some hats are manufactured here, as also ropes, twines, sackings, &c. The weekly market is on Friday; and the fairs are 28th of March for cattle, 13th of May, called the great fair, for cattle, cloth, ironmongery and pedlary, and another on the second Tuesday in September for cattle. Hope parish contained, in 1821, 4,102 inhabitants, of which number 518 were in the township.

HATHERSAGE, a parish, with a village, is about a mile and a half from Castleton, in the same hundred as Hope, and four miles from that village. It contains a tolerably handsome church; in the churchyard of which is said to have been buried Little John, the friend of Robin Hood, the spot being marked by two stones. The Rev. John Le Cornu is the present incumbent, and his grace the Duke of Devonshire is patron of the living, and also lord of the manor, and holds a court leet at Michaelmas. Metal buttons are manufactured here to some extent, and Messrs. Cocker & Sons, and Cook & Co. have wire drawing works, needle manufactories, &c. upon a large scale. A paper mill is upon Hay Brook, and another upon the Darwent, about half a mile hence; upon which are also corn mills. One fair is held in the year, on the first Friday after Michaelmas day, for cattle, horses, sheep, cloth, hardware, pedlary, &c. &c. The township contains about 700 inhabitants.

BRADWELL is a hamlet, in the parish of Hope, about four miles north of Tideswell. The importance of this parish is chiefly derived from the mining operations carried on within it, and lead smelting works; those belonging to Messrs. Furniss & Co. are extensive. In 1821 the number of inhabitants in the hamlet was 1,130.

BROUGH is a small hamlet, in Hope parish, one mile from that village and four miles east of Castleton. This is said to have been the birth-place of Peveril of the Peak (alluded to by Sir Walter Scott, in his novel of that name), the supposed founder of the original castles at Castleton and Bolsover. Here is a manufactory for thread and lace, and two cotton mills.

COACHES.

To MANCHESTER, the Wellington (from Sheffield) calls at the Castle Inn, every day at eleven in the forenoon; goes thro' Chapel-in-le-Frith, Whaley Bridge, Disley, and Stockport.
 To SHEFFIELD, the Wellington (from Manchester) calls at the same Inn, every day at two in the afternoon; goes through Hope, Hathersage, &c.

CHAPEL-EN-LE-FRITH,

WHALEY BRIDGE, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

CHAPEL-EN-LE-FRITH, a market, town in the High Peak hundred, is 167 miles from London, 18 from Manchester, and 6 from Buxton. Its name signifies the Chapel in the Forest, from the Saxon word frith, a forest, or wood; because the church or chapel, which originated the town, was built within the forest of the High Peak. The town is neat, pleasantly situated in an extensive fertile vale, surrounded by an amphitheatre of lofty hills; many of the views presented are bold, picturesque, and richly wooded. The uplands are good pasturage, and border on the moors, which abound with game. Here is one church under the establishment, and a methodist chapel: the former is a perpetual curacy, in the patronage of twenty-seven freeholders; the present incumbent is the Rev. Saml. Grundy. The municipal law of the town is administered by the magistrates, who hold petty sessions once in a fortnight; and a court baron for the hundred and liberty of the High Peak is held every three weeks, for the recovery of debts under £5. The manufacture of cotton is the principal trade of this town; one power-loom manufactory has been lately erected, by Messrs. Ashtons, at Hyde: Mr. Dickens has also a spinning factory at Bridge-Holm Green; and many of the humbler class are employed in weaving for Manchester houses. Some lead and coal mines and quarries are worked in the neighbourhood; and a rail-way passes near here from the limestone quarries to the Peak Forest canal, which it joins at Bugsworth: a fine reservoir in the parish supplies the canal, and is a beautiful sheet of water, much frequented by anglers. At BARMORE, about two miles and a half hence, is an ebbing and flowing well, much resorted to as a great curiosity. Bank Hall, the seat of Samuel Frith, Esq. one of the magistrates of the county, is within a short distance from the town, and forms a pleasing object on the turnpike road. Fairs are February 7th, March 24th, 28th, and 29th, April 19th and 30th, May 31st, June 21st, July 7th, August 19th, October 3rd, and November 9th, principally for cattle, cheese, wool, &c. The parish is divided into three townships, viz. Bowden's Edge, Bradshaw Edge, and Comb's Edge, the whole containing, in 1821, 3,234 inhabitants.

WHALEY BRIDGE (Cheshire), is nine miles and a quarter south-east from Stockport, in the hundred of Macclesfield, on the road from Manchester to London through Buxton: it contains about 420 inhabitants.

CHESTERFIELD,

AND THE VILLAGES OF STAVELEY, BRAMPTON, BRIMINGTON, ASHOVER, WHITTINGTON
AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

CHESTERFIELD, an ancient borough town, in the hundred of Scarsdale, is 150 miles from London, 48 from Manchester, 24 from Derby and Buxton, 12 from Bakewell and Sheffield, and 8 from Matlock. It is a large but irregularly built town, pleasantly situated between two rivulets, the Hyper and Rother, in the beautiful and fertile vale of Scarsdale, and is the second considerable town in the county of Derby. The Saxon name of Chester proves it to be a place of great antiquity, and it is imagined to have originated in a Roman station. The church, a large handsome structure, in the form of a cathedral, and dedicated to All Saints, has been built at various times, parts of it being very ancient. It appears there was a church here in the 11th century, as William II. gave the church of Chesterfield to the cathedral of Lincoln, in consequence of which the dean still continues patron: the incumbent is the Rev. Thomas Hill. The spire, which rises to the height of 230 feet, is covered with lead, and by its extraordinary appearance (for, on whatever side it is seen, it appears not only to be twisted, but to lean) surprises every spectator. Besides the church, there are a number of dissenters' chapels; one for the quakers, three for the methodists, one for the independents, and one for the Sandemanians. The free-school was founded in the reign of Queen Elizabeth, and was formerly one of the largest in the north of England. The present building was erected in the year 1710, and is built on the site where the old one formerly stood. Several alms-houses have been endowed in different parts of the town, and an elegant assembly room was built a few years ago for the amusement of the more respectable inhabitants. Here is a house of correction and a town-hall, the ground floor of which has a house for the gaoler, and a gaol for debtors; on the second floor is a large room, where the sessions are held in July. The government of the town is vested in a mayor and twelve aldermen, assisted by a town clerk. The trades, which contribute to the prosperity of the town are very various; comprising the manufacture of silk and cotton, hosiery, lace, hats, and flax dressing. In the immediate neighbourhood are considerable iron foundries, tanneries, roperies, brown ware potteries, and several scythe and sickle manufactories. Mines of coal, lead, and iron are worked in the vicinity of Chesterfield; and a canal passes near to the town, which falls into the Trent, at Stockwith, near Gainsborough. The weekly market, which is on Saturday, is well supplied with corn, cattle, cheese, and other necessities. Fairs are 27th January, 28th February, the first Saturday in April, 4th May, 4th July, 25th September, and 28th November. In 1821 the whole parish of Chesterfield contained 9,190 inhabitants, of which number 5,077 were returned as belonging to the borough.

STAVELEY is a parish and large village, in the same hundred as Chesterfield, nearly five miles E.N.E. from that town, and three from Barlborough. The river Rother, and the Chesterfield canal pass close to the village; and in the neighbourhood are coal and iron-stone mines, and iron ore smelting furnaces. The church here is dedicated to St. John, in the patronage of the Duke of Devonshire, and in the incumbency of the Rev. Richard Smith. Here is one Wesleyan methodist chapel; and at WOODTHORPE village is an alms-house for eight poor men and women. This parish is agricultural, rather hilly, and the high grounds are well wooded. In 1821 the population was 2,051.

BRAMPTON is a village and parish, about a mile and a half from Chesterfield, and about four miles from Staveley. At Brampton-moor are extensive stone potteries, belonging to Mr. T. Oldfield, Mr. L. Knowles, and Mr. W. Briddon; and there is a coal mine in the working of Mr. Richard Gillett. Messrs. Hewitt & Co. bleachers and candle wick manufacturers, have their works here, which give employment to many of the inhabitants. The population of the parish, in 1821, was 2,317.

BRIMINGTON, a hamlet, in the parish of Chesterfield, about two miles from that town, contains a small church and a baptist meeting house. Sir George Sitwell is lord of the manor. The hamlet contains about 630 inhabitants.

ASHOVER is an ancient village, about five miles from Chesterfield, and seven miles east from Matlock. In the church are several very ancient monuments, chiefly in memory of the Babbingtons. On the side of a hill, on Ashover common, is a rocking stone, called by the country people Robin Hood's mark, which measures twenty-six feet in circumference, and from its extraordinary position appears to have been a work of art, and placed with great ingenuity. WHITTINGTON, about three miles from Chesterfield, although but a small village, is one to which some note is attached, as having been the place where the Earl of Danby, the Duke of Devonshire, and Sir John D'Arcy assembled to concert measures for effecting the revolution of 1688; the Cock and Magpie public house was the place where they finished their deliberations; and there is a house still bearing that sign now in the village. On Whittington-moor are stone-ware works of Mr. Aaron Madin, and others. The parish contained, in 1821, about 700 inhabitants.

DERBY,

AND THE VILLAGES OF ALLESTREY, DARLEY, OCKBROOK, QUARNDON, SPONDON, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

DERBY, the county and principal town in Derbyshire, in the hundred of Morleston and Litchurch, is 126 miles from London, 59 from Manchester, 33 from Buxton, 34 from Chapel-en-le-Frith, 24 from Chesterfield, 16 from Nottingham, 13 from Ashbourn, and 11 from Burton-upon-Trent. It is a very ancient town, occupying a flat tract of land, on the banks of the river Derwent, and is situated peculiarly favourable for the process of manufactures which require the aid of water; and various mills have been established in the town, or its immediate vicinity, for the manufacture of silk and cotton; but the most celebrated are those of porcelain, and ornaments of Derbyshire spar and marble. The manufacture of silk is carried on to a considerable extent, and the number of men, women, and children employed in it is upwards of 1000. The articles produced from silk are various, embracing hose, handkerchiefs, shawls, ferrets, laces, and sewing silk. The original mill erected by Mr. Crockett, called the "Silk Mill," by way of pre-eminence, being the first and largest of the kind ever erected in England, stands on an island on the river Derwent. Its history is remarkable, and serves to show the great influence which the enterprizes of an individual have on the commerce of a country. The manufacture of porcelain was originally established here about the year 1750, by the ingenious Mr. Duesbury, but the most considerable improvements have been effected since his decease, by the judicious method of preparing the paste and increasing the beauty of the decorations. The ware itself is not of equal fineness with the French and Saxon, but its workmanship and ornaments are far superior. The manufacturing of spar and polishing of marble, carried on here, is very curious. Various other branches of business, besides the manufactures already mentioned, are also carried on to a considerable extent, and several works of magnitude have lately been established; a mill for the slitting and rolling of iron; a large furnace for smelting copper ore, with a machine for flattening and rolling the copper into sheets; a red lead manufactory; a mill for making tinned plates; large malting concerns, corn mills, tanneries, soaperies; and there have been lately introduced large establishments for printing books. On Nun's Green a bleaching ground has been opened, in which the processes are performed by chymistry. The town is governed by a mayor, 9 aldermen, 14 brothers, and 14 capital burgesses, who elect their successors; the mayor, ex-mayor and four senior aldermen being always justices of the peace. The assizes for the county are held here, as are also the sessions, except those at midsummer, which are held at Chesterfield: the mayor holds a quarterly court of session, and a court leet twice in the year, the corporation being lords of the manor. There is also a court of requests for the recovery of small debts, held at the Guildhall every third Tuesday. Derby returns two members to parliament; the present representatives are H. F. C. Cavendish and Saml. Crompton, Esqrs.; the elective franchise is in the free burgesses, and the mayor is the returning officer. The principal public buildings are a very beautiful infirmary, built by subscription, replete with every convenience; county-hall, a town-hall, a county gaol, an elegant assembly-room, and a theatre. Among the modern improvements of the place are the lighting and paving of the streets; and removing those obstructions that prevented a free passage; the removal of several bridges that were built across the Markeaton brook, and erecting three new ones of stone, as well as an elegant bridge of three arches over the Derwent; which, together with the silk mills, the weirs, and the broad expanse of the river, forms a very pleasing prospect on entering the town from the Nottingham road. The vicinity furnishes a variety of agreeable walks, where the inhabitants may enjoy a salutary exercise, and a succession of prospects distinguished by the softer features that attend cultivation. Numerous bequests for the relief of the poor have been made at different times by benevolent persons; one of the most considerable is the Devonshire alms-house for the support of poor men and women; Wilmot's hospital for four poor men and women; Large's hospital for five clergymen's widows; national and Lancasterian schools; numerous Sunday schools; two infant schools; and a free school, founded by Walter Durdant, bishop of Lichfield, and William de Barba Aprilis, in the reign of Henry II. Science and literature meet with encouragement; this may in some degree be ascribed to the philosophical society established here about the year 1772. Several book societies have also been instituted; and to the credit of the individuals composing them, the works purchased are chiefly of a scientific and philosophical tendency. Here is a mechanics' institute, and a permanent library, established in 1811. Two newspapers are published weekly, viz. the "Derby Mercury" on Wednesday, and the "Derby Reporter" on Thursday. Five parish churches are in the borough, viz. All Saints', a perpetual curacy, of which the Rev. Chas. Stead Hope is the minister; St. Alkmund's, Rev. Charles Robert Hope, curate; St. Michael's, Rev. John Garion Howard, vicar; St. Peter's, Rev. Richd. Rowland Ward, vicar; and St. Werburgh's, Rev. Edw. Unwin, vicar: there is a chapel of ease to St. Werburgh's building, to be called St. John's. The family vault of the Duke of Devonshire is in the church of All Saints. Here are chapels for the methodists, independents, particular and general baptists, unitarians, primitive methodists, a catholic chapel, a friends' meeting house, &c. In the vicinity of the town are many seats and mansions of consequence; and the country round is exceedingly fertile, well wooded, and plentifully supplied with water. The surface of the country is flat to the south of the town, and only gently waved on the other sides. Market days are Wednesday, Friday, and Saturday. Fairs are January 25th, Friday in Easter week, first Friday after May 1st, Friday in Whitsun-week, July 25th, for horses, cattle, and sheep; March 21st, 22nd, 23rd, and September 27th, 28th, and 29th, for cheese. A cheese market, or fair, is also held on the last Tuesday in August; markets for cattle every Friday in May, and for fat cattle every other Tuesday throughout the year. The population of the borough, it is stated, has considerably augmented since the census of 1821: it then contained 19,648 inhabitants; the separate parishes containing as follows: St. Alkmund's, 3,462; All Saints', 3,745; St. Michael's, 925; St. Peter's, 3,974; St. Werburgh's, 5,317: to which must be added, to the parishes extending into Morleston and Litchurch hundred, for St. Alkmund's, 1,565; St. Michael's, 399; and St. Peter's, 261.

ALLESTREY, a parish, in the hundred of Morleston, about two miles from Derby, contains a handsome church, with a square tower; the living is in the gift of Francis Mundy, Esq. of Mark Heaton. The parish contains about 360 inhabitants.

DARLEY, or Darley Abbey, a small village and township, in the parish of St. Alkmund, is one mile from Derby, in the same hundred as Allestrey, seated on the Derwent, upon which are a cotton mill and a paper mill, affording employment to many of the inhabitants. The church, which has been lately erected, on the top of a hill, is a beautiful structure, and from this situation the prospect is extensive. A large school room has been built, and is supported entirely by Walter Evans, Esq. in which the boys are taught reading, writing and arithmetic, and the girls sewing. The number of inhabitants is about 850.

OCKBROOK, a village, in a parish of the same name, is about six miles south-east from Derby, and contains one church under the establishment; the Rev. Samuel Hayes is the minister. The moravians have a school, and also a chapel, the minister of which is the Rev. Samuel O'Connor, a man of exemplary habits and character, deservedly respected by those under his ministry. The population of the parish, in 1821, was about 1,200.

QUARNDON, a village, in the parish of the same name, about three miles and a half from Derby, has a small church, but possesses no manufactures. Kedleston hall, the seat of Lord Scarsdale is in the vicinity, in the park of which is a mineral spring, possessing properties the same as those at Harrowgate. The parish contains about 450 inhabitants.

POST OFFICE, Queen-street, DERBY, Joseph Bainbridge, Post Master.—The LONDON mail arrives every morning at half-past nine (except Mondays, when it arrives at nine), and departs every afternoon at four.—The MANCHESTER mail arrives every afternoon at ten minutes past four, & departs at a quarter past nine.—The BIRMINGHAM mail arrives at forty minutes past ten, and departs every forenoon at a quarter before eleven.—The SHEFFIELD mail arrives every morning at eleven, and departs every morning at a quarter before eleven.—The NOTTINGHAM mail, No. 1, arrives every morning at nine, and departs every forenoon at fifteen minutes past eleven.—The NOTTINGHAM mail, No. 2, arrives every afternoon at four, and departs every evening at seven.—The letters for the South of ENGLAND are conveyed hence by the LONDON mail, for the West of ENGLAND by the BIRMINGHAM mail, for the North of ENGLAND, SCOTLAND, and IRELAND, by the MANCHESTER mail, and for the Eastern Counties by the NOTTINGHAM mail.—Letters are forwarded by a horse post daily to BAKEWELL at a quarter past eleven, and arrive at nine in the morning.

DOVERIDGE, SUDBURY & NEIGHBOURHOODS.

DOVERIDGE is a parish, with a small village, in the hundred of Appletree, 17 miles from Derby and 2 from Uttoxeter; the last named being the nearest post town. The church is a small ancient edifice, and is a vicarage, in the incumbency of the Rev. Henry Stokes. The inhabitants of this parish are principally employed in agricultural pursuits, and the number is about 850.

SUDBURY, a parish, containing a small village, is 13 miles from Derby and 4 from Doveridge. To the north-east of the village is Sudbury park, the fine seat of Lord Vernon. The church, which is very old, stands in the garden near the house, and being covered with ivy, forms a picturesque object in the scenery around it: in this humble fabric the ancestors of the Vernons for more than 200 years have been deposited; and various monuments to their memory have been erected; one in particular, to the memory of Catharine, daughter of the late Lord Vernon, claims attention, from the beautiful and truly poetical lines inscribed upon it. The parish contains about 630 inhabitants.

DRONFIELD,

BEAUCHIEFF, NORTON, HOLMESFIELD, DORE AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

DRONFIELD, a parish, with a small market town of the same name, in the hundred of Scarsdale, is 156 miles from London, 38 from Manchester, 23 from Buxton, and 6 from Chesterfield. The town is pleasantly situated in a valley, and remarkable for its salubrity, which has occasioned it to be made a place of residence of many respectable inhabitants. The church is a handsome building, having a tower at the west end, terminated by a spire. Opposite the west end of the church was formerly a chantry, now the Dragon public house. Here is a well endowed free grammar school, founded in the reign of Queen Elizabeth, by Henry Fanshawe, Esq. and a charity school. A great number of edge tools, scythes, sickles, and other agricultural implements are made in this town and neighbourhood; the principal manufacturers are Mr. Paul Jackson, and Mr. Peter Linley, Bole hill. Messrs. Lucas and Sons have iron works; and there are chymical works, and corn and paper mills in the vicinity. The market, which is on Thursday, has much declined of late years, in consequence of its vicinity to Chesterfield and Sheffield. A fair is held April 25th, principally for cattle and cheese. The entire parish of Dronfield contained, in 1821, 3,680 inhabitants, of which number about 1,500 were resident in the town.

BEAUCHIEFF ABBEY, a village extra parochial, in the same hundred as Dronfield, is situated in a beautiful vale, about three miles and a half from Dronfield. The abbey was founded between the years 1172 and 1176, for regular canons of the Premonstratensian order, by Robert Fitz-Ranulph, lord of Alfreton, in expiation for having conspired with the other knights who slew Thomas-a-Becket: only a small part of the chapel is now remaining, in which service is performed by the Rev. Wm. Pashley, of Holmesfield: it is a donative, in the gift of the lord of the manor, Peter Pegge Burnell, Esq. The manor house, Beauchieff hall, was erected in 1671, and is the residence of Broughton Steade, Esq. the nephew of the proprietor.

NORTON is an agricultural parish, containing a village of the same name, about four miles from Sheffield. About one mile south-east is Hazlehurst, the seat of Sir William Bagshaw, magistrate. The whole parish contains about 1,700 inhabitants.

HOLMESFIELD township and village, in the parish of Dronfield, is very pleasantly situated, about six miles north-west from Chesterfield: it cannot be marked as a place of trade, but the neighbourhood is

DUFFIELD,

LITTLE EATON, BREADSALL, MAKENEY AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

DUFFIELD, an extensive parish, in the hundred of Appletree, contains a small village, about four miles from Derby and three from Belper; it is pleasantly situated on the banks of the Derwent, and contains a number of good houses, with a church, which is at a short distance from the village; and a free grammar school. On a rising ground, at the north-west end of the village, was formerly a castle, which, in the fourteenth century, belonged to the earls of Derby. The entire parish of Duffield contained, in 1821, nearly 14,000 inhabitants, of which number about 2,700 were in Duffield township.

LITTLE EATON is a neat village, about three miles from Derby and one from Duffield; it contains a small but handsome church. Bleaching grounds of Messrs. Smith & Son, and an extensive paper manufactory of Messrs. Tempest & Son are in the vicinity of the village. The royal mail from Manchester to

ETWALL, HILTON, RADBOURN, BOYLSTON

AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

ETWALL is a small parish, with a pleasant village, in the hundred of Appletree, about six miles from Derby. Here are alms-houses for twenty-four aged men; and a small ancient stone church, the vicar of which is the Rev. Henry Lawrence Dundas Cockburn.

HILTON is a small village and township, in the parish of Marston-upon-Dove, and in the same hundred of Etwall, about seven miles and a half from Derby, on the road to Uttoxeter.

RADBOURN, or Radburn, is a small hamlet, about four miles from Derby. Near to the church are the ruins of the ancient mansion of the Poles: at this elevated spot a fine view is obtained over the adjacent country.

BOYLSTON, or Boyston, is an inconsiderable parish and village, about seven miles south from Ashbourn and twelve from Derby.

These villages are very unimportant as regards trade or population; the country around is chiefly agricultural, and the produce of the land is devoted to the supply of the more populous neighbouring towns. The population of each place in 1821 was, Etwall and Bearward Cote townships, 445; Hilton, 533; Radbourn, 300; and Boylston, 350.

GLOSSOP,AND THE VILLAGES OF HOWARD'S TOWN, CHARLESWORTH, WHITFIELD AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

GLOSSOP is a very extensive parish, containing a township and village of the same name, in the hundred of the High Peak. The village, which is one of great manufacturing consequence, situated on a rising bank, springing from one of the deepest vallies in the Peak, is distant from London 184 miles, from Derby 50, from Sheffield 25, and from Manchester 15. The church is an ancient structure, and a vicarage, in the patronage of the Duke of Norfolk, and in the incumbency of the Rev. Christopher Howe: in the church is a monument, by Bacon, to the memory of Joseph Hague, Esq. of Park hall, near Hayfield; who bequeathed the interest of £1,000. towards clothing twenty-four poor men and women of the townships of Glossop dale; and founded a public school, which has been further enriched by other charitable bequests. The Duke of Norfolk is lord of the manor, and holds courts leet at Easter and Michaelmas; at the latter court are chosen a constable and head borough, which constitute the government of the town. In this village and its immediate vicinity there are not less than forty establishments in the spinning and manufacturing cotton into various fabrics, calico printing, manufactures of woollens, &c. &c. Among the most respectable and extensive spinning concerns are those of Messrs. Sidebottoms, Mill Brook; Mr. John Thorp, Glossop; Mr. John Wood, Howard's Town and Charlesworth; and Messrs. Sidebottoms, near Mottram, power-loom manufacturers; altogether giving employment to a considerable population. Glossop hall, the property of the Duke of Norfolk is near to the village, and at GAMESLEY, about a mile to the west, is Melandra Castle, being the vestiges of a Roman station. Coal is worked about three miles hence, and from these mines Glossop and the neighbourhood are principally supplied. The country round here is very pleasing, and many of the views are romantic, enriched by plantations, which abound in the home scenery. The lands on the low grounds are fertile, but the mountainous parts are less productive. One well attended fair is held in the year, on the 6th of May, for horses, cattle, pigs, pedlary, &c. The parish of Glossop contains eighteen dependent townships, liberties, and hamlets, and in 1821 nearly 14,000 inhabitants, 1,350 of that number being in the township of Glossop, but the population has augmented since that period.

HOWARD'S TOWN, lately called Bridge-end, about one mile from Glossop, in that parish, is a thriving little place, called into consequence by the erection of some extensive cotton manufactories. The population is made up with Glossop.

CHARLESWORTH, in the parish of Glossop, nine miles from Chapel-en-le-Frith, is a populous hamlet, owing its support to the manufacturing interest. The number of inhabitants is about 1,000.

WHITFIELD, a township and village, about one mile from Charlesworth, is like that hamlet indebted to the manufactories for its importance, and the principal support of about 1,000 inhabitants.

ILKESTON,

AND THE VILLAGES OF HEANOR, RISLEY, DRAYCOTT AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

ILKESTON is a parish, containing a small market town of the same name, which is about nine miles and a half north-east from Derby, in the hundred of Morleston and Litchurch. This town formerly enjoyed more importance than at the present day, and it is recorded that assizes were at one time held here: some privileges are still preserved to it; being held by rather a ludicrous tenure, viz. a gallows, standing at the entrance of the town, which, while this erection of legal terror is preserved, gives the trades people of Ilkeston freedom from toll in the towns of Nottingham and Derby. Here are some lace manufactories, and in the immediate neighbourhood are coal works and malting concerns. The market day, which is on Thursday, is of very little benefit to the inhabitants. Fairs are 6th of March, Whit-Thursday, and the first Thursday after Christmas day. In 1821 the population of the parish was 3,681.

HEANOR village, in the same hundred as Ilkeston, is about eight miles and a half north-east from Derby. In addition to those in agricultural labour, upwards of eighty families are employed in the neighbouring coal works. The parish of Heanor is extensive, and embraces the townships of SHIPLEY, CODNOR and LOSCOW, and CODNOR CASTLE and PARK LIBERTY; in which were, in 1821, 4,981 inhabitants, including 2,364 in the township of Heanor.

RISLEY township and village, about seven miles and a half east from Derby, is partly in the parish of SAWLEY, and partly in that of SANDIACRE. This manor was formerly held by Sir Hugh Willoughby, the celebrated navigator, who sailed on the 10th of May, 1555, with three ships, in search of a north-east passage, and was frozen to death with all his crew in the January following, in the frozen ocean. In "Thomson's Seasons" this melancholy event is most feelingly and emphatically described. The village contains about 300 inhabitants.

DRAYCOTT, or Dracote and Wilne Liberty contains a village, about seven miles south-east of Derby. A manufactory for spinning cotton gives employment to some of the inhabitants, but the majority are employed in agriculture: the number in the liberty, in 1821, was about 1,100.

POST.—A foot post passes through ILKESTON, on its way to RIPLEY, &c. every Monday, Wednesday, and Friday, at four in the afternoon.

LONGFORD, BRAILSFORD, CUBLEY, MACKWORTH, SHIRLEY AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

LONGFORD is rather an extensive parish, in the hundred of Appletree; the village, which is small, containing a tolerably sized church, is eleven miles from Derby and six from Ashbourn. The parish contained, in 1821, 1,264 inhabitants, including 573 in the township.

BRAILSFORD is a small village and parish, without any other dependent township, in the same hundred as Longford, four miles from that village and six miles and a half from Derby and Ashbourn, on the main road between those two towns. Coaches to various parts are continually passing through here; and the support of the village is chiefly derived from its thoroughfare situation; no manufacture, or particular trade to any extent being carried on in it. The church is about half a mile from the village. The parish contains about 700 inhabitants.

CUBLEY, an inconsiderable village, in the same hundred as Brailsford, is six miles from Ashbourn, MACKWORTH, a parish, with a small village, in the hundred of Morleston, is situated on the road from Derby to Ashbourn, two miles and a half from the former, and ten and a half from the latter town. Here is a neat church, and in the neighbourhood are the remains of a castle, said to have been demolished during the civil wars. The parish, including the township of MARKEATON contains about 650 inhabitants.

SHIRLEY, a parish and village, is nine miles from Derby and five from Ashbourn. The houses, which can scarcely be said to compose a village, are scattered throughout the parish. Here is a small church, under the patronage of the Earl of Ferrers. Shirley park, in this parish, a noted cover for foxes, spreads over upwards of one hundred acres. The parish contains about 600 inhabitants, including the townships of STYDD and YEAVELEY.

COACHES

Pass through BRAILSFORD & MACKWORTH, to and from DERBY, ASHBURN, and other parts, daily.

MATLOCK,

MATLOCK BATH, BONSTALL, DARLEY AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

MATLOCK village and parish, in the hundred of Wirksworth, is 144 miles from London, 42 from Manchester, 34 from Nottingham, 14 from Ashbourn, and rather more than 3 from Wirksworth. The village is most delightfully situated, partly in a valley and partly on the side of a hill, on the eastern banks of the river Derwent, and at a short distance from the main road: it is chiefly built of stone, and at its entrance is a neat stone bridge; at some distance from which, on the verge of a most romantic rock, and upon a precipice almost perpendicular, stands the church, shrouded amidst trees, whose luxuriant foliage spreads over the face of the grey rock: the building is an ancient erection, with a square tower and arched roof, the interior of which is covered with paintings, taken from various scriptural subjects. In many parts of the church-yard the graves are cut out of the solid rock. The dean of Lincoln is patron of the living. Four fairs for cattle are held here in the year, viz. February 24th, April 2nd, May 9th, and October 25th. The population of the parish of Matlock, in 1821, was 2,920.

MATLOCK BATH, about a mile and a half s.s.w. from the village, is seated in a valley, amidst scenery of unparalleled grandeur and variety. The appendages of picturesque beauty are here so happily united, that they cannot fail in raising those indescribable associations invariably attending a mind attuned to the contemplation of such sublime scenes; which to delineate, the powers and variations of the pencil must be employed, as alone adequate to the task; for

Expression's varied flowers are far too weak—
Let fancy paint what language cannot speak:
View Abram's Heights, th' High Torr, and Lover's Path,
And hail elysium when at Matlock Bath.

To enter into a particular description of the petrifying well and of the various articles of fancy produced here, and to do justice to the general interest, would form a little volume. An exhibition of the manufactures peculiar to this place, and a variety of other articles is established called "the Royal Museum," which is open free to the public, under the able and obliging conduct of Mr. John Mawe:

a library and news' room have also lately been added. The principal bath is called the Fountain Bath, at the foot of the Heights of Abraham, and may be known by a fountain playing in the garden. There is a delightful sail up and down the river, for which purpose boats are kept, and may be frequently seen proudly gliding with a freight of beauty and fashion. There are two hotels, and numerous lodging-houses, where every accommodation is afforded to the visitors resorting to this enchanting place. The diseases to which the Matlock waters are peculiarly salubrious are, glandular affections, rheumatism, obstructions from biliary concretions, and all those complaints that are promoted or increased by a relaxed state of the muscular powers. Amongst the natural curiosities are, lunar rainbows, which are not unfrequent here, Smedley cavern, &c. The eminences deserving attention are, the High Torr, 350 feet above the level of the neighbouring country; Masson hill, and the romantic cliff forming the boundary of the dale.

BONSTALL is a considerable village, in a parish of the same name, about two miles from Cromford and four from Wirksworth, principally seated on a very high hill, where is the church, a neat plain building, in the same patronage as that of Matlock. In 1821 the number of inhabitants in the parish was 1,396.

DARLEY, a parish, partly in the hundred of Wirksworth and partly in the High Peak hundred, contains a small village, situated five miles from Matlock, in a rich and beautiful valley, upon the banks of the Derwent, and upon the road from Matlock to Bake-well. The church has a square tower, in which are five bells, and in the church-yard is a yew tree, an object of considerable attraction from its immense bulk, its thick foliage, and the great extent of its spreading limbs; it is surrounded by a stone bench, which at once serves as its protection, and a resting place for the traveller, who may seek shelter beneath its friendly shade, impervious alike to the "scorching noontide ray," or the "pelting of the pitiless storm." In 1821, 1,176 was the number of inhabitants in the parish.

MEASHAM, WILLESLEY, CHURCH GREASLEY,WALTON, STAPENHILL, BURTON MILLS AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

MEASHAM, a parish and village, in the hundred of Repton and Gresley, three miles from Ashby-de-la-Zouch, contains a small church, in the patronage of the Hastings family, and in the incumbency of the Rev. John Buckley. The potteries in the neighbourhood, and cotton spinning, give employment to many of the inhabitants. The number in the whole parish is about 1,400.

WILLESLEY is about two miles and a half from Ashby-de-la-Zouch, in the same hundred as Measham, part of the parish being cut off by the boundary line of Leicestershire. The Ashby-de-la-Zouch canal passes here, and a rail road from Willesley basin to Ticknell, passing Ashby-de-la-Zouch, is a conveyance for coals and limestone, worked in this neighbourhood, as well as for the carriage of the Moira spa-water, obtained about two miles from Measham; this water is in considerable repute, its properties being as valuable as the springs at Harrogate. Willesley park, the fine seat of Sir Charles Hastings, is a great ornament to this parish.

CHURCH GREASLEY, or Gresley, is thirteen miles from Derby and six from Ashby-de-la-Zouch, and

MELBOURN, REPTON, TICKNALL, CALK, FORMARK, BRETRY, SMISBY AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

MELBOURN, or Melburn, a considerable village, of some antiquity, in the hundred of Repton, is seven miles and a half S. S. E. from Derby, and is mentioned by Camden as having a castle, in which John, Duke of Bourbon, of the blood royal of France, was confined nine years, after being taken prisoner at the battle of Agincourt: the only remains now visible is a wall of considerable thickness and height, about twenty yards in length. Lord Melbourn has a seat here, but it is seldom visited by its owner. This is a populous village, and its inhabitants are chiefly employed in combing and spinning wool, and working upon the stocking frame; there is also a manufactory for silk flowered shawls and handkerchiefs of a peculiar nature, by Mr. William Haimes. Here is a church, under the establishment; and the parish is remarkable for the variety of religious sects, the presbyterians, calvinists, baptists, and quakers, having each a place of worship. The parish contained, in 1821, upwards of 2,000 inhabitants.

REPTON, a parish and village, in the same hundred as Melbourn, is seven miles from Derby and four and a half N. E. from Burton-upon-Trent: it is situated upon the declivity of a hill, and consists of one street of scattered houses, extending about a mile in length, having a fine trout stream running by it, which flows into the Trent. At the lower part of the village, pleasantly elevated above the meadows, stands the church, a large handsome structure, with an elegant lofty spire, forming a very beautiful and distinguished object in the surrounding scenery. In the area before the church is an old stone cross, terminating in a column: and a plain pointed arch or gateway, leading into the school-yard. Near the church are the remains of a priory, now converted into a free school, richly endowed by Sir John Porte, of Etwall, in 1557. Repton is not signalized by any particular manufactures; but there are many malting concerns, some of which are upon an extensive scale. This parish is celebrated by antiquaries as the head of the Saxon kingdom of Mercia, and the burial place of several of its sovereigns. The parish contained, in 1821, about 1,800 inhabitants.

TICKNALL parish is extensive, in the same hundred as Repton; the village is about five miles and a half from Ashby; and about two miles from it are large lime works, wrought to great advantage; the lime being conveyed by a rail road to the Ashby canal, and from thence forwarded to every part of the country. Ticknall parish contains about 1,300 inhabitants, having no other dependent township.

CALK, Calke, or Caulk, is a very small parish, two miles from Melbourn. Calk hall and park, the seat of Sir George Crewe, Baronet, is about three quarters of a mile from the village: this gentleman is building a church at his own expense.

FORMARK, or Foremark, three miles W. from Melbourn and six and a half S. S. E. from Derby, is distinguished as having within its precincts the beautiful seat of Sir Francis Burdett, most judiciously and romantically placed, amidst scenery of a rich, bold, and varied character, upon the southern bank of the Trent; the hanging hills being crowned by thriving plantations: the house is spacious, and its appearance imposing in a considerable degree; the pleasure grounds are very tasteful, and lead down a valley through finely wooded avenues, to the banks of the river. The population of this parish, including the township of INGLEBY, is upon the increase.

BRETRY, or Bradby, is a hamlet to Repton, about a mile and a half from it, and three miles from Burton. Bretby park, the seat of the Earl of Chesterfield, is here; though not extensive, presents a variety of beautiful scenery.

SMISBY, a small parish, containing a church, in the Melbourn and two and a half from Ashby-de-la-patronage of the Hastings family, is four miles from Zouch. The parish contains about 300 inhabitants.

POST OFFICE, MELBOURN, Receiving House at John Bailey's, carrier.—Letters are conveyed to DERBY, by a post cart, every morning (except Sunday), and arrive at half-past three in the afternoon.

NEW MILLS, HAYFIELD, MELLOR,

AND THE VILLAGES OF THORNSETT, ROWORTH AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

NEW MILLS, an extensive hamlet, in the parish of Glossop, and in the High Peak hundred, is six miles from Chapel-en-le-Frith and eight from Stockport: it is pleasantly situated on the borders of Derbyshire and Cheshire; and within a few years has risen into considerable importance in the manufacturing district; cotton spinning being carried on here to a great extent, affording employment to several hundred hands. The factories are in a great measure hid from the public view in passing through the village, being built at the foot of the stream, under high towering rocks. Here are a small neat chapel for the methodists old connexion, one for the primitive methodists, one for the calvinists; and a Sunday school. Good house coal is obtained near to the village, the top bed strata running from sixteen to twenty inches thick; the quantity raised is but trifling, owing to there not being a sufficient demand for land sale, and the canal lying at too great a distance. It is the intention of his Majesty's commissioners to erect a church on the opposite side of the stream, in Cheshire; a measure certainly called for from the rapidly increasing population. The village is built chiefly upon a stone quarry, but the soil in many parts is fertile, producing good crops of wheat and potatoes.

HAYFIELD, a small hamlet, in the parish of Glossop, four and a half miles from that town, and about the like distance from Chapel-en-le-Frith, contains a small stone church, of which the Rev. John Crowther is minister; the living being in the gift of the freeholders. A small day and Sunday school, a chapel for the methodists old connexion, and one for the primitive methodists are also in the village. Five extensive cotton spinning factories, one for silk, and one for the manufacturing of woollen goods are established here. The population of New Mills and Hayfield are comprised in the returns for the parish of Glossop.

MELLOR, a chapelry, in the parish of Glossop, and in the High Peak hundred, is six miles and a half from Glossop and eight from Chapel-en-le-Frith. The church, which is of stone, is erected on a commanding situation, a short distance from the village: the Rev. Matthew Freeman enjoys the curacy for life: the gift of the living is in the Thornton family. Here is a small Sunday school, belonging to the church, and one methodist chapel. The extensive concern of T. R. & S. Waller, cotton spinners and thread manufacturers, gives employment to a great number of hands. In 1821 the number of inhabitants was 2,100.

THORNSETT, a hamlet, in the parish of Glossop, five miles and a half from Chapel-en-le-Frith, is a place of no particular trade: it contains about 760 inhabitants.

ROWORTH, a small hamlet, in the parish of Glossop, situated in Glossop dale, is six miles from that town. The inhabitants are nearly all employed in the cotton factories, there being five of those establishments in this place.

SHARDLOW,

AND THE VILLAGES OF ASTON, WESTON, WILLINGTON AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

SHARDLOW, a village, in the parish of Wiln and Shardlow, and in the hundred of Morleston and Litchurch, is seven miles south-east from Derby, situated upon the banks of the river Trent, over which is a good stone bridge, forming the communication with Leicestershire; it was built by the Cavendish family, from which it takes its name. This place derives considerable importance from being a station for the transshipment of goods upon the Trent and Mersey canal. At Wiln mills is manufactured a particular sort of yarn, known by the name of "Wiln yarn," for which there is generally a considerable demand: at this place is a large poor-house. Warehouses are erected upon the banks of the canal, and in the town are several malting concerns and a good brewery. In 1821 the parish contained about 1,000 inhabitants, but the population has augmented since that census.

ASTON-UPON-TRENT is a parish and village, in the same hundred as Shardlow, two miles from that place, and about six and a half from Derby. The hall of Aston, a substantial mansion, the seat of Edward Anthony Holden, Esq. is in the village. The parish contains about 550 inhabitants.

WESTON-UPON-TRENT is a small parish and village, two miles from Aston. One mile hence is Dunnington park, the seat of the late Marquis of Hastings.

WILLINGTON, about five miles north-east of Burton-upon-Trent, is a small parish and village, in the hundred of Morleston and Litchurch, with a population of about 400.

TIDESWELL,

STONEY MIDDLETON, EYAM, WORMHILL AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

TIDESWELL, a market town and parish, in the hundred of High Peak, 160 miles from London, 25 from Manchester, 14 from Derby, and 6 from Buxton. It is situated in a bottom, among moorish and bleak hills, having a clear rivulet running through it, on each side of which the buildings are mostly scattered, and the houses, with the exception of a few, are meanly built; but the church is an ancient and handsome edifice, of the conventual form, with a tower at the west end, terminated by eight pinnacles. The only charity is a free school. Tideswell was formerly celebrated for its ebbing and flowing well, from which it is reported to have taken its name; but the water has long ceased to flow. In the neighbourhood are some cotton manufactories and spinning works; but the chief employment of the labouring class is husbandry. In the vicinity is Monsal dale, very much admired for its romantic scenery and picturesque beauty. At TUNSTEAD, a small village two miles hence, was born the celebrated canal engineer employed in the stupendous undertakings of the Duke of Bridgewater: he was the first person in this country who made aqueducts subservient to the purposes of canals. The market day is Wednesday: fairs, May 3rd, the second Wednesday in September, and October 29th, principally for cattle and sheep. In 1821 the parish of Tideswell contained 2,666 inhabitants, 1,540 of that number being in the township.

POST OFFICE, near the Church, TIDESWELL, Joseph Leech, Post Master.—Letters are despatched every morning at six, by a horse post to TADDINGTON, to meet the SHEFFIELD mail.—STONEY MIDDLETON, Mary Brightmore, Post Mistress.—Letters are despatched at the same hour and in the like manner as from TIDESWELL.

STONEY MIDDLETON is a chapelry, in the parish of Hathersage, in the same hundred as Tideswell; about four miles from that town. The houses forming the village are singular in their appearance, being scarcely distinguishable from the grey rocks which impend over them, and from which they appear to have been hewn. The church here is a small edifice, remarkable for its neatness, of octagonal form; erected principally at the expense of the Duke of Devon shire. The lime works in this neighbourhood employ many of the inhabitants. The population of the chapelry is about 635.

EYAM, a parish and township, in the same hundred as Tideswell, is about 4 miles and a half from that town. Nothing of consequence attaches itself to this village; though deriving at one period a degree of prosperity from considerable lead mines at Foolow, a hamlet in this parish; but for some years past these works have declined, and with them the population of the neighbourhood. By the last returns the parish contained 1,516 inhabitants.

WORMHILL, a chapelry to Tideswell, is about two miles and a half from that town, and is remarkable for a stupendous mass of rock, called Chee Tor, that rises perpendicular from the bottom of the dale to the height of nearly 400 feet, and is almost insulated by the river Wye, which flows in a circular direction, at the foot of the mountain.

WIRKSWORTH,

CROMFORD, LEA, CRICH, BRASSINGTON AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

WIRKSWORTH, a market town and parish, giving name to the hundred in which it is situated; is 140 miles from London, 48 from Manchester, 20 from Buxton, 14 from Chesterfield and Derby, 6 from Belper, and 3 from Matlock, on the direct road from the metropolis to Manchester. In Domesday survey it is called Werchesworde, but, according to vulgar tradition, took its derivation from the circumstance of malefactors being condemned to work in the lead mines here, and their labours proving valuable, it was said their work is worth, hence the easy transition to its present mode of spelling. Several courts leet and courts baron are held at Easter, Michaelmas, and at other periods, by the various lords of the different manors in this parish, principally lessees of the crown; the magistrates in the town and neighbourhood sit on the market day; but there is no particular government, a constable and head borough being the only municipal officers. The public buildings are a handsome town hall, built of stone; the moot hall, a neat modern erection, where two courts sit, at Easter and Michaelmas, for the trial of mineral causes; a free grammar school, alms-houses, founded by Anthony Fell, Esq. and a handsome Gothic church, dedicated to St. Mary, which is a vicarage, in the patronage of the dean of Lincoln; the present incumbent is the Rev. Henry Gordon; the curates are the Rev. Nathan Hubbersty, master of the free grammar school, and the Rev. William Hutchins. Other places of worship are, chapels for the independent and Wesleyan methodists, and general baptists. The lead business has been for centuries the staple trade of the place. About fifty years ago a pig of lead, weighing 126lbs. was discovered on Cromford moors, with the name of the Emperor Adrian, in raised letters, upon it, and others of a similar kind have been found in places adjacent; these circumstances form good evidence that mines of this metal were worked here by the Romans; and it is ascertained that the Saxons found them productive in the eighth century. The ore is found in great plenty round about this town, especially towards the north, north-east and west, of various kinds, besides other minerals, as lapis calaminaris, ochres, antimony, flour and other spar, mill and grind-stones, and grit-stone. The denominative qualities of the lead ore are distinguished by the names of bing and peser, and a third, which being passed through a sieve in washing, is called smitham; the fourth, caught by a slow stream of water, is termed beleand, and is as fine as flour, but the most inferior in quality; all the ore, as it comes from the mines, is beaten in pieces and washed by women; the lead is then melted in furnaces, and poured into moulds of various sizes. Lead, although of so much consequence, is not the only article of commerce connected with this town. Calico, gingham, and silk weaving employs many of the inhabitants; besides wool-combing, and the making of hats; and upon the banks of the river Ecclesbourn, which forms the eastern boundary of the parish, are several corn mills, and a tape and smallware manufactory: the Cromford canal runs parallel with the river, for the distance of about three miles, passing on to Whaley, in Cheshire, where it communicates with the Peak Forest canal and will shortly be joined by a rail-road from Manchester, which has already cost upwards of £135,000. and it is estimated that £20,000. more will be required to complete this great undertaking: the length of the rail-way when finished will exceed thirty-three miles. In Wirksworth are several genteel residences, and in its neighbourhood are Willersley castle, the seat of Richard Arkwright, Esq. Hopton hall, the seat of Philip Gell, Esq. &c. &c. The general aspect of the country here is fertile, producing fine herbage, and corn of most descriptions, except on the north side, which, in consequence of the devastation and spoil made by the mining operations, has rather a sterile and barren appearance, although it affords good pasturage for cattle. The weekly market is on Tuesday: fairs are on Shrove Tuesday, Easter Tuesday, May 12th, July 8th, September 8th, and the third Tuesday in November, for cattle, pedlary, &c. the last named being also a statute fair for hiring servants. The entire parish of Wirksworth contained, in 1821, 7,315 inhabitants, of which number 3,787 were returned as belonging to the township, and 904 in the hamlet of MIDDLETON-BY-WIRKSWORTH.

CROMFORD, a village, situated about mid-way between Matlock and Wirksworth, is eminently distinguished by the extensive cotton works, established by the late Sir Richard Arkwright, the father of the improvements effected in this branch of trade in this country, and of the extension of the cultivation of cotton in foreign climes. These works are now in the proprietary of Messrs. Robert & Peter Arkwright; which, with the lead mines, smelting works, manufacture of red lead, grinding and preparing calaminaris, &c. give employment to a great number of hands, and renders this village of high importance in a mercantile view. Willersley castle, the beautiful seat of Richard Arkwright, Esq. stands on the south side of a commanding eminence, which terminates the extensive range of rocks that forms the eastern boundary of the Derwent in its course through Matlock dale: the castle consists of a body, in the form of an oblong square, having a circular tower rising from the centre of the roof, and semi-circular ones projecting from the entrance and the two wings, with a round tower at each angle: the whole edifice is embattled, and the exterior of white free-stone. This building was erected by the late Sir Richard Arkwright, in the year 1782: on the 8th of August, 1791, the house (before it was inhabited) was, by an over-heated stove, set on fire, and the combustible part consumed. The mansion is now furnished with great taste and neatness; the gardens and walks are most judiciously laid out, and the plantations are rich and extensive: the number of trees planted by Mr. Arkwright on this estate, have averaged 50,000 annually. The chapel here, under the establishment, was begun by the late Sir Richard Arkwright, and finished by his son Richard. It is a perpetual curacy in the gift of the family, and in the incumbency of the Rev. Richard Ward. Here are also a Wesleyan methodist chapel, and Sunday schools, the latter established by the late Sir Richd. Arkwright, to whom, indeed, the origin of the town may be entirely ascribed. In 1790 this gentleman obtained the grant of a market, which is now held on Tuesday. In 1821 the township contained 1,240 inhabitants, but the population has been increasing since that period.

LEA, about three miles and a half N. E. from Wirksworth, is a mining village, and contains smelting works, red lead manufactories, and also a wool combing mill.

CRICH parish extends into the hundreds of Morleston, Scarsdale, and Wirksworth, the village is about 2 miles S. W. of Wingfield, and 5 E. from Wirksworth; its trade is chiefly of a local nature. Two small fairs are held here, viz. on old Lady-day and old Lammas-day. In 1821 the number of inhabitants in the whole parish was about 3,000.

BRASSINGTON township and village, in the parish of Bradbourn, and in the hundred of Wirksworth, is 4 miles N. W. from the last named town, and contains about 700 inhabitants, principally in agricultural employment.

POST OFFICE, Coldwell-street, WIRKSWORTH, Mrs. Brace, Post Mistress.—Letters are despatched to DERBY by a horse post every morning at half-past six, and arrive every afternoon at half-past one.—To BAKEWELL letters are despatched every afternoon at half-past one, and arrive every morning at half-past six.

DURHAM.

THE figure of this county is triangular: it is bounded on the east side, from the mouth of the river Tees to Tynemouth, by the German ocean; on the north, it is separated from Northumberland by the rivers Tyne and Derwent, and some artificial boundaries; on the west, it is divided from Cumberland and Westmoreland by the Crookburn and the Tees; the latter river forming the whole of its south and south-east boundary. The greatest extent of the county, from Shields on the north, to Sockburn on the south, is about thirty-six miles; its greatest length, from the peninsula of Hartlepool on the east, to the mouth of the Crookburn on the west, at the point of union of Durham, Cumberland and Westmoreland, is about 45 miles, and its circumference is nearly 180. Its superficial area includes about 1,040 square miles, and 610,000 acres.

NAME AND ANCIENT HISTORY.—Durham, the name of the city from which this county takes its title, is a corrupted term from the Saxon words dur, a hill, and holme, a river island. Camden says, the Latins called it DVNELMVS; and, according to other authorities, it is stated to have received its appellation from the Norman word Duresme. This part of England was anciently inhabited by the Brigantes, a class of Britons distinguished, by Tacitus, as being powerful, brave, and numerous, but who were subdued by the Romans, who included Durham within the division of Maxima-Cæsariensis; and the Saxons made it part of the kingdom of Northumbria, with which it continued to be connected till the union of the Saxon states, under Egbert.

SOIL, CLIMATE, &c.—The general aspect of this county is hilly and mountainous; particularly the west angle, which is a bleak and naked region, crossed by the ridge of hills termed the “English Appenines;” though they do not, in this part, rise to any considerable height. The eastern and central parts include some beautiful and fertile vallies, pleasantly interspersed with hill and dale. The soils are various: near the river Tees, and in some spots bordering the other rivers and brooks, the soil is loamy, or a rich clay; at a further distance from the waters, the soil is of a poorer nature, commonly termed water-shaken, with spots of gravel intermixed; the hills between the sea, and an imaginary line drawn from Barnard Castle to Alansford are, for the most part, covered with a dry loam, the fertility of which varies in proportion to its depth: from this line west, the summit, as well as the sides of the hills, are moorish wastes—the country possessing such diversity of soil, the produce is, of course, proportionably various. The woodlands are not of any considerable extent, and chiefly confined to the parks and seats of the nobility. The banks of the rivers and brooks are, however, fringed with wood of long growth, particularly in the vicinity of the city. The public roads are in general good; but those off the main lines of thoroughfare are narrow and irregular; the spirit of improvement is, however, rapidly manifesting itself in the highways. The CLIMATE is esteemed healthy; and although the air is sharp in the western parts, it is mild and genial towards the sea; the vapours from the salt water mitigating the cold, which, in a situation so far north, would otherwise be very severe.

MINES AND MINERALS.—The east and north-east parts of the county are famous for their extensive coal mines; and the quantity of this important article is so great as to exceed accurate calculation. The number of men employed in this trade, on the river Wear, are estimated as approaching near to 20,000, and it is calculated that more than 30,000 persons are supported entirely by the coal works. In the vicinity of Wolsingham a beautiful black spotted lime stone is procured, which is wrought into hearths, chimney-pieces, and other ornaments: fine mill-stone, and many excellent quarries of slate and fire-stone, are found in different parts of the county, and Gateshead-fell produces what are vulgarly called, Newcastle grind-stones. The principal lead mines are situated in Teesdale and Weardale; but those of the former place are not so successfully worked as the latter.

MANUFACTURES AND PRODUCE.—The manufactures of this county are numerous, various, and important: at Chester-le-street, Washington, Salwell, Winlaton, and Lumley, are extensive iron-foundries and works: and at Shortley Bridge, Derwent-coat, and Black-hall mills, manufactories of steel for sword blades. At Durham are manufactured tammies, carpets, and waistcoatings; at Darlington, tammies, carpets, and coarse linens, flax spinning, and grinding optical glasses: at South Shields are extensive salt works; at Stockton, Sunderland and Shields, sail cloths, glass, and other articles; at Shields, Sunderland, and Hartlepool, ship-building; and cottons are manufactured in several districts. As an agricultural county, Durham, although not ranking with the most valuable in this kingdom, is by no means unimportant in its productions under this head. The eastern and central parts are alternately appropriated to the growth of corn and pasturage. Wheat, barley, oats and peas, are the chief productions, but the harvests are hazardous, and the crops precarious in value. The farms are of a middling size, few exceeding 200 acres, and about one-third of the land is supposed to be of ecclesiastical tenure. The waste lands, some few years since, were of great extent in the west part of the county, being supposed to occupy nearly 130,000 acres: enclosures since that period have taken place, and consequently reduced the quantity of unproductive land. The cattle of Durham are in great repute, not being inferior to any in England, for form, weight, quickness in fattening, or value to the dairy. The sheep are, in general, the improved Tees-water breed.

RIVERS, SPRINGS, &c.—The principal rivers in this county are the Tees, the Wear, and the Derwent. The Tees rises on the vast moor district, wherein the counties of York, Cumberland, Westmoreland, Durham, and Northumberland unite, and flows south-east through the romantic valley of Teesdale, for nearly thirty miles, when suddenly turning to the north-east, at Sockburn, it falls into the German sea below Stockton, and is affected as high as that town by the tide, so as to admit ships of considerable burthen. The waters forming the Wear originate from the same wild moors which give birth to the Tees, but flowing considerably to the north of that river, it crosses the central part of the county, and loses itself in the sea, near Sunderland; it is navigable as far as Lumley Castle, from whence great quantities of coal are conveyed to the former place. The Derwent rises in the same district as the two former rivers, north of the Wear, and pursues nearly a parallel course with that river, giving animation and interest to a wild and mountainous tract on the north borders of the county, till it falls into the Tyne, near Swalwell. At Birtley is a singular and productive salt spring, four times stronger than any sea water; and at Butterby, near Durham, is another of the same nature, issuing from a rock in the middle of the river Wear, but only visible when that river is low.

This county has usually been termed the bishopric, on account of the great powers formerly possessed by the bishop of the diocese; who was said to have all the authority in Durham that the king exercised elsewhere. It is reputed one of the best bishopricks in England, having thirteen livings in the episcopal gift, of from £300. to £1,000. a year each. It is a palatine county, in the province of York and diocese of Durham; and returns four members to parliament, viz. two for the county, which is represented by the Hon. W. J. F. V. Powlett, and John George Lambton, Esq.; and two for the city. The county is apportioned into four wards, viz. CHESTER, DARLINGTON, EASINGTON, and STOCKTON; besides the two districts of ISLANDSHIRE and NORMANSHIRE: the two first named wards are sub-divided into three, and the two latter into two divisions, according to their local situations. These several wards and districts contain one city, 12 market towns, and 135 parishes, the whole county being comprised within the see, and is included in the northern circuit.

POPULATION.—According to the census of 1821, there were houses inhabited in the county, 32,793 ; uninhabited, 966 ; and houses building, 257. The number of families then resident in the county was 45,940 ; comprising 99,100 males, and 108,573 females ; total, 207,673 : and by a calculation made by order of government, which included persons in the army and navy, for which was added after the ratio of about one to thirty prior to the year 1811, and one to fifty for that year and the census of 1821, to the returns made from the several districts ; the population of the county, in round numbers, in the year 1700, was 95,500—in 1750, 135,000—in 1801, 165,700—in 1811, 183,600—and in 1821, 211,900. The increased population in the fifty years, from the year 1700 was 39,500—from 1750 to 1801, the increase was 30,700—from 1801 to 1811, the increase was, 17,900—and from 1811 to 1821, the increased number of persons was 28,300 : the grand total increase in the population of the county, from the year 1700 to the census of 1821, being about 116,000 persons.

BARNARD CASTLE,

A MARKET town and chapelry, in the parish of Gainford, and in the south-west division of Darlington ward, is 244 miles from London, 38 from Newcastle-upon-Tyne, 25 from the city of Durham, 16 from Darlington, and 5 from Staindrop : it is situated on the southern acclivity of an eminence, rising with a steep ascent from the river Tees ; and was originally built by Bernard Baliol, great grandfather to John Baliol, king of Scotland, who also erected a formidable castle, on the summit of a rock, on the west side of the town ; the ruins of which, including a round tower of great magnitude, are still to be seen : the walls are venerably mantled with ivy, and enclose a very considerable area, of an irregular figure. The vault over the tower part still remains, and is finely constructed : the keep, or inner part, is protected by a vast moat, with a portal at one end. The castle sustained a severe siege during the rebellion in the reign of Queen Elizabeth, and the garrison were forced to surrender to the rebels. The Duke of Gloucester, afterwards Richard III, resided some time in this castle, and founded a college in the town, of which no traces remain. A little to the north of Barnard Castle is MARWOOD, formerly a considerable town, and at one time giving name to a wide district ; of this town the only remains are part of the church, converted into a barn. From the castle is a very beautiful view of the Tees, over which is a bridge of two arches, built in 1596. The principal street of this town is spacious, nearly a mile in length, the houses have a neat appearance, and some are handsome, being built chiefly with white stone. The Marquis of Cleveland is lord of the manor, and holds courts baron four times in the year, in the town hall, at which debts under 40s. are recoverable : at one of these courts a jury is chosen, which, with the steward of the manor of Darlington, constitute the government of the town. The church, dedicated to St. Mary, is not remarkable for any thing but its antiquity : it is a perpetual curacy, in the gift of the vicar of Gainford, and the Rev. John Davidson is the curate. The other places of worship are, a chapel each for the Wesleyan, primitive, and independent methodists. Here are a national school, supported by voluntary contributions ; an ancient hospital for three poor woor women, founded by John Baliol, which survived the dissolution, and still receives proper objects for the charity ; and a savings' bank. The principal manufactures of this town are, carpets, woollen plaids and tammies ; and upon the Tees are water mills for the spinning of thread. The seats in this neighbourhood are, Rokeby hall, about three miles distant, the seat of J. M. Morritt, Esq. ; Laitington hall, two miles hence, in the occupation of E. Unwin, Esq. ; and in the town is the handsome residence of Sir John Hullock, Knight, one of the barons of the exchequer, who is a native of this place. The scenery around here is scarcely surpassed by any in the kingdom ; comprising hill and dale, romantic dells and expansive views, the whole bounded by an extensive moorland country. The market day is on Wednesday, and is one of the largest for corn in the north of England ; there are also cattle markets every alternate Wednesday : the fairs are, Wednesday in Easter-week, Wednesday in Whitsun-week, and St. Magdalen's day, for cattle and various agricultural and other produce. In 1821 the chapelry of Barnard Castle contained 3,581 inhabitants.

BISHOP AUCKLAND,

AND THE VILLAGES OF WEST AUCKLAND, ST. HELEN AUCKLAND, ST. ANDREW AUCKLAND AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

BISHOP AUCKLAND, a market town and ancient prescriptive borough, in the parish of Auckland St. Andrew, and in the north west division of Darlington ward, is 249 miles from London, 24 from Newcastle-upon-Tyne, 12 from Darlington, and 10 from Durham: it is pleasantly situated on an eminence, bounded on the north by the Wear, and on the south-east by the Gaunless, which joins the Wear a little above the town. The ground on which it stands is nearly 140 feet above the level of the plain below; the descent on each side being partly formed by hanging gardens, and the buildings occupying the brow and remaining portion of the declivity. The town is in the manor of Bondgate, and the Bishop of Durham, for the time being, is the lord, who holds copyhold courts by his steward twice in the year, for the recovery of debts under 40s.: freehold, or borough courts, are also held twice in the year, at which small debts are likewise recoverable. The government of the town is in the county magistrates. The chapel under the establishment here, dedicated to St. Anne, is a curacy, attached to the vicarage of St. Andrew Auckland, and is in the gift of the bishop of the diocese: here are also chapels for the independent and Wesleyan methodists, and a friends' meeting house. This town boasts three well endowed schools, viz. Walton school, founded by Edward Walton, a quaker, for the education of twenty boys and girls; the Barrington school, built and endowed by Bishop Barrington, for the instruction of the poor, under the Madras system; and a grammar school, chartered by James I. in which thirty boys are clothed and educated. Bishop Cousin endowed an alms-house with £30. for the support of four poor people of Bishop Auckland. At the north angle of the town stands the bishop's palace, or castle, which, together with the courts and offices, covers about five acres: the edifice is an irregular structure, having been built at various times: the entrance from the town is through an elegant Gothic gate-way and screen, designed by Mr. Wyattville. The apartments of the palace are large and elegant, and are adorned with several fine paintings by Titian and other masters: the gardens are spacious, and the grounds near the mansion have been judiciously laid out in slopes and terraces, so as to command a great variety of prospects; and at the bottom of the lawn the Gaunless is crossed by a lofty bridge. The demesne lands contain about 800 acres. The remains of a Roman camp, called Binovium, is the site of Birchester hall, the seat of Charles Lyon, Esq. in the vicinity of which continue to be found many Roman antiquities. In the neighbourhood are a number of coal mines, the conveyance of the produce of which is facilitated by the Stockton and Darlington rail road. The land round the town is rather hilly, and for the most part fertile; the views are extensive and pleasing, enriched with woods, and enlivened by the meanderings of the river Wear, which takes its course through a finely cultivated valley. The market day is on Thursday; and two fairs have been lately established, in March and October, chiefly for horses, cattle, &c. but the precise days are not fixed. In 1821 the township of Bishop Auckland contained 2,180 inhabitants.

WEST AUCKLAND, a township, ranking next in population with Bishop Auckland, is about three miles and a half from that town. Besides agricultural employment, many of the inhabitants are occupied in linen weaving. The number, in 1821, was 1,106.

ST. HELEN AUCKLAND, in the same parish and ward as Bishop Auckland, is about three miles from that town, and is worthy of notice, as containing, within half a mile of the village, Raby castle, the magnificent seat of the Earl of Darlington, situated on the side of an extensive park, and commanding a beautiful prospect. It was erected about 1378, by John de Neville, Earl of Westmoreland. In the reign of James I. the castle, with the demesnes of Raby, were purchased by Sir Harry Vane, from whom they descended to the present noble possessor. In the autumn of 1806, the Prince of Wales, on a visit here, was received with all the splendour and hospitality for which this castle was noted in feudal times. The Stockton and Darlington rail-road passes through this village; and it contains a chapel of ease to the parish church of Auckland St. Andrew. The chapelry contained, in 1821, about 230 inhabitants.

ST. ANDREW AUCKLAND, is a populous and extensive parish, with a very small village, one mile from Bishop Auckland, containing the mother church (which was formerly collegiate) to all the district called Aucklandshire: the edifice is in form of a cross, with a tower at the west end, standing on rising ground, near the banks of the Gaunless. The whole parish, in 1821, contained 8,223 inhabitants, only about 120 of that number being in the village.

POST OFFICE, Market-place, BISHOP AUCKLAND, Thomas Walton, Post Master.—Letters from LONDON and all parts south, and from EDINBURGH and all parts of the north, arrive every morning at seven, via DARLINGTON, and are despatched every afternoon at four by a horse post.—From HAMSTERLEY, letters arrive every Tuesday and Friday, and are despatched the same days by a foot post.—From WEST AUCKLAND, letters arrive every Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday, and are despatched the same days by a foot post.—From WILTON-LE-WEAR, letters arrive and are despatched daily by a foot post.

CHESTER-LE-STREET

AND THE VILLAGE OF GREAT LUMLEY.

CHESTER-LE-STREET, formerly the see of a bishop, though now but an inconsiderable town, in a parish of the same name, and in the middle division of Chester ward, is 256 miles from London, 8 from Gateshead and Newcastle, and 6 from Durham: it is pleasantly situated in a valley, to the west of the river Wear, and on the Roman military way leading to Newcastle: the Saxons called it Cuncestre, or Cunegester, and under that name it became the episcopal see of Durham. The church (anciently collegiate) dedicated to St. Cuthbert, is a handsome stone edifice, with a tower, the base of which is square, but above the roof it takes an octagonal shape and is terminated by an elegant stone spire, supposed to be the handsomest in the north of England, the entire height being 156 feet. In the north aisle of this church are an arrangement of mural monuments, with effigies of the deceased ancestry of the noble family of the Lumleys, beginning in the time of the Conqueror, down to the reign of Queen Elizabeth. The living is a perpetual curacy, in the joint patronage of Hylton Joliffe, Esq. and Lady Byron; the Rev. Wm. Nesfield is the incumbent. Copyhold courts are held twice in the year, usually in the months of April and October, by the lord bishop, for the recovery of debts under 40s. The Wesleyan and independent methodists have each a meeting house here; and a mechanics' institute is established, under the patronage of John George Lambton, Esq., M.P.: twelve poor children of the town are educated from an annual allowance made by a Mrs. Teward. This town derives much benefit from the number of extensive coal mines in the neighbourhood, and no mean advantage from many respectable residences and noble seats in its immediate vicinity. Three quarters of a mile to the east stands Lumley castle, the fine baronial seat of the Earl of Scarborough; it is one of the largest structures in this part of England; the grounds around it are ornamented with beautiful plantations, and the park is extensive and well stocked with deer: two miles north-east from this castle is Lambton castle, the seat of J. G. Lambton, Esq. one of the members for the county; and a short distance hence is Chester deanery, the property of Hylton Joliffe, Esq. The country round here may be considered fertile; it is level towards the east, and the views from many points are extensive and pleasing. In 1821 the population was about 1,900.

GREAT LUMLEY, a township and village, in the parish of Chester-le-street, is about two miles south-east of that town, in the centre of an immense coal district, from which it derives its sole importance and support. The number of inhabitants amounted at the last census to 1,240.

POST OFFICE, CHESTER-LE-STREET, Thomas Cuthbertson, Post Master.—Letters from LONDON, and all parts of the south, arrive every morning at two, and are despatched every evening at ten minutes after seven, by a horse post to DURHAM.—From EDINBURGH, NEWCASTLE, and all parts of the north, letters arrive every night at half-past ten—and are despatched every morning at two.

DARLINGTON,

AND THE VILLAGES OF CONISCLIFFE, PIERSEBRIDGE, HAUGHTON-LE-SKERNE AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

DARLINGTON, a parish, and market and borough town by prescription, in the south-east division of the ward to which it gives name, is 241 miles from London, 32 from Newcastle, 18 from Durham, and 16 from Barnard Castle. It is situated on the side of a hill which slopes to the river Skerne, over which there is a bridge; and is divided into four constaberies, viz. Darlington borough, Bondgate, Prebend-row, and Oxenhall, or Oxen-le-field, or Orney field. The borough is governed by a bailiff, appointed by the bishop of Durham, who holds a court twice in the year, for the manor of Bondgate, and a borough court also twice in the year, at all of which courts are recoverable debts under 40s. the bailiff being the judge. The principal ornament of the town is the church, which was formerly collegiate; a noble Gothic structure, built by Bishop Hugh Pudsey, about the year 1160; it is in the form of a cross, with a tower rising from the centre, surmounted by a tall light spire: the west door is highly finished with archings and pilasters, cylindrical and octagonal interchangeably: it is to be regretted that the interior is not correspondent with the imposing exterior of this ancient fabric; the body of the church being greatly disfigured by the irregular disposition of the pews and galleries. The living is a perpetual curacy, in the gift of the Earl of Darlington, who is lay rector. The other places of worship are for methodists, independents, Roman catholics, and a friends' meeting house. Adjacent to the church is the free grammar school, founded by Queen Elizabeth about 1567; besides which, there are Sunday schools; an academy, founded by the society of friends, in high repute, where the higher branches of literature are taught; a savings' bank, dispensary, a neat town hall, and a commodious meat market. The principal manufactures of Darlington are, carpets, flax and worsted spinning, &c. The Skerne, in its course, besides turning many mills, drives the extensive worsted mill of Messrs. Pease. The Stockton and Darlington rail-way comes to this place, which was the first of the same extent in the kingdom: the whole length of the main line, commencing at Witton park colliery, near West Auckland, by Darlington and Yarm to Stockton, is twenty-four miles and a half, the cost of which is estimated at about £5,000. per mile, including erections for the convenience of trade: the charges for conveyance are, for coals, lime, and other minerals, 1½d. per ton per mile, for merchandize 3d. per ton per mile, and for coaches 3d. per mile. The line is worked principally by loco-motive engines: land has been purchased for a double line, but as yet it is only single, with passing places at the distance of 100 yards from each. There are two fixed engines on the line, which work four inclined planes, half a mile in length; one being of sixty horse power and the other of thirty.

POST OFFICE, High-row, DARLINGTON, Richard Wilson, Post Master.—Letters from LONDON, YORK, LEEDS, MANCHESTER, LIVERPOOL, and all parts of the south, arrive at fifty-three minutes after eleven at night, and are despatched at ten minutes after one in the morning.—Letters from BARNARD CASTLE arrive every evening at seven, and are despatched at five in the morning by a mail cart.—From EDINBORO', GLASGOW, NEWCASTLE, DURHAM, and all parts of the north, letters arrive at ten minutes after one in the morning, and are despatched at fifty-three minutes after eleven at night.—From STOCKTON, YARM, HARTLEPOOL, RUSHYFORD, BISHOP AUCLAND, and all adjacent places, letters arrive every evening at

One good horse can travel upon this rail-way with ten tons, two and a half or three miles an hour; on the level parts of the road, with fifteen or sixteen tons; and where the descent is a quarter of an inch per yard, the loaded vehicles will run by themselves. The locomotive engines are called eight horse power, and on a level will take fifty tons, exclusive of waggons, at the speed of five or six miles an hour. At Oxenhall, a hamlet between Darlington and the Tees, are four large cavities in the earth, denominated Hell Kettles, to which many fabulous conjectures are attached; but the opinion most worthy of support is, that they were originally coal pits, rendered useless by the rising of the water in them. The villages of DINSDALE and CROFT, both within six miles of Darlington, are famed for their medicinal springs, particularly the former, which holds forth strong allurements to the invalid, from its delightful situation on the banks of the Tees, and general romantic scenery. The weekly market is on Monday, which is well supplied with corn, &c. Fairs for cattle are held on what are called fortnight days, being every alternate Monday; other cattle fairs are held on the first Monday in March, Easter Monday, Whit-Monday and 10th of October. Statute fairs are held on the 13th of May and 23rd of November. In 1821 the entire parish of Darlington contained 6,551 inhabitants, including 5,750 in the township of Darlington-with-Oxenhall.

CONISCLIFFE, High and Low, two small villages, in a parish of the same name, and in the same ward and division as Darlington, are situate, the former three miles and a half from that town, and the latter two miles and a half. The church is a vicarage, in the incumbency of the Rev. Thos. Topping. The parish, which has no other dependent township, contains about 400 inhabitants.

PIERSE BRIDGE, or Pierce Bridge, a small village and township, in the parish of Gainford, six miles from Darlington and ten from Barnard Castle, is worthy of remark as occupying the site of a considerable Roman station; the north and west sides of the vallum, and part of the south side being very conspicuous. The Roman road passes it a few yards to the east, and many antiquities have been (and are still) met with at this station, particularly a fine altar, several urns, coins, &c. At this place is a stone bridge over the Tees, supposed to have been built by two priests, who erected also a chapel, some remains of which are still visible. In 1821 the number of inhabitants in the township was 236.

HAUGHTON-LE-SKERNE, a parish and small village, is very pleasantly situated, about a mile and a half north-east from Darlington: it contains a small church, and the whole parish 1,245 inhabitants, of which number about 500 are of the township.

six, and are despatched at five in the morning, by a horse post.—Letters to the south of IRELAND are forwarded by the YORK mail, and letters to the west of IRELAND, by a mail from CARLISLE.—Office hours: the office opens for the delivery of letters, at seven in the morning in summer and eight in the winter, and closes at half-past nine every night: letters may be put in until ten, by paying one penny.

DURHAM,

A CITY, the see of a bishop, and capital of the county to which it gives name, is 259 miles from London, 18 from Darlington, 14 from Newcastle and 13 from Sunderland. It lies nearly in the centre of the county, and is partly in the ward of Easington and partly in Chester ward. The city was founded about the tenth century, when the monks of the island of Lindisfarne, being harrassed by the Danes, left their place of sanctity, carrying with them the holy relics, together with the remains of St. Cuthbert and other religious treasures; they first retired to Cuneagester, now Chester-le-street, afterwards to Ripon, and lastly to Dunholme. The government of the city is vested in a mayor, recorder, twelve aldermen, town clerk, and two serjeants at mace. The charters of incorporation are granted and renewed by the bishops of Durham: the last was given by John Egerton, in 1780, the then bishop. The jurisdiction of the mayor extends only over the city: he also holds two courts for the manor of the city; and takes toll for grain, stallage, &c. Assizes are held twice in the year, sessions four times a year, and a county court is held in the new court house once a fortnight, when debts are recoverable. A court of pleas also sits, in which all palatine actions are brought; and the court of chancery is held once a year, about the beginning of September, out of which issue original writs. This city returns two members to parliament; the right of voting is with the freemen, in number about 1,050; the mayor is the returning officer: the present representatives are Sir Henry Hardinge, Baronet, K. C. B. and Michael Angelo Taylor, Esq. Among the objects which claim attention, as dignifying and ornamenting this city, the cathedral stands pre-eminently conspicuous; its situation is very happily selected, as laying open to full view, from many points, the entire of this sacred pile; the building stretches along the crown of an eminence, about eighty feet perpendicular from the river; and on the west, it rises on the point of rocks, which shew themselves on the summit of the mount, and almost overhang the stream. The whole length of this venerable pile, exclusive of the Galilee, is 411 feet, and the height of the middle tower is 214 feet; the ornaments of the towers are modern; the centre tower, which rises from the intersection of the nave and transept, is singularly rich and elegant. Besides the cathedral, here are six parish churches—St. Oswald's, which is situated at the top of New Elvet, is a very ancient structure, remarkable for its vaulted roof of wood, having a neat gallery and six musical bells; the patronage is in the dean and chapter, and in the incumbency of the Rev. P. Penson: the parochial chapel of St. Nicholas, situate at the lower end of the market-place, is a very ancient plain edifice, of which the Marquis of Londonderry is patron, and the Rev. Edw. Davison, jun. is the present incumbent: St. Mary-le-bow, on the east side of the bailey, built of hewn stone, remarkable for its uniformity of style, is a rectory, in the gift of the archdeacon of Northumberland, for the time being, and in the incumbency of the Rev. Thomas Richd. Shipperdson: the parochial chapel of St. Giles is of remote origin, in the same gift as that of St. Nicholas: St. Margaret's, a parochial chapel, in Cross-gate, is in the patronage of the dean and chapter; the incumbent is the Rev. W. N. Darnell, and the sub-curate the Rev. P. George: St. Mary's, in the South Bailey, is a rectory, in the patronage of the crown, and in the incumbency of the Rev. James Baker; the present curate is the Rev. Jas. Raine. The other places of worship are, chapels for the Roman catholics, presbyterians, independents, Wesleyan methodists, and a friends' meeting house. The castle is the residence of the bishop when he visits Durham, the building of which is attributed to William the Conqueror: adjoining thereto is a Gothic wing, the ruins of a tower, or keep, called Bear park, anciently denominated, Beau repaire, and said to have been the rural retreat of the priors of the monastery of Durham. On the west side of the Palace green is the exchequer, in which the courts of chancery, exchequer, auditor, &c. are now held: on the south side of Clay path are spacious charity schools, for the education of the children of the poor, on Dr. Bell's plan: the other scholastic institutions are, the united blue coat and Sunday schools; and the head grammar school, the pupils of which are called King's scholars, and educated gratis. Here are almshouses, for "King's and Bishop's beadsmen," and beadswomen, who are supported by funds from the richly endowed cathedral. The infirmary was established in 1799, and is well supported by voluntary subscriptions: the general subscription library, news room, and a mechanics' institute, are establishments of more recent date. Two newspapers are published here on Friday, viz. the "Durham County Advertiser" and the "Durham Chronicle." Manufactories for carpets, and worsted spinning are carried on to a considerable extent: upon the river Wear and other smaller streams are corn and paper mills; and in the immediate neighbourhood is the great northern coal field, stretching into the adjoining county of Northumberland, from which the London market is chiefly supplied. The principal coal owners in this county are, the Marquis of Londonderry, Mr. Lambton, Mr. Russell, the Hetton Coal Company, and Lord Ravensworth: the immense coal estates of the first named nobleman being obtained by his marriage with Lady Frances Vane Tempest, the only daughter of the late Sir Henry Vane Tempest and the Countess of Antrim.

Approaching from the south the view of the city is very imposing: in the centre, the castle and cathedral crown a very lofty eminence, which descends to the river Wear; and the banks on the opposite side of the river are bold, rocky, and partially covered with shrubs. From the north, it has a romantic and uncommon appearance; seemingly dispersed over a multitude of irregular hills, discovering in various parts the town, the castle, and churches, through several vallies, from one point of view. From the church of St. Giles, which stands upon very elevated ground, there opens to the south an unobstructed view: in front, the meadow grounds form a deep descent to the river, on one wing closed by the wood called Pelaw, on the other by the buildings of the street; at the foot of the hill the river Wear forms a beautiful canal, almost a mile in length, terminated by Elvet bridge on the right, and by the wooded inclosures of Old Durham on the left: on the opposite shore is the race ground, consisting of an extended tract of level meads, from whence, by a gradual ascent rise the two Elvets. The channel of the river, lying between New Elvet and the Bailies, affords an agreeable change in the scene; crowned by the cathedral, which presents its north and east fronts. To the right is seen Elvet bridge, and over it rise the buildings of Sadler-street, the towers of the gaol, and the battlements of the castle. The castles, mansions and seats in the circle of a few miles from Durham are numerous. Brancepeth castle, the seat of William Russell, Esq. is five miles hence; Lumley castle, the seat of the Earl of Scarborough, six miles; Lambton castle, the seat of J. G. Lambton, Esq. one of the county members, eight miles; Croxdall hall, the seat of W. T. Salvin, Esq., three miles; Elemore, the seat of George Baker, Esq., four miles; besides many others more distantly situated. Four miles hence, on the banks of the Wear, are the beautiful ruins of Finchall abbey; and two miles from the city, at Butterby, are some fine mineral springs; as also a salt spring, issuing from a rock, in the bed of the river. The surface of the country round Durham is in general hilly, covering a productive soil: the views from many points are picturesque, and the immediate vicinity of the town is ornamented with beautiful river-side walks, shaded by trees of rich foliage. The market day is on Saturday, and there are three fairs held in the year, viz. 31st of March, for horses; Tuesday in Pentecost week and 15th of September, for cattle, &c. By the census of 1821 the population of the city of Durham and its dependencies was, Castle precincts and Collega, extra parochial, 167 inhabitants; St. Giles' parish, 1,237; St. Mary-le-Bow, with North Bailey parish, 448; Little St. Mary's parish, 157; St. Nicholas' parish, 2,215; and St. Oswald's parish, including Crossgate, or St. Margaret's chapelry, Elvet barony, Elvet borough and Framwell gate township, 5,598: total, 9,822 inhabitants.

POST OFFICE, Elvet bridge, Thomas Caldcleugh, Post Master.—Letters from LONDON, MANCHESTER, LIVERPOOL and all parts of the south, arrive at thirty-eight minutes after one in the morning, and are despatched at fifteen minutes after eleven at night.—From EDINBORO', GLASGOW, NEWCASTLE-UPON-TYNE and all parts of the north, letters arrive at fifteen minutes after eleven at night, and are despatched at thirty-eight minutes after one in the morning.—From CHESTER-LE-STREET, letters arrive every evening at eight, and are despatched every morning at six, by a horse post.—From SUNDERLAND, letters arrive every evening at six, and are despatched every morning at six, by a horse post.—Office hours: the office closes every night at ten, and opens at seven in the morning in summer, and eight in the winter.

HARTLEPOOL,

AND THE VILLAGES OF STRANTON, SEATON AND HART.

HARTLEPOOL, a small sea port, market town, royal borough and parish, without any dependent township, situate in the north-east division of the ward of Stockton, is 253 miles from London, 30 from Newcastle-upon-Tyne, 26 from Darlington, 18 from Durham, and 13 from Stockton: it is situated upon a point of land projecting into the German ocean, and about two miles north of the estuary of the river Tees. Hartlepool was recognised as a port by the Normans, conveniently situated to receive ships and troops from the continent, upon any emergency. William de Brus obtained a grant from the crown, of a market, to be held every Wednesday; and King John, in the second year of his reign, granted and confirmed to his subjects of Hartlepool, free burghage, and to hold the like privileges and liberties as the burgesses of Newcastle: in 1216 he added the privilege of holding an annual fair for three days, on the feast of St. Lawrence. Very few places in this kingdom furnish a more correct idea of the fortifications of former times than this ancient town: the remains of a long extended wall, various gates, sally ports and turrets, are still visible, though the foundations have been much impaired by the sea. From the commencement of the eighteenth century Hartlepool has lost much of its consequence as a town of trade: its grand staple now is fish, many tons of which are yearly salted, for home consumption and exportation. A demand for fresh fish has been increasing for many years, and the town of Durham, and counties of Northumberland and Yorkshire take off large quantities weekly: London is also indebted to Hartlepool for turbot, of a quality not inferior in firmness and size to those taken on the Dutch coast: indeed, few places in this country are better adapted for an extended fishery than Hartlepool. The church here, dedicated to St. Hilda, was originally a beautiful edifice, but the chancel has been taken down, leaving only a recess for the altar, the side aisles having been rebuilt. The benefice is a perpetual curacy, in the patronage of the vicar of Hart, and incumbency of the Rev. Wm. Wilson. Here is also a methodist meeting house, and an endowed school for 30 boys. This port is a dependent one upon Stockton, the custom house establishment having been removed there in 1680; and the only officers stationed here are, a coast officer, two tide waiters and boatmen: here is also a pilot establishment, and a life boat and crew, supported by subscriptions and donations. Hartlepool is much resorted to as a bathing place; and on the south side of the town is a chalybeate spring, which is covered by the sea at every tide. During the season many distinguished families are to be found here. The Marquis of Cleveland has a commodious house in the town, besides which there are several other handsome residences. The view from the church-yard and from Moor house, the seat of Lieut. General Seddon, embraces a great extent of the ocean, together with the vale of Cleveland, diversified by the high lands of Yorkshire, surmounted by Roseberry Topping. The land is chiefly agricultural, and may be considered fertile and productive. The market is held on Saturday, by prescription. The appointed days for the fairs are, May 14th, August 21st, October 9th, and November 27th, but they are scarcely to be distinguished from other days in the year. In 1821 the number of inhabitants in Hartlepool was 1,249, but it is estimated the population exceeds 1,400 persons at this period.

STRANTON, a small parish and village, about two miles south-west of Hartlepool, inconsiderable both as to population and trade: contained, in 1821, about 80 houses and 400 inhabitants.

SEATON, or Seaton Carew, in the parish of Stranton, and in the same ward, about three miles from Hartlepool, is a pleasant bathing village, situated on the borders of the sea, and chiefly consisting of neat cottages, forming three sides of a quadrangle: it contains an inn and a row of convenient lodging houses. The prospects are beautiful and extensive; and the township contains about 320 inhabitants.

HART, a parish, with a small village; is about four miles w.n.w. from Hartlepool: the whole parish, in 1821, contained about 600 inhabitants, and the township of Hart nearly 240 of that number.

POST OFFICE, Receiving houses at Mr. James Thompson's, surgeon, near the Church, and at Thomas Harrison's, near the Ship public-house.—Letters are sent per bye post daily, at half-past five in the morning, to STOCKTON, and arrive every morning at half-past eleven from the same place.

HOUGHTON-LE-SPRING,

HETTON-LE-HOLE, NEWBOTTLE, EAST & WEST RAINTON & NEIGHBOURHOODS.

HOUGHTON-LE-SPRING, a considerable village, in an extensive parish of the same name, and in the north division of Easington ward, is 269 miles from London, and about six miles and a half from Durham and Sunderland. The village is situated at the head of a fine vale, opening to the west, and sheltered from the bleak winds of the north by a chain of hills. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, stands on a rising ground, in the centre of a square area, formed by the buildings in the lower part of the village. It is a valuable rectory, in the gift of the bishop, and in the incumbency of the Rev. E. S. Thurlow; the curates are the Rev. Daniel Crosthwaite and the Rev. H. A. Maule; chapels of ease to this parish are in several of the dependent townships, and in the village are, meeting houses for dissenters, methodists, baptists, &c. The bishop is the lord of the manor, and holds copyhold courts by his halmote clerk, twice in the year; at which petty causes of assault and debts under 40s. are tried, and nuisances within the manor presented. Near to the church is the Keeper grammar school, founded in 1574, a girls' charity school, and alms-houses for six poor widows. A mechanics' institute is established here, under the powerful patronage of the Marquis of Londonderry and J. G. Lambton, Esq., M.P. This parish is celebrated for having had as its rector the Rev. Bernard Gilpin, who, in the reigns of Queen Elizabeth and the ruthless Mary, was styled the apostle of the north; he was buried in the parish church in 1683. The trade of this place, and indeed an immense surrounding tract, is dependent upon the mining operations; and according to the success or declination of these subterranean works, so is the prosperity of this and the other neighbouring villages.

POST OFFICE, Sunderland-street, John Metcalfe, Post Master.—Letters from DURHAM arrive every morning at half-past ten, and are despatched every evening at five, by a mail cart.—Letters from SUNDERLAND arrive every evening at five, and are despatched every morning at seven, by a mail cart.

controlled. Many of the houses of Houghton are handsome; and within a few miles are the seats of several distinguished and wealthy individuals: Hetton hall, the seat of John Lyon, Esq. is two miles hence; Elemore hall, the seat of George Baker, Esq. four miles; and Seham hall, the seat of the Marquis of Londonderry, five miles. A small fair for two days is held here, in the beginning of October, said to have originated in a religious festival held in commemoration of the sanctification of the parish church. The parish of Houghton-le-Spring contains no less than fifteen dependent townships and the chapelry of PAINSHAW; and, in 1821, a population of 12,550 persons, about 3,000 of which number was stated as being of the township of Houghton; but it is estimated that since the last census the population has augmented very materially, and that the parish, at this period, contains nearly 18,000 persons.

HETTON-LE-HOLE, in the parish of Houghton, is two miles distant from that village, and contains about 1,000 inhabitants.

NEWBOTTLE, in Houghton parish, is one mile from that village, and contains a population of upwards of 2,300 persons.

EAST RAINTON is two miles distant from the same village, with about 700 inhabitants.

WEST RAINTON, two miles and a half distant, contains a chapel of ease to Houghton, and nearly 1,200 inhabitants.

These several villages are scattered over an extensive coal district, the features of which are for the most part hilly and barren, with here and there patches of cultivation, and from some of the high lands views may be obtained extensive and diversified.

MIDDLETON-IN-TEESDALE,

A SMALL market town, in a parish of the same name, and in the ward of Darlington, ten miles from Barnard Castle, which is the nearest post town, is situated near to the Tees, which is the boundary between this county and Yorkshire; and occupies a singular situation among hills, extending, in somewhat an oval form, round an extensive green. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in mining; and immense quantities of lead ore are raised and manufactured here in the course of the year, the north half of the parish being one series of lead mines. The Marquis of Cleveland is lord of the manor, and holds courts leet and baron once in the year. The church, an ancient but small building, is a valuable rectory, in the gift of the crown, and in the incumbency of the Rev. Francis Joseph James. The methodists, baptists and primitive methodists have each a meeting house here; and the governor and company for smelting lead have, within a few years, established a school for the instruction of the children of their workmen: there is likewise a free school, endowed by Mr. Christopher Stephenson, for the education of a limited number of children. Within six miles of Middleton is the celebrated "High force," or Force fall, a great natural curiosity, and is a sublime cataract, darting its waters over a huge rock of black marble seventy feet high. The force and boiling of the waters at the bottom of the fall have excavated several caverns in the solid marble, difficult of access, except in severe frosts; the noise of the fall may be heard for several miles round the country. About four miles above this fall is "Cauldron Snout," another cataract, on the Tees; a spectacle of vast and gigantic sublimity; forming a chain of cascades through a descent of 600 yards. Over the deepest and most awful part of the gulph, where the rocks approach nearest to each other, is thrown a beam of timber, serving as a bridge for those who are resolute enough to pass over this tremendous chasm. These falls, with their wild and romantic adjuncts, are great attractions to the visiter in the summer months, and are productive of advantage to the town of Middleton and its vicinity. About four miles from this town is Eggleston hall, the seat of George Hutchinson, Esq.; the gardens of which contain one of the best botanical collections in England. The scenery in this neighbourhood is highly romantic, with fertile vallies, pleasingly diversified by gently swelling elevations, and the neighbouring moors abounding with grouse. The market for corn, &c. is on Saturday. Fairs are, the third Thursday in April, 7th of July, and the second Thursday in September. The entire parish contained, in 1821, nearly 3,000 inhabitants, of which number, about 1,300 were resident in the township of Middleton.

POST OFFICE, Ralph Robinson Walton, Post Master.—Letters arrive by horse post from BARNARD CASTLE, every Monday, Wednesday, Thursday and Saturday, at half-past ten in the morning, and are despatched at half-past one in the afternoon of the same days.

MIDDLETON-ONE-ROW,

DINSDALE, HURWORTH, NEASHAM AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

MIDDLETON-ONE-ROW is a small and pleasant village, situated upon the banks of the Tees, about five miles and a half from Darlington and half a mile from the rail-way. Its chief support may be said to depend upon its close vicinity to Dinsdale, and to the fine country with which it is surrounded.

DINSDALE SPA, four miles from Darlington, is a small parish and village, in the ward of Stockton, situated upon the north bank of the river Tees, owing its prosperity to a sulphureous mineral spring, discovered here in 1789: the spa is surrounded by beautiful plantations, nearly a mile in circumference, and is much resorted to by invalids. A short distance from the spa is a neat church, of which the Rev. Percival Fry is the rector.

HURWORTH, a parish and village, two miles from Dinsdale and three from Darlington, contains the parish church, which is a rectory, in the incumbency of the Rev. John Theakston; the curate is the Rev. John Greensides. In 1821 the parish of Hurworth contained 1124 inhabitants, and the township 811 of that number.

NEASHAM, or Nysam, a small and ancient village, about three miles and a half from Darlington, in the parish of Hurworth, is noted as the spot for the performance of a long accustomed ceremony between the Lord of Sockburn, or his agent, and the Bishop of Durham, upon his first entrance into the county; the latter being met in the middle of the river Tees, when the water is fordable, or else upon CROFT BRIDGE, where, presenting the prelate with a falchion, as an emblem of his temporal power, he repeats the following words:—"My Lord Bishop, I here present you with the falchion wherewith the champion Conyers slew the worm, dragon, or fiery serpent, which destroyed man, woman and child: in memory of which, the King then reigning, gave him the manor of Sockburn to hold by this tenure, that, upon the first entrance of every bishop into the county, this falchion should be presented." Upon which, the bishop taking the falchion in his hand immediately returns it, wishing the Lord of Sockburn health and long enjoyment of the manor. The township of Neasham contained, in 1821, about 320 inhabitants.

ST. JOHN'S CHAPEL,

OR WEARDALE SAINT JOHN, is a small but flourishing little town, in the township of Forest quarter and parish of Stanhope, situated in Weardale, in the north-west division of Darlington ward, 272 miles N.N.W. of London, 27 west of Durham, 12 from Wolsingham and 7 from Stanhope. Two miles on the north side of the town mountains rise in every direction; and about the same distance W.N.W. near WEARSHEAD hamlet, the river Wear takes its name. The chapel of ease, which gives name to the town, is a handsome building, dedicated to John the Baptist;

SEDFIELD,

AND THE VILLAGES OF BISHOPS-MIDDLEHAM, BISHOPTON, TRIMDON, FISHBURN
AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

SEDFIELD, a small market town, township and parish, in the north-east division of Stockton ward, is 252 miles from London, 25 from Newcastle, 20 from Darlington, 12 from Hartlepool, 11 from Durham, 9 from Stockton, and 5 from Rushyford. The town is finely seated upon a swell of gravel ground, open to every aspect; is peculiarly healthful, and has been long noted for the longevity of its inhabitants, as indeed is the whole of the parish. The lands near the town are fertile and well enclosed; the whole of the adjacent country bespeaks profit to the agriculturist; and nine-tenths of the population may be said to derive employment from the cultivation of the soil. In old writings, the name of the town is spelled Sedgfield, supposed to have been derived from the abundance of sedge or rushes, which still flourish in this neighbourhood. The parish church, dedicated to St. Edmund, is a good substantial building, with a lofty tower and turrets, surmounted by spires. In the church is a fine toned organ, and the screen, which separates the chancel from the rest of the building, is well worth attention, from its exquisite workmanship. There are several ancient monuments and memorial inscriptions in the church: the edifice stands in a cemetery, planted with large trees, which adds to the whole an interesting appearance. The benefice is a rectory, in the patronage of the Bishop of Durham, and incumbency of the Hon. and Rev. George Lord Viscount Barrington, A.M.: the present curates are the Rev. Joseph Arrowsmith and the Rev. William Middleton. A methodist chapel is the only place of worship besides in the town. Here are alms-houses for five poor women and the like number of men, well endowed; besides which, to the honour of the town, Sedgfield abounds with other charities; and the benevolent bequests on behalf of the poor, have, at various times, been so numerous, that abject poverty is not here to be met with. Here is an endowed grammar school; and the church Sunday school educates about one hundred children. A court is held by the bishop's officers, occasionally, for the recovery of small debts; and at one of these hold-ings is appointed a municipal officer, called the griever; but his functions are not very important or extensive. In manufactures this town is not of much consequence; shoe making is the principal trade; and about a mile from the town is a forge, for making spades, shovels, and some other agricultural imple-ments. The main body of the town forms a large square, where a market is held every Friday, which is exceedingly well supplied with the necessaries of life: a large market or fair is also held the 1st Friday in every month, for swine; and statute fairs, May-day and Martinmas, for hiring servants. The population of the whole parish, in 1821, was nearly 2,000, about 1,300 being in the township of Sedg-field.

BISHOPS-MIDDLEHAM, a parish and village in the same division and ward as Sedgfield, is two miles N.W. from that town, containing a church, which, though small, is sufficiently commodious for the ac-commodation of its congregation. It is a vicarage in the patronage of the lord chancellor. The parish contained, by the last census, 827 inhabitants, and the township 404 of that number.

BISHOPTON, a parish and village in the S.W. division of the same ward as Sedgfield, is five miles and a half from Stockton, and twelve from Bishop Auckland. The church, is a vicarage, in the patronage of the master of Sherburn hospital, and the incumbency of the Rev. Walker Bamford, chaplain of that institution, and the present curate is the Rev. Thos. Burton Hol-gate. The whole parish contains about 500 inhabi-tants, and the township 365 of that number.

TRIMDON, a small parish and village, without any dependent township, in the S.E. division of Easington ward, four miles from Sedgfield, contains a small church, and about 300 inhabitants.

FISHBURN, a small village, in the parish of Sedg-field, one mile and a half from that town, contains a methodist chapel, (which is the only place of worship) and about 200 inhabitants.

POST OFFICE, SEDFELD, Mary Eells, Post Mistress.—Letters are received per foot post from RUSHYFORD, every morning at nine, and are despatched at two in the afternoon to the same place, in time to meet the LONDON mail to and from EDINBURGH.

 To STOCKTON, the same persons, every Monday, Wednesday and Friday morn.

SHOTTON, EASINGTON, CASTLE EDEN AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

EASINGTON, a pleasant village and parish, in the south division of the ward to which it gives name, is 17 miles from Stockton, 10 from Sunderland, and the like distance from Durham. Its situation is elevated, sufficiently to command a fine view of the German ocean; the high road from Stockton to Sunderland running through the centre of the village. The church stands upon an acclivity, at the western extremity of the village: it is a rectory, in the patronage of the Bishop of Durham, and incumbency of the Rev. Richard Prosser: the present curate is the Rev. Wm. Rawes. The rector has erected a school house, wherein eighty children of both sexes are educated, upon Dr. Bell's system, at a very trifling expense to the parents. A court is held here, by the steward of the Bishop of Durham, in the spring and autumn, when small debts are recoverable. In the town are some respectable houses of public entertainment, among which, the King's Head and the Shoulders Mutton stand foremost, for their accommodation to travellers. The population of the whole parish, in 1821, was 1,112, of which number about 600 were in the township.

SHOTTON, a small village and township, in the parish of Easington, about eight miles and a half E.S.E. from Durham, contains about 300 inhabitants.

CASTLE EDEN, a small village and parish, without any dependent township, is thirteen miles from Stockton and fourteen and a half from Sunderland. In the village is a neat church, erected at the sole expense of the late Rowland Burdon, Esq.: the living is a perpetual curacy, in the gift of his heirs. A good inn and posting house is in the village; and there was lately an extensive sail-cloth manufactory. About 300 inhabitants form the population of this parish.

POST OFFICE, CASTLE EDEN, William Rand, Post Master.—Letters from LONDON and the south, are brought by the LONDON mail from YORK, every morning at four.—From the north letters arrive by the return of the same mail from SHIELDS daily, at a quarter before eleven in the morning.—Letters for LONDON & the south, and for SCOTLAND and the north of ENGLAND, are despatched per mails as above.

SOUTH SHIELDS,

AND THE VILLAGES OF JARROW, HARTON AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

SOUTH SHIELDS, a sea-port, market town, township and chapelry, in the parish of Jarrow, and in the east division of the ward and deanery of Chester, is 281 miles N. N. W. of London, 22 N. N. E. of Durham, 16 from Chester-le-Street, and 8 from Newcastle. It is situated on the south side of the river Tyne, at its confluence with the German ocean, opposite to North Shields, and was formerly a fort or station of the Romans, on a hill, at the entrance into the harbour called the Lawe. Various Roman coins, broken inscriptions, and the remains of a hypocaust, or sudatory, were dug up in 1798. There is also an altar in the Durham library, found here in the beginning of the last century. The church, situated on the south side of the market place, is dedicated to St. Hilda. In 1402 Hemmingburg, prior of Durham, committed to the care of its chaplain the inhabitants of Les Shiels, Harton, and Wiveston, with a moiety of fees and oblations, certain fish, called St. Hilde fish, and a mark a year from the master of Jarrow. The edifice having been enlarged as the population increased, few traces of the old chapel have for many years been observable; and in 1810-11 it was chiefly rebuilt, at an expense of upwards of £4,000. It is parochial, under Jarrow: the living is a perpetual curacy, in the gift of the dean and chapter of Durham, and in the incumbency of the Rev. William Maugham: a chapel also, under the establishment, is in the Sunderland road, in the township of Westoe; the Rev. John Armstrong is the incumbent: a large Sunday school is attached to this, in which 200 boys and 120 girls are educated, upon Dr. Bell's system. The other places of worship are, a Scotch chapel, on the Long bank; another in Heron-street; the united Secession chapel, in Society lane; an independent chapel, in Wallis-street; besides others for the baptists, Wesleyan, new connexion, and primitive methodists. There are Sunday schools attached to nearly all these places of worship; besides a school, denominated the "South Shields' Charity School," founded by subscription, in 1772, for the education of eighty boys and forty girls: the total number of children receiving gratuitous instruction in this town amounts to 1,540. The societies and institutions in South Shields reflect considerable honour upon the inhabitants, among which may be enumerated, the dispensary, in East King-street, established in 1821, liberally supported by annual subscriptions, donations, and congregational collections; the society for the relief of the indigent sick, instituted in 1818, for visiting the abodes of the afflicted poor, supported by the benevolent exertions of ladies; the literary, scientific and mechanical institution, established in 1825, consists of nearly 200 members, who possess a valuable library of 400 volumes, and apparatus for assistance to their various researches in science: there are also several societies for the dissemination of religious knowledge, amongst which is the South Shields and Westoe auxiliary Bible society, established in 1820. The subscription library, in Tyne-street, was established in 1803; and a public news' room is in the Town Hall, in the Market place; where petty sessions are held on the second and fourth Wednesday in every month, when two or more of the magistrates preside, and in whom the municipal government of the town is vested. The dean and chapter of Durham, as lords of the manor of Westoe, hold a court leet and baron in the Town Hall, twice a year, for making presentments, the recovery of small debts, and other business connected with the manor. The gas works were completed at a cost of upwards of £4000. and the town was first illuminated on the 1st of October, 1824. South Shields has risen from an insignificant village to an important and thriving sea-port: ninety years ago it had only four ships, at the present time it has more than 400. Here are several dry docks, and a great many building yards; also large manufactories of all sorts of glass, three breweries, some large roperies; and two coal mines are worked in the neighbourhood, called Manor-walls-end and Hilda-walls-end. The salt trade, which in the beginning of the last century was carried on by several of the most opulent families in the neighbourhood, is at present confined to four or five pans; but this loss is well compensated by the increase of other trades. The life-boat owed its origin to a society of gentlemen belonging to this town, who, in consequence of the melancholy loss of the "Adventure," of Newcastle, in 1789, offered premiums for plans of a boat, which should be the best calculated to brave the dangers of the sea, particularly of broken water. Mr. Greathead happily presented one which met the approbation of the society, the committee of whom directed that gentleman immediately to build a boat at their expense. The utility of the new vessel was first experienced January 30, 1790, when it put to sea for the glorious purpose of rescuing some unfortunate mariners, who were the sport of the tempest in the offing, a number of cork jackets being provided for the crew, in case their boat disappointed the expectation of the inventor, and failed in its object; but the precaution was unnecessary, the wreck was approached, and the wretched crew beheld the life boat offering refuge from the tremendous abyss that was opening to swallow them. Mr. Greathead was rewarded with £1200, voted to him by the House of Commons, and honoured with a medallion from the Humane Society, with a diamond ring from the Empress of Russia, and with other marks of distinction. On the Lawe Bank, facing the sea, is a guard house and a battery, which formerly mounted four guns, but which have been removed within these few years; concerning which, Whitelock, in his memorials, says, "The Scotch, under General Lesley, in 1644, took a great fort over against Tynemouth, which commands all ships coming in or going out of Newcastle, and five pieces of ordnance, arms, powder and some prisoners, and lost but nine men." The higher parts of the town are commodious and well built, but the street which stretches along the shore of the river for more than a mile in extent, is narrow and inconvenient. The ropery walk commands a fine view of the batteries and barracks on the northern shore, displaying a striking military scene; whilst on the more distant ground, from the brow of lofty rocks, rise the venerable remains of Tynemouth priory. The church-yard also commands a pleasing view, in which Jarrow and its ruined monastery form the principal objects. The markets and fairs of South Shields are not in a flourishing state, commensurate with its population and general trade; though the large square, in the centre of the town affords ample accommodation; and under the town hall is a colonnade, giving shelter to those who expose butter, eggs, poultry, &c. for sale. The market is on Wednesday; and the fairs are, the 24th of June and 1st of September. The market and many of the principal streets are comprehended in the township of WESTOE, which has nearly tripled its population since the year 1801. According to the census of 1821, the parish of JARROW contained 24,189 inhabitants, of which number 8,885 were in the chapelry of SOUTH SHIELDS, 7,618 in the township of WESTOE, 3,530 in the township of MONKTON and JARROW, 3,921 in the chapelry of HEWORTH, and 235 in the township of HARTON.

JARROW, a small village, giving name to an extensive and populous parish, is situated three miles from South Shields, its population being included in the returns for the township of Monkton and Jarrow.

HARTON village and township is five miles north of Sunderland, containing about 160 inhabitants.

POST OFFICE, King-street, SOUTH SHIELDS, Thomas Wilson, Post Master.—Letters from LONDON, YORK, &c. arrive at seven in the morning, and are despatched to YORK, every morning at eight; from whence they are forwarded to MANCHESTER, LIVERPOOL, &c. and to LONDON, by NEWCASTLE, at six every evening.—From EDINBRO', NEWCASTLE, and NORTH SHIELDS, letters arrive every morning at half-past eight, and every afternoon at half-past four, and are despatched every morning at half-past eleven, and every evening at six.—From CARLISLE, HEXHAM, and all parts of the west, letters arrive every afternoon at half-past four, and are despatched every evening at six.

STAINDROP, GAINFORD, WINSTON

AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

STAINDROP, a small market town, situated in the parish to which it gives name, and in the south-west division of Darlington ward, is 246 miles from London, 33 from Newcastle and Hartlepool, 19 from Durham, 13 from Darlington, 9 from Bishop Auckland, and 5 from Barnard Castle: it is an ancient town, consisting chiefly of one well-built street, about half a mile in length, seated in a beautiful vale, and formerly a royal villa, as appears from Canute granting his mansion house here to the monastery of Durham, as an offering at the holy shrine of St. Cuthbert. The church, dedicated to the virgin Mary, once collegiate, is a handsome stone edifice, with an embattled tower at the west end, and contains several ancient monuments to the Westmoreland family; and near the altar is a superb one, in white marble, to the late Henry, Earl of Darlington, who died in September, 1792. It is a vicarage, annexed to the rectory of Cockfield, in the patronage of the Marquis of Cleveland and incumbency of the Rev. John Thornhill. There are three other places of worship in this town; one each for the independent Calvinists, methodists, and society of friends. Here are also church and methodist's Sunday schools; an endowed charity school; and a subscription news' room and library. About one mile to the north of this town is Raby castle, the noble seat of the Marquis of Cleveland, (late Earl of Darlington), mentioned more fully in the account given of ST. HELEN AUCKLAND, from which village the castle is half a mile distant. The charter for a market to be held in Staindrop was obtained in 1378, and annual fairs, which have long been disused; but the market is still held on Saturday, and is well supplied with articles of domestic consumption and agricultural produce. In 1821 the population of the entire parish was 2,047, of which number, 1,273 were in the township.

GAINFORD, a village, in an extensive parish of the same name, which is partly in the south-east and partly in the south-west divisions of Darlington ward, is eight miles from Barnard Castle and the like distance from Darlington. This place appears formerly to have been a very extensive manor, being mentioned by ancient writers as comprehending great part of that side of the county. The church is still the mother church to Barnard Castle, and is a vicarage, in the gift of Trinity College, Cambridge, to the senior fellow: the present incumbent is the Rev. George Macfarlan. The Marquis of Cleveland is lord of the manor, and holds courts leet and baron monthly, in the court house, at Barnard Castle. Coal and lime abound in this district, and there are some mineral springs in the neighbourhood. Colonel Cradock, M.P. has a very antique mansion here, called the Old hall; and one mile hence is Selaby hall, a beautiful villa, built by the late Earl of Darlington; besides which, there are several very respectable residences in the vicinity of the village: it contained, in 1821, about 500 inhabitants, and the whole parish upwards of 6,500.

WINSTON, a small parish and village, having no other dependent township, in the south-west division of Darlington ward, is ten miles from Darlington and six from Barnard Castle, seated upon the banks of the Tees, over which is a handsome stone bridge, of one arch, 111 feet in span; it was erected in 1764, from a design of the late Sir Thomas Robinson. A small church is in the village, of which the Rev. Frederick Mundy is rector. About 300 inhabitants were, in 1821, resident in the parish.

POST OFFICE, at the Queen's Head, STAINDROP, Mrs. E. Brunskill, Post Mistress—A mail cart arrives every morning at seven from DARLINGTON, with letters from the east, north, and south, and every afternoon at five from BARNARD CASTLE, with the letters from the west.—GAINFORD, Thos. Lamb, Post Master.—A mail cart arrives from the same places as above, at a quarter past six every morning, and at half-past five every evening.

STANHOPE,

THE VILLAGE OF FROSTERLEY AND NEIGHBOURHOOD.

STANHOPE, a market town, in a parish of the same name, and in the north-west division of Darlington ward, is 265 miles N.N.W. of London, 28 from Newcastle, 20 from Durham, and 15 from Bishop Auckland: it is situated on the north banks of the river Wear, in a district mountainous, and abounding with lead ore. The church, a plain and ancient fabric, dedicated to St. Thomas, stands on elevated ground, on the north side of the town. The living is a rectory, estimated to be worth about £700. per annum, principally derived from the tythe of the lead ore. Here is also a methodist chapel, to which is attached a Sunday school; besides which, there are the Hartwell endowed school; a national one, founded by Bishop Barrington; and the Stanhope school, founded in 1724, by the Rev. William Hastwell. A savings' bank and a general subscription library are established in the town, the former of which is patronized by the lord bishop, who, with some other distinguished individuals are trustees. In the immediate vicinity of the town is a great abundance of lime; and a little further up Weardale are the great lead mines, belonging to the London Company, Colonel and Mrs. Beaumont and others. The appearance of the country around here is barren, and principally moor land; but the Wear winding through a narrow valley, relieves, in some measure, the aspect of sterility, which would otherwise be more apparent.

POST.—Letters are received from and forwarded to DURHAM, every Sunday, Monday, Thursday and Friday, by a foot post.

In 1421 Stanhope received its charter for a market, which is held on Friday, and two fairs annually; but there are now three held yearly, viz. on the Wednesday before Easter, second Friday in September, and 21st of December. The parish is divided into four townships or quarters, viz. Forest quarter, containing, in 1821, 3,735 inhabitants; Newland side, 763; Park quarter, 1,259; and Stanhope quarter, 1,584; total, 7,341.

FROSTERLEY, a hamlet, in Stanhope quarter, is two miles from that town and three and a half from Wolsingham. Its trade and prosperity, as with Stanhope, is derivable from the mines, which give employment to the principal number of its inhabitants, a few of which are also employed in linen and check weaving.

STOCKTON-UPON-TEES,

AND THE VILLAGES OF NORTON, EAGLESCLIFFE, SADBERGE AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

STOCKTON-UPON-TEES, a handsome market-town, borough, and river port, pleasantly situated near the confluence of the Tees with the German ocean, in the parish, ward, and deanery to which it gives name, is 242 miles from London, 36 from South Shields, 34 from Newcastle, 20 from Durham, 12 from Darlington, and 9 from Sedgefield: it is 10 miles from the sea, and the Tees is navigable 10 miles above the town. Stockton is a place of great antiquity, and the early history of it is involved in great obscurity, nor has any conjecture been hazarded as to the derivation of its name. The ancient castle, which stood here, is supposed to have been occupied by the Romans, but the opinion has only for its foundation the circumstance of a coin of Nero Claudius Cæsar having been found about forty years ago, when digging the foundation of a quay, near the spot where the castle wall joined the river: the demolition of this castle took place about 1652. The borough of Stockton was incorporated by King John, supposed about the second year of his reign; the corporation consists of a mayor, recorder, aldermen, town's serjeant, &c.; the mayor being elected by a majority of the the burgesses or owners of burgage houses; who, by virtue of his office, is in the commission of the peace, and also a justice of the court of pleas, at Durham, during his mayoralty. A court leet is held before him and the steward appointed by the bishop, (who is lord of the borough) at the town hall, within a month after Easter and a month after Michaelmas. A court baron is also held at the same periods, and before the same officers, in which causes of debt or damage are decided, under 40s.: a halmote court is also held twice in the year, by the representative of the bishop for the manor of Stockton, of which he is likewise lord, when similar causes are tried as in the court baron. The town hall, a commodious and handsome structure, standing in the centre of High-street, contains an assembly room, court room, news room; and other suitable apartments for the use of the town: it was built in 1735, and enlarged in 1744, when the old toll booth was taken down. The parish church is a very handsome brick edifice, with a tower at the west end, containing a clock, a peal of six bells, with a set of musical chimes : it is a vicarage, in the gift of the bishop, and incumbency of the Rev. James Cundill : the present curate is the Rev. John Dickinson. Roman catholics, quakers, Wesleyan, primitive and independent methodists, baptists and unitarians have their separate places of worship, and some have their Sunday schools ; besides which there are two day schools, for the gratuitous education of the poor ; a charity school, exceedingly well supported by subscriptions and donations ; and a grammar school belonging to the corporation. The public institutions and buildings, and other charities in Stockton are, a savings' bank ; a mechanics' institution, formed in 1825 ; a school of industry, in Castlegate, founded in 1803 ; the dispensary, established about thirty years ago ; alms-houses, for the free lodging of thirty-six poor people ; and the workhouse. The custom-house is situated on the quay, at the bottom of Finkle-street ; the gas works, at the south end of High-street, were erected in 1822, at the cost of £5,000. The places of amusement are the assembly rooms, and the theatre. Races are held on the carrs, on the Yorkshire side of the river, opposite the town : the course, which is considered a good one, is one mile in circuit ; and the races commence on the Thursday, in the first week after York August meeting. As a place of commerce Stockton possesses advantages equal with any, and superior to some other sea ports on this coast : it has a good trade with Holland and the ports of the Baltic, &c. Its manufactures consist of damasks, diapers, towelling, sail cloths and cordage ; there are also two ship-building yards, two spinning mills, and the streams of water in the neighbourhood drive numerous corn mills. The great rail-way at this place (which is fully described in the historic given of Darlington) is of vast advantage to the town ; but the Tees is the great source of its growing prosperity, abounding with excellent fish, such as flounders, eels, smelts, &c. ; but the principal fishery is that of salmon. Coal mines are at the head of the railway ; and about three miles from the town are excellent quarries of blue stone, well adapted to the repairing of the highways. Fine views are obtained from many points in the vicinity of the town, particularly the prospect embracing the Cleveland hills, and the conical eminence known by the appellation of Roseberry Topping. The surface of the land is rather flat, but covering a soil fertile and productive, yielding

POST OFFICE, High-street, STOCKTON, Isabella Dunn, Post Mistress.—Letters by the mail from LONDON and the south (through YORKSHIRE) arrive every morning at two, and are despatched to DARLINGTON every afternoon (except Fridays) at four.—Letters from SOUTH SHIELDS, by SUNDERLAND, arrive every day at a quarter past twelve, and are despatched in ten minutes afterwards.—Letters are received from DARLINGTON every morning at seven, by a horse post.—Letters for SUNDERLAND, SOUTH SHIELDS, CASTLE EDEN, &c. are despatched at two every morning.—Office hours : the office closes for a short time at noon, and at ten minutes before four in the afternoon.—Letters are delivered daily, at seven in the morning in summer and at eight in the winter, and again at half past twelve at noon.

SUNDERLAND,

BISHOP-WEARMOUTH, MONK-WEARMOUTH AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

SUNDERLAND, and Bishop-Wearmouth, on the south side of the river Wear, together with Monk-Wearmouth, on the opposite shore, are connected by a handsome iron bridge, and form one populous commercial town and sea-port, pleasantly situated near the confluence of the Wear with the German ocean; 272 miles N. N. W. of London, 27 from Stockton, 21 from Hartlepool, 13 from Durham, 12 from Newcastle, and 9 from South Shields; the two first named places being in the north division of Easington ward, and Monk-Wearmouth in the east division of Chester ward. The derivation of the name, "Sunderland," has given rise to much disputation; some contending that it is from the ancient Saxon word Sonderland, signifying a place of privileges peculiar to itself; but the more probable supposition is, that it took its name from the original situation of the place, almost insulated by the Wear, the sea, and a deep ravine at Hendon Dean, which sundered or separated it from the main land, when probably the tide flowed much higher than it does now. Sunderland does not appear to have been recognized by antiquaries as a distinct place; nor until its increasing commerce called it into notice had it any signification as a town, but was included in the parish of Bishop-Wearmouth till the year 1719, when it was separated from it and established as an independent rectory. The parish of Sunderland is bounded on the east by the German ocean, on the north by the river Wear, and on the west and south by Bishop-Wearmouth. The commerce and population of this port have for this last century been progressively increasing, and the general improvement of the town, in appearance, has kept pace with its augmented means. The harbour is commodious, formed by two piers, on the north and south sides of the river, which is defended by a battery, opposite to which are barracks capable of accommodating 3,000 men; and at the extremity of the north pier is an elegant circular light-house. The borough of Sunderland consists of twelve capital burgesses, called freemen, and eighteen inferior burgesses, called stallingers: the freemen are elected from among the stallingers, and the stallingers from the other inhabitants. The Bishop of Durham is lord of the manor of Sunderland, whose representative holds a court leet and baron, once a year, for the recovery of debts under 40s.; and the magistrates meet twice a week, in the justice room of the exchange, for the despatch of ordinary business connected with the borough. Sunderland church, situated at the top of the town, is a handsome structure, of brick, with stone mouldings and a square tower, containing five musical bells: it is a rectory, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, in the patronage of the Bishop of Durham, and the incumbency of the Rev. Robert Gray; the Rev. John Hayton and the Rev. R. E. Leach are his curates. St. John's chapel, at the head of Barrack-street, is annexed to the rectory of Sunderland, and is in the same patronage and incumbency. The parliamentary church commissioners have granted a sum of money for the erection of another church at Sunderland; and on the 18th of June, 1827, the first stone of an intended Gothic structure was laid, in John-street. The places of worship not under the established church are numerous; no fewer than nineteen chapels, besides several licensed meeting rooms, being in the town and suburbs; they consist of chapels under the church of Scotland; Wesleyan, new connexion, primitive and independent methodists; Calvinists, unitarians and baptists have also their respective meeting houses, as have the quakers; and in Vine-street is a Jew's synagogue: many of these have their Sunday schools attached; and there are other charity and national schools which bestow instruction on a great number of children. The societies for the dissemination of religion are, an auxiliary Bible society, the ladies' church missionary association, and a religious tract society. The charitable institutions are numerous; the first in consequence and value to the afflicted poor is the infirmary, dispensary, house of recovery and humane society, for the united towns and their neighbourhood; a lying-in charity, a benevolent society, &c. The alms-houses are numerous, including those for superannuated sailors and their widows, and others for unmarried daughters and widows of master mariners; and Sunderland and Bishop and Monk-Wearmouth have their respective poor houses. The friendly societies consist of several lodges of free masons, a seamen's loyal standard association, and various benefit societies. Here are also a savings' bank, mechanics' institute, subscription library, the Sunderland reading society and news' rooms. The places of amusement are, the theatre, assembly rooms, and the baths. The buildings, &c. erected for the convenience of commercial purposes are, the exchange, in High-street, an elegant structure, uniting in itself utility and ornament; the custom-house, in Fitters-row, a well finished building; and the excise office, in East-street. The water works, at the head of Fountain-street; and the gas works, at the foot of Russell-street, are both upon a most liberal and extensive scale. The staple trade of Sunderland is COAL, and this great mineralogical production has for several centuries been a rich source of wealth in the counties of Durham and Northumberland. (The coal owners and their residences will be found in a subsequent page.) From 1704 to 1710, the average quantity of coal shipped at this port yearly was 65,760 chaldrons; and in 1826 the exports of this article had swelled to nearly 560,000 chaldrons. In 1824 the number of ships belonging to this port engaged in the foreign and coasting trade was 552, the aggregate tonnage of which was 83,520. In 1826 the number was 582, tonnage 94,583. Besides the important article of coal, extensive manufactories and trades contribute to the prosperity of the port and neighbourhood; and the imports and exports are various and considerable. Ship building is carried on to a great extent, there being generally about fifty vessels upon the stocks on the shores of the river. The export of lime to the Yorkshire ports and to the coasts of Scotland is very considerable. Here are also manufactories of bottle and flint glass, earthenware, and foundries for anchors and chain cables. The roperies are upon a grand scale, the machinery of some of which are impelled by steam, as are also three sawing mills. Grindstones, from the Wear, are in great estimation; and large quantities are annually exported. Two life boats are established here, the utility of which it is not necessary to comment upon. The grand and stupendous erection of ornament and utility, that imparts no inconsiderable share of consequence to Sunderland is, the iron bridge over the Wear, of one magnificent arch, two hundred and thirty-six feet eight inches span; the centre of which is one hundred feet from the surface of the water, at the lowest ebb tide, so that vessels to 300 tons burthen can pass under it, with only striking their top-gallant masts. The first stone of the abutments was laid on the 24th of September, 1793; and the iron work was cast and wrought by Messrs. Walker, at Masborough, near Rotherham, in Yorkshire. The mode of bracing the ribs was so simple and expeditious, that the whole was put together and thrown over the river in ten days; and the bridge was opened for general use on the 9th of August, 1796, after a splendid masonic ceremony and procession. The total cost of the erection was £33,000. and the tolls of the bridge are, at present, let for £2,710. annually. In the centre, on each side of the bridge, is the following inscription, "Nil desperandum Auspice Deo." Sunderland is a place much frequented during the bathing season; the sands are very fine, and on the shore are a number of machines for bathing in the sea: on the Town moor are medicinal baths, and at Hendon there are also hot and cold baths. The neighbourhood, embracing a few miles in circumference, is ornamented and enriched by many elegant seats and mansions, among which may be enumerated, Seaham, the seat of the Marquis of Londonderry; Sir Hedworth Williamson, Baronet, Whitburn; Thomas Wade, Esq., Hylton castle; Shakspeare Reed, Esq., Thornhill; the Honourable

Archibald Cochrane, Hendon house; Robert Reay, Esq., Hylton place; John Twizell Wawn, Esq., West Boldon cottage, &c. &c. On the north of Sunderland the surface of the country is flat, covering a soil not very productive; on the south and west it is hilly and fruitful; and on the east, the prospect is bounded by the German ocean. The market was formerly held on Fridays, but now on Saturdays, when large quantities of corn, provisions, &c. are exposed for sale, in the High-street; and a cattle market is held in Barrack-street. Fairs are the 13th and 14th of May, and 13th and 14th of October.

So closely connected is BISHOP-WEARMOUTH in the description of Sunderland, as regarding its trade and manufactures, that nothing remains to be noticed upon those subjects. It is a place of remote antiquity, and although its history is involved in great obscurity, yet it is ascertained to have been of considerable consequence in the Saxon ages. The more ancient part of the town occupies the south and west sides of the hill, and the space which formerly divided this town from Sunderland is filled up by a regular and well constructed street, extending near a mile in length, together with others branching on the north and south sides. On the most elevated part of the town is the church, dedicated to St. Michael, rebuilt in 1807, on the site of the ancient edifice, which had existed ever since the days of Athelstan: the benefice is a rich rectory, in the patronage of the Bishop of Durham, and incumbency of the Honble. and Rev. Gerard Valerian Wellesley, and his curates are the Rev. Geo. Stephenson and the Rev. B. T. Hazlewood. At RYHOPE and HIGHFORD are chapels of ease to this parish, and near the church, as well as upon Wearmouth green, are alms-houses.

MONK-WEARMOUTH is also a place of great antiquity, and was the residence of monks so early as the year 674, from whence it derived its name. Remains of the monastery are still to be seen near the church, which is an ancient irregular building, with a tower, supported on heavy low arches, and appears to have been the work of the eleventh century. It is a discharged curacy, and a peculiar, belonging to the Bishop of Durham, in the patronage of Sir Hedworth Williams, and in the incumbency of the Rev. Benjamin Hennecott. The only chapel of ease in this parish is at HILTON, of which the Rev. B. T. Hazlewood is the curate.

The population, by the census of 1801, of the town and port of Sunderland, including its suburbs and the out-townships in the parishes of Bishop and Monk-Wearmouth, was 26,511; and by the returns of 1821, SUNDERLAND contained 14,725 inhabitants; BISHOP-WEARMOUTH, 9,477; BISHOP-WEARMOUTH PANS, 483; MONK-WEARMOUTH, 1,278; and MONK-WEARMOUTH SHORE, 4,924; total of Sunderland and its suburbs, 30,887. The out-townships of Bishop Wearmouth comprise BURDON, FORD, RYHOPE, SILKSWORTH and TUNSTALL, which contained together 1,582 inhabitants. The out-townships of Monk Wearmouth consist of FULWELL, HILTON and SOUTHWICK, and contained together 1,442 persons: grand total population of the port of Sunderland, including its suburbs and the out-townships of Bishop and Monk-Wearmouth, by the census of 1821, 33,911, being an increase of nearly one-fifth in twenty years.

WHICKHAM, WINLATON, SWALWELL, RYTON,

BLAYDON AND STELLA.

WHICKHAM, a parish, township and village, in the west division of Chester ward, is 18 miles from Hexham, 4 from Newcastle, and 3 from Gateshead.
The village is genteel, pleasantly placed in an elevated situation, and contains a church, which is a rectory, in the incumbency of the Hon. Rev. Edward Grey. In 1741 a school was founded hereby the Rev. Dr. Thom-linson, for the instruction of children of both sexes.
In 1821 the entire parish of Whickham, contained 3713 inhabitants, of which number 788 belonged to the township.

WINLATON, a populous village and township, in the parish of Ryton, about five miles from Gateshead, is to be noticed for its extensive iron works. WINLATON MILLS were originally built for grinding corn, but in 1691 they were appropriated to the iron works, which produce edge tools, and various articles of that metal, and are used for the slitting heavy bars of iron. Two miles south of Winlaton is the fine mansion and park called Gibside, the seat of the Dowager Countess of Strathmore. The approach to the house is by a serpentine road, nearly a mile in length, winding through a forest of venerable oaks; and the park is about four miles in circumference. The township of Winlaton, in 1821, contained about 3300 inhabitants.

SWALWELL, about a mile and a half from Winlaton, in the parish of Whickham, is also famous for the iron works established originally by Mr. Ambrose Crowley, who, from a common blacksmith, raised himself to affluence and nobility, and the foundries of Messrs. Crowley, Millington & Co. at this period rank with the most extensive in the kingdom. Anchors of the largest size, mooring chains, &c. are manufactured here, indeed, almost every form of which iron or steel is susceptible is here produced. The multitude of people employed in these, and other works in the neighbourhood, form a great population. Schools were established by the founder of the iron works, for children of the workmen, who are instructed in reading, writing and accounts. The poor and the distressed were also the objects of the founder's solicitude; and the widows and orphans of the workmen were provided for by his fostering care. A code of laws, formed by this philanthropic artizan, regulated
the community around him, which, to a certain extent, superseded the general law of the land, and by the principle of arbitration, caused good fellowship
and harmony to displace litigation and animosity.
The township contained, in 1821, 1320 inhabitants.

RYTON parish, containing a village of the same name, upon the river Tyne, is very agreeably situated 4 miles from Whickham, 7 from Gateshead, and 14 from Hexham. The parish church is spacious, with a square tower, which is terminated by a lofty spire of an octangular shape, rising to the height of 108 feet; it is a rectory, in the patronage of the Bishop of Durham. Near the wall of the church yard is a large barrow planted with trees, but which does not appear to have been opened: a similar one at Bradley hall, in this parish, was opened a few years since and was found to contain the remains of a human body, lying in a square cavity formed by stones placed edgewise. The entire parish of Ryton contained, in 1821, 5763 inhabitants, of which number 1,502 were in the townships of RYTON and RYTON-WOODSIDE. BLAYDON and STELLA, two small villages near to Whickham, contain also iron works, and some extensive ones of lead. Within a short distance of Blaydon between Swalwell and Winlaton is Axwell park, the seat of Charles Clavering, esq.; the house is an elegant modern building, occupying a pleasant situation, being surrounded by grounds beautifully diversified, and embellished with plantations of forest trees. In the village of Stella stands Stella hall, a venerable Gothic mansion, formerly the residence of the Weddringtons, an ancient and renowned Nothumbrian family, now in the occupation of Mrs. Dunn. Stella township contains about 420 inhabitants.

WOLSINGHAM,

AND THE VILLAGES OF WITTON-LE-WEAR AND LANCHESTER.

WOLSINGHAM, or Walsingham, is a market town and parish, having no dependent township; in the n. w. division of Darlington ward, 256 miles from London, about 31 from South Shields and Hartlepool, 23 from Newcastle, 21 from Darlington and Chester-le-street, 15 from Durham and Staindrop, and 5 from Stanhope. The town is irregularly built, situated on the north bank of the river Wear, at the point where it receives the united streams of the rivulets of Thornhope and Weserow. The church, which stands on rising ground, is an ancient edifice, dedicated to St. Mary and St. Stephen, and contains a beautiful font, of Weardale marble, variegated with shells and other petrefactions. The living is a discharged rectory, in the patronage of the bishop of the diocese, producing upwards of five hundred pounds per annum; the Rev. Wm. Wilson is the rector, and the Rev. Philip Brownrigg is the present officiating curate. There are also in the town two chapels for the Wesleyan and primitive methodists, and a meeting-house for the baptists. The bishop is lord of the manor, and holds a court twice in the year for the recovery of small debts under 40 shillings. Here are a grammar school, founded in 1613, enriched by the several bequests of the Rev. Wm. Nowell, Messrs. Jonathan and George Wooller, and some other charitable persons; a charity school, supported solely by the benevolence of the Misses Wilson, for the instruction of 40 poor girls; and nearly 200 children receive education at the church and methodist Sunday schools. The poor of Wolsingham are periodically relieved by the interest of various benefactions, amongst which, the bequests of £200. each, left by the Rev. Edward Nowell and the Rev. Robert Gordon, and an annual rent of £18. per annum, produced from land left by Markendale Ashley and others, stand foremost. The first stone of the town-hall was laid in 1824, but it is not yet finished, and in its present state is a reflection upon the spirit and liberality of the town, and a drawback upon its consequence in the scale of improvements. The market is held on Tuesday; fairs are 12th of May and St. Matthew's day, for toys and pedlery, and on the Tuesdays before 1st and 31st March, and before the 12th May, 15th Sept. 29th Oct. and 23rd Nov. for cattle, &c. The parish contained, in 1821, about 2,200 inhabitants.

WITTON-LE-WEAR is a small village and parochial chapelry, four miles from Bishop Auckland, pleasantly situated upon the banks of the Wear; upon the south side of which stood Witton castle, formerly the baronial mansion of the Lord de Evers. The old castle was built about 1410, and was burnt down some years since while undergoing repairs: the present mansion, which is in the possession of the Hopper family, is a very handsome and commodious edifice. The chapelry contained, in 1821, about 530 inhabitants.

Opposite to this village, on the south side of the river, at its confluence with the Lynburne, is WITTON CASTLE, formerly the baronial mansion of the Lord de Eures, or Evers, who held it of the see of Durham, by military service. The old castle, which was a noble and venerable structure, was built about the year 1410, as appears from the licence for its construction, preserved in the archives of the see of Durham. The ancient edifice, some few years back was burnt down, while undergoing a thorough repair. The present mansion is a handsome and convenient dwelling, judiciously placed, so as to command fine views and a home landscape, cheerfully diversified by hill and dale, wood and water. Besides this mansion, there are in the vicinity of it, other very genteel residences, and the neighbourhood in general may be considered of great respectability, and the country round of a pleasing and fertile aspect.

LANCHESTER, a neat village and township, in a parish of the same name, which is partly in the west division of Chester ward, and extends into the n. w. division of Darlington, is situate upon the main road from Chester-le-street to Wolsingham, nine miles from each place, and about 6 miles n. w. from Durham. The church, which was formerly collegiate, is a handsome fabric, with a square tower and battlements, and the windows contain some fragments of good stained glass, and in the interior are several very ancient monuments; it is a perpetual curacy, in the incumbency of the Rev. Jos. Thompson. About half a mile s.w. from this village, on a fine eminence, is the Roman station Glannibanta, said to be the most perfect in the kingdom, having evidently once been of considerable importance: numerous monuments, coins, altars, and other relics have at various times been, and still continue to be found. The site occupies a fine eminence, about half a mile south-west from the village; but the outline of the prospect from it is bounded by still higher grounds, at the respective distances of two, three, and perhaps four miles: the station is observable at Elsdon, in Northumberland, and several other places, and has the advantage, that an enemy coming over the rising grounds must appear to the garrison. Lanchester parish is very extensive, and was formerly a rectory, having seven chapelries, and a revenue sufficient for the maintenance of a dean and seven prebends, but the college was dissolved at the reformation: it contains 14 townships and 4 chapelries, and in 1821 nearly 5,000 inhabitants, of which number about 700 were resident in the township.

POST OFFICE, Receiving house, at Elizabeth Watson's, WOLSINGHAM.—Letters arrive from DURHAM, by horse post, on Monday and Friday, at five in the morning, and are despatched at two in the afternoon of the same days.—Letters are also received by a cart, on Wednesday and Saturday evenings, and are despatched at two in the morning. Letters are conveyed to ST. JOHN'S CHAPEL, on Mondays and Fridays, and to STANHOPE, on Sundays, Mondays, Thursdays and Fridays.

WOLVISTON, GREATHAM, BILLINGHAM

AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

WOLVISTON, a village and chapelry, in the parish of Billingham, and in the north-east division of Stockton ward, is cheerfully situated on the road from Stockton to Sunderland, four miles north of the first mentioned town. A little to the right of this place is Wynyard hall, the seat of the Marquis of Londonderry, and which, in the life-time of Sir Henry Vane Tempest, the father of the present marchioness, was improved at a great expense; the walks and pleasure-grounds laid out with exquisite taste, and by the judicious intermixture of wood and water rendered exceedingly beautiful. In the town is a small church, the tower of which appears to be of ancient date. About 550 inhabitants are in the village.

GREATHAM parish and village, in the same ward as Wolviston, is four miles from that village, on the road from Stockton to Hartlepool, and is to be noted as containing an establishment, founded by Robert de Stichill, Bishop of Durham, in 1272, called, "the Hospital of God, in Gretham." The original foundation was for one master, five priests, and forty poor persons: the present establishment consists of one master, one chaplain, six brethren, maintained wholly in the hospital, six out pensioners, and one bailiff of the manor. The site of the old edifice is scarcely to be known, except by an excavation in the ground, surrounded by a line of trees which mark the situation of the ancient dormitory and other necessary buildings. The present habitation for the brethren was rebuilt by the late Duke of Bridgewater, on an elegant plan, with a lodge or mansion house for the master, seated in a garden, commanding a fine view of the river Tees and the Cleveland hills; the present master is the Honourable Augustus Barrington. The chapel occupies the chancel part of the old chapel, and is a vicarage, in the patronage of the Bishop of Durham. On Greatham and Seaton marshes, near the mouth of the Tees, were very considerable salt works: traces of these works are still to be seen, and have the appearance of breast-works and fortifications. The farms in the parish of Greatham, bordering upon the marshes, held by leases under the master and brethren of Greatham hospital, are covenanted to pay a stipulated number of bushels of salt as an acknowledgment to the hospital; these are now commuted for money. The parish, including the township of CLAXTON, contained, in 1821, about 500 inhabitants.

BILLINGHAM village, in a parish of the same name, is two miles and a half from Stockton, in the same ward as Wolviston. The parish is strictly agricultural, and contained, in 1821, 1,154 inhabitants, 400 of that number being in the township.

LANCASHIRE,

A PALATINE and maritime county, in consequence eminently conspicuous as regards manufactures, and of immeasurable importance in its value to the revenue of this kingdom, is between $53^{\circ} 20'$ and $54^{\circ} 25'$ north latitude, and between $2^{\circ} 0'$ and $3^{\circ} 17'$ west longitude: it is bounded on the north by Cumberland and Westmoreland, on the east by Yorkshire, on the south by Cheshire and Derbyshire, and on the west by the Irish sea. Its extreme length from north to south (including a detached hundred called Furness, which is separated on the north-west by a creek at the head of Morecambe Bay) is seventy-four miles, and its greatest breadth, which is at the southern end, about forty-five miles; its circumference is about 240 miles, and its surface 1765 square miles. The area of the county comprises 1,130,000 acres of land, of which about 35,000 are in tillage, 450,000 in pasture, and about 400,000 in woodland moors and mosses.

NAME AND ANCIENT HISTORY.—In the ancient history of this county we find that it was originally inhabited by the Setantii, or Segantii, signifying a people dwelling in the country of the waters; they were succeeded by the Brigantes, who also had a very extended track of country. The whole of this county was denominated by the Romans, Britannia superior. The Saxons included it in Northumbria, and formed it into a separate county about 680, soon after the conquest of it by Egfrid: at this period the Roman Alauna (the site of which is doubtful) was made the metropolis of the shire, and lent its appellation to the county. Soon after the introduction of Christianity, this county, along with others of the kingdom, were divided into parishes; and about this period religious festivals were instituted by the priests, which commenced on the evening of the day dedicated to the patron saint, and hence obtained the appellation of wakes, which are still continued in many parts of the county, and even tolerated on the sabbath, although the offices of religion have long ceased to form any part of the ceremonies attendant upon these popular assemblages. Previous to, and under the Norman dynasty, this county was distinguished as an Honour, and was of the superior class of seigniories. The first earl of Lancaster was Edmund Crouchback, youngest son of Henry III. In the time of the valiant John of Gaunt, fourth son of Edward, the county of Lancaster was advanced to the dignity of a palatinate, by a royal patent: it confers the title of Duke of Lancaster on the King, and many other high titles are derived by nobility from this county. Lancashire has been, at a great variety of periods in history, the scene of contention and theatre of strife, and turbulent faction has at times reared its discontented head. The sanguinary conflicts between the houses of York and Lancaster, and the royal forces of Charles I. and those of the parliament, under Cromwell, as well as the support which the pretender received from the disaffected, have stained the fields of this county with blood. The battle of Flodden Field, of more early date, gave testimony to the prowess of the men of Lancashire, and the achievements of the heroic bowmen and billmen, from the several districts of Warrington, Wigan, Rochdale, Preston, Blackburn, Bolton, &c. A very extraordinary page in Lancashire history must not be omitted—the Lancashire Witches; these personages, who, in former times, used to infatuate and strike terror to the weak, are now, in these happier days, deprived of the latter power, but possess the former undiminished, and exercise it uncontrouled over all classes, the strongest at times owning their sway: yet so little is their influence dreaded, that the term once opprobrious, is now adopted to express admiration, and the spirit of the convivial board is heightened when the horn is lifted to the “Lancashire Witches.” But, to go back to the age when the intellects of many individuals were darkened by this most preposterous superstition, to which even the legislature lent its countenance, and to which the tribunals offered up victims:—the case of Ferdinand, fifth Earl of Derby, affords one of the most striking, and best authenticated instances on record, of the power which this delusion exercised over the mind. On the 5th of April, 1594, he was seized with mortal sickness, produced probably by poison, secretly administered, and after suffering great torture he died on the 12th of the same month. While his complaint was at its height an image of wax was found in his chamber, with hair of the same colour as that of the earl, stuffed into the belly, no doubt to encourage the supposition that he was the victim of supernatural agency, and which himself seemed to believe, as “he frequently cried out that the doctors laboured in vain, because he was certainly bewitched.” In the same year the Rev. John Darrell was an actor in this scene of imposition, and a believer in the doctrine of the possession and dispossession of demoniacs; and one Hartley was executed for practising magic. In 1612 the belief in witchcraft continued to exist, and nineteen notorious witches were arraigned and tried at Lancaster assizes, on the 6th of August, of that year; but it does not appear that any of them suffered. In 1633, other cases of demoniac agency became cognizable, and so much importance did they assume, that Charles I. in person, and his physicians, judged one of the cases; when the accused were set at liberty, not from the discretion of the king, or cunning of the council, but from the discrepancy of the witnesses, and the appearance of the fact of subornation upon the part of some of them. These are only a few of the numerous instances of fraud and credulity which exhibited themselves in this county, age after age, under the delusion of witchcraft and demonalogy. Happily our criminal code now is freed from the reproach once attached to it, by the removal of all the statutes relating to witchcraft.

SOIL, AGRICULTURE AND CLIMATE.—The soil of Lancashire appears under several distinct heads: in Lonsdale, on the borders of the sea, it is perhaps less productive than most parts, being of a sandy marsh nature. The elevated part of the hills is in general moory, heathy and rocky; the flat tracts are chiefly described as loam or clay, gravel and peat being found in various proportions in all. The principal surface distinctions of soil are heath, moor, holme loam, clay, sand, and moss or peat; and the under strata are rock of different kinds, as grit, or free stone, blue stone, lime stone, fossil, coal, clay, marl, gravel and sand. The free stone is of three kinds, yellow, white and red. The finest district in the county, both for situation and quality of land is in the whole space between the Mersey and the Ribble, and between the sea coast and the first risings of the high hills to the east. The rich grain land called the Fylde, commences on the north bank of the Ribble, and stretches out to the south bank of the Lune. The soil of the northern part of the county is chiefly dry: the more high and mountainous tracts being chiefly occupied by sheep, while the various declivities and vallies in which they terminate are used for grazing. Grass land is the most prevalent in the vicinity of towns; northward the dairy is frequently the main object, and the Fylde, the Lune, and the Low Furness districts are those principally appropriated to the growth of grain. The principal mountains in this county are, Conistone Fell, in Furness, the highest part of which is 2,577 feet. Pendle Hill, overlooking Clithero, is 1,803 feet; Bleasdale Forest is 1,709 feet; and Rivington Pike is 1,545 feet each above the level of the sea. The other considerable elevations are, Caton Moor, Woolfell Crag, Padiham Heights, Longridge Fell, Go Hill, Belling Hill, Hambleton Hill, Cartmel Fells and Gragrit Fell, with the ridge called Blackstone Edge, which forms the south-east boundary of the county. It is a fact worthy of remark in the annals of husbandry, that the first potatoes raised in England were grown in this county, and it is still famous for producing and cooking that valuable root. The value and quantity of live stock has not been ascertained since the alarm created from the threatened invasion by the French in 1803, when there were in Lancashire, 648 oxen, 84,527 cows, 54,573 colts and young cattle, 80,772 sheep and goats, 30,982 pigs, 5,474 saddle horses, and 26,660 draught horses.

The CLIMATE of Lancashire is humid, yet is the air generally pure and salubrious; on the north and eastern boundaries, in the elevated regions, it is of course cold and piercing, but in the lower districts towards the south and west, it is in general mild and genial: and although the occupations of a great body of the inhabitants in the manufacturing districts may be supposed to be unfavourable to health, such is the influence of the climate, that as many old people are found in this county in proportion to the number of inhabitants as in most other parts of the kingdom. With regard also to the popular error, of this county being singular as a depository of excessive rains, and that "it is always raining at Manchester," is capable of refutation, by reference to the meteorological observations, of the average quantity of rain fallen in other places; and if succeeding seasons bear but a similitude to the fine autumns of 1826 and 1827, this county will emancipate itself from the appellation long attached to it of being "the water-pot of England."

MINES AND MINERALS.—The most productive and extensive of the mineralogical productions of this county is COAL, the most important of all minerals to a manufacturing community. The southern part of the county presents a very extensive coal field, furnishing an abundant supply of fuel to the manufacturing districts; its boundary may be described by a line drawn from the junction of the rivers Tame and Mersey, near Stockport northwards, towards Middleton, west of Oldham, and thence in a westerly direction to the south of Prescott, on N. W. to Ormskirk, and N. E. to Colne, on the border of Yorkshire. This valuable mineral is found more abundantly in the vicinity of Wigan, Prescott, Newton, Bolton, and Oldham, than in the other parts. The principal beds on the eastern side of this grand depository are about six feet in thickness: they extend from the vicinity of Oldham to Rochdale and Bury, but their continuity is broken by faults and by deep vallies; and the general strata of Lancashire are more irregular both in their dip and position than those of Yorkshire. Near Wigan a beautiful species of coal, in appearance similar to black marble, of a very bituminous quality is obtained, known by the name of cannel coal. On the western and southern sides of the county is found marl and sand stone; millstone grit is found between Colne and Blackburn, and in other places; metalliferous lime stone is the substratum between Lancaster and Kirkby Lonsdale. The mountains of Furness have valuable roofing slate and limestone; and near Ulverstone is produced a peculiar ore of iron, yielding the best and most ductile of that metal, suited to the purpose of wire drawers.

RIVERS, LAKES AND CANALS.—The navigable rivers of the county are, the Mersey, the Ribble, the Lune or Loyne, the Irwell, the Douglas, the Wyre, the Ken, the Leven, the Dudden, and the Crake. The MERSEY is the boundary of Lancashire and Cheshire in its whole course, and is formed of the waters of the Tame, the Etherow and the Goyt, which unite at Stockport, and fall into the Irish sea a little below Liverpool. The RIBBLE has its source in the high moorlands of Craven, at Walton-le-dale receives the rapid Derwent into its bosom, and finally loses itself in the Irish sea. The LUNE rises at Lune head, in the fells of Westmoreland, receiving in its course the Leek, the Greta and the Wenning, and falls into the bay of Morecambe at Sunderland point. The IRWELL originates in two streams rising in the high moorlands of the hundred of Blackburn, the conjunction of which takes place at the head of the royal manor of Tottington: two miles below Bury the waters of the Irwell are augmented by those of the Roach; at Manchester it receives the Irk, and at Hulme the Medlock deposits its stream, when thus increased, about nine miles below Manchester, the Irwell merges in the Mersey. The moors of Anglezark give birth to the DOUGLAS, which in its travels receives the Lostock and the Yarrow, and disappears in the estuary of the Ribble, at Hesketh Bank. The confluence of two streams, at Hawthornwaite, produces the WYRE, which passes Garstang on to Poulton-in-the-Fylde; afterwards, expanding into a spacious basin, called Wyre-water, at the lower part of which there is a strait, serving as a secure and natural harbour for vessels of moderate burthen. The LEVEN is formed by the overflow of Windermere lake, and passes along the borders of Upper Holker into Morecambe bay, below Ulverstone. The DUDDEN has its source in the Tarns, above Seathwaite, and dividing Lancashire and Cumberland, falls into the Irish sea near the Isle of Walney. The KEN, a boundary river between Lancashire and Westmoreland, giving name to the principal town, Kendal, in the latter county, washes the banks of Arnside and Cartmel, and falls into the bay of Morecambe, above Lancaster sands. The CRAKE has its source in the southern extremity of Coniston lake, and descends into the Leven near Penny bridge. The greater number of the secondary rivers are those already named, as enriching the streams of others whose rise and course are more particularly described. The principal LAKES of this county are, CONISTON-WATER, embosomed in the centre of Furness fells, from five to six miles in length, and about half a mile broad in its widest part; EASTHWAITE-WATER, between Coniston and Windermere, one mile and a half in length, and rather more than a quarter of a mile in breadth: and WINDERMERE, the largest lake in England, being twelve miles in its extreme length and about one mile in breadth. All the islands of Windermere are in Westmoreland, and the whole lake is annexed to the Richmond fee. The CANALS in this county are numerous; to describe at full their various courses, and to dwell upon the vast utility afforded to commerce in the transition of merchandize by means of these great works of internal navigation, would much exceed the space allotted in this work for such species of information. It appears that the first complete artificial canal was planned and formed in Lancashire; this is known by the name of the SANKEY: the undertaking took place in 1755, under an act of parliament; and another act of 1761, extending the powers and the line of the work. Its length from Fiddler's ferry to the place where it separates into three branches is nine miles and a quarter, and the whole distance from the Mersey is eleven miles and three quarters. The DUKE OF BRIDGEWATER'S CANALS were commenced in 1758-9, when acts were passed, enabling him to carry into effect his stupendous views, aided by that wonderful self-taught genius, James Brindley. Neither rocks or hills, rivers or vallies, damped the ardour of the undertakers of these vast works: in their course, at one time, they are lost in immense tunnels, and at other places are carried over rivers and mountains. The most striking of all the aqueduct works is in the first canal, where it passes over the river Irwell, at Barton bridge; the aqueduct being upwards of 200 yards across the river, which runs in a valley: over the river itself it is conveyed by a stone bridge of great strength and thickness, consisting of three arches, the centre one being thirty-eight feet above the surface of the water; allowing a gratification to the spectator of beholding one vessel sailing over the top of another, with masts and sails standing. This canal extends in various directions thirty miles. Another act was obtained by the duke in 1761, for his canal and navigation from Manchester to Liverpool, which was finished in five years, and is twenty-nine miles in length to its termination at Runcorn gap. An act, in 1795, empowered this spirited nobleman to cut a branch from his canal, at Worsley, to Leigh. The TRENT AND MERSEY COMMUNICATION, the plans for which were agitated in 1755, were finally executed under the powers of an act passed in 1766: and opens an inland communication between the great ports of Liverpool and Hull; and the vast idea arose out of this work of connecting almost all the midland counties of England with each other. The LEEDS AND LIVERPOOL canal was begun in the latter end of the year 1770, when the act was obtained; the whole length of the line of this canal, from Leeds to Liverpool, including the portion of the Lancaster canal, is upwards of 127 miles. MANCHESTER, BOLTON AND BURY CANAL, the act for which was obtained in 1791, is more than fifteen miles in length, commencing on the western side of Manchester, from the river Irwell. In 1792 an act was obtained for making the MANCHESTER, ASHTON-UNDER-LINE AND OLDHAM CANAL, which commences on the east side of Manchester, and is in length eleven miles, a branch going from this canal to Stockport. The ROCHDALE CANAL obtained its act in 1794, which authorizes a navigation from the Duke's canal, at Manchester, to the Calder navigation, at Sowerby bridge, near Halifax; its whole length being, from one extremity to the other, thirty-one miles and a half. An act for cutting the HUDDERSFIELD CANAL passed in April, 1794; its eastern extremity being the Ashton-under-line canal, and its western, Sir John Ramsden's canal, to the Calder, the length being nearly twenty miles.

The LANCASTER CANAL, for which an act was obtained in 1792, commences at Kendal and terminates at West Houghton, being a distance of more than seventy-five miles. The ULVERSTONE CANAL is a short cut, about a mile and a half in length, communicating with the navigable channel of the bay of Morecambe and the river Leven. The ELLESMERE CANAL, though forming no part of the inland navigation of Lancashire, opens a passage from the Mersey to the Dee, and connects the trade of this county with the Severn and North Wales. Besides these several canals, the advantages and means of inland navigation have been increased by the IRWELL AND MERSEY NAVIGATION; the WEAVER NAVIGATION, and the DOUGLAS NAVIGATION: and a new mode of conveyance, more rapid, and it is anticipated will be more economical, than water carriage, is in great forwardness, in the shape of an iron rail-way, between Liverpool and Manchester: the project was formed in 1822, but the measures were not immediately followed up; the work is, however, now proceeding with great activity, and sanguine expectations are awakened as to its profitable results.

MANUFACTURES.—Under this head, unless many pages were devoted to it, justice could not be done to the vast subject: this work can only glide upon the surface, without entering into the depths of those materials, which have contributed to the wealth, and excited the ingenuity of the inhabitants of Lancashire; and placed their county in so proudly prominent a position amongst the counties of England. The county has prospered by all fabrics produced from the fleece, the labours of the silk-worm; and the culture of flax, but more especially by the never-failing bounty of the cotton tree. The earth abounding with a mineral essentially necessary to the consummation of the various works of the loom, has yielded up her riches to aid the industry of the artizan, and facilitate his labours. The cotton trade forms the staple of the county, in the manufacture of which, till the middle of the 18th century, the weavers were accustomed to throw their shuttle from hand to hand, through the meshes of the work: in 1738 the fly shuttle was invented by Mr. John Kay. In 1767 James Hargrave, of Blackburn, constructed a spinning-jenny, that would spin 20 or 30 threads into yarn; and in this year, Thomas Highs, a reed maker, invented a machine called the water frame throstle, for the spinning of twist by rollers. In the same year Richard Arkwright, of Preston, then residing in Bolton, an active, enterprising and intelligent man, possessed himself of a model of Highs' spinning frame, and this was the germ of Mr. Arkwright's future prosperity, and of the extension of the cotton trade. In 1785 the patent right of Sir Richard Arkwright's machinery was destroyed, by a decision of the court of King's Bench, and all the accumulated improvements thrown open to the trade. Sir Richard was born at Preston, in 1732, and was brought up to the trade of a barber: he received the honour of knighthood upon presenting a congratulatory address from the hundred of Wirksworth to his late Majesty, on his escape from the attempt of Margaret Nicholson, and died in the year 1792. In 1775 the mule was invented by a Mr. Crompton, of Bolton; in 1787 Bolton & Watt's rotative steam engine was introduced by Messrs. Puls, at Warrington: and in the same year the power loom was brought into action by a Mr. Cartwright. Inkles, tapes, checks, woollens, flannels, baizes, linens, fine fabrics of cotton and hats, all rank amongst the manufactures of this county; besides silk, which of late years has increased to a prodigious importance. Calico printing, bleaching, and dying are performed on a large scale; machine making, iron founding, and paper making, claim a considerable share of consequence; and the glass and earthenware manufacturing establishments are very numerous.

This county is divided into six hundreds, viz. AMOUNDERNESS, BLACKBURN, LEYLAND, LONSDALE, SALFORD, and WEST DERBY; these contain 66 parishes, 29 market towns, 442 townships, and six parliamentary boroughs, which are, LANCASTER, LIVERPOOL, PRESTON, WIGAN, CLITHERO, and NEWTON, each returning two members; besides two others for the county, for which the present are, Lord Stanley and John Blackburne, esq.

POPULATION.—According to the census of 1821, there were houses inhabited in the county, 176,449; uninhabited, 5759; and houses building, 1735. The number of families then resident in the county was 203,173; comprising 512,476 males, and 540,383 females; total, 1,052,859: and by a calculation made by order of government, which included persons in the army and navy, for which was added after the ratio of about one to thirty prior to the year 1811, and one to fifty for that year and the census of 1821, to the returns made from the several districts; the population of the county, in round numbers, in the year 1700, was 166,200—in 1750, 297,400—in 1801, 695,100—in 1811, 856,000—and in 1821, 1,074,000. The increased population in the fifty years, from the year 1700 was 131,200—from 1750 to 1801, the increase was 397,700—from 1801 to 1811, the increase was, 160,900—& from 1811 to 1821, the increased number of persons was 218,000: the grand total increase in the population of the county, from the year 1700 to the census of 1821, being about 907,800 persons.

ASHTON-UNDER-LINE,

STAYLEY BRIDGE, DUKINFIELD AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

ASHTON-UNDER-LINE, a town and parish, in the hundred of Salford, in the deanery of Manchester, and in the archdeaconry of Chester, is 187 miles north-west by north of London, 7 east of Manchester, and 4 south of Oldham. It is situated on an eminence, rising from the north bank of the river Tame: its new streets are well built and contain many good, and some elegant residences; but the old streets are narrow, and indicate their ancient origin. The etymology of this place is stated by some to be Ash-town, from the tree, and under line from its situation below the line of Cheshire: and in ancient rent rolls it is called Ashton-sub-Linu. In the fifth year of Henry VI, this manor was transferred to John Assheton, which family distinguished themselves at an early period of British history. In the wars between the houses of York and Lancaster the Asshetons espoused the Lancastrian cause; and Sir Thomas Assheton, in conjunction with Sir Edmund Trafford, of Trafford, entertained the visionary project of relieving Henry VI. from his pecuniary difficulties, by means of the philosopher's stone. Henry empowered them to employ alchemy to the purpose of transmuting the baser metals, to the more precious ones of gold and silver; and the commission had the sanction of parliament. To such an extent did the credulous monarch impose upon himself, and suffer himself to be deluded by those sage alchemists, that he announced to his people, the happy hour was approaching, when, by means of the stone, he should be able to pay off all his debts: whether intentional prophetic ambiguity lay hid in his words is not ascertained; certain it is, his obligations were only discharged by his paying the great debt of nature. In the sixteenth century the manor and estates passed by marriage to Sir William Booth, of Dunham Massey, the ancestor of the Earl of Stamford and Warrington, the present possessor: his lordship holds a court leet half-yearly, in April and October, in the town-hall of Ashton, in which his agent presides, and takes cognizance of common assaults, disputes, breaches of trust, and right of tenantry: at one of which courts constables are appointed to the good government of the town: every third Thursday courts are held in this hall to try actions of debt under 40s. and for the recovery of debts (under an act of parliament) not exceeding £5. Ashton formerly enjoyed borough privileges, but the cost of supporting them, like many other small boroughs, exceeded the benefit derived from such distinction: the custom of yearly nominations, and the ensignia of office are, however, still kept up by the inhabitants. A singular custom prevails here, the origin of which is involved in considerable obscurity; it is vulgarly called, Riding the Black Lad; and so conflicting are the traditions regarding the institution of this annual exhibition, that one account represents the ceremony to be in honour of the Assheton family, while another attaches to it opprobrium. Other conjectures assimilate it to a species of manorial perambulation, which is still practised in some parts of Scotland, and is named, gool riding; its object being to extirpate a pernicious yellow-flowered weed, called gool; which the farmers, under a penalty, were compelled to clear from their lands. The existing ceremony in Ashton, consists in preparing an effigy of a man in armour, i. e. the Black Lad, which is fixed on horseback, and after being led in procession round the town, is dismounted, and fired at by all who can possess themselves of a "deadly tube." The parish church, dedicated to St. Michael, standing in the centre of the town, is a large Gothic structure, erected in the reign of Henry V.; in 1792 it was thoroughly repaired, & subsequent improvements added to it, a steeple tower, &c.: in 1821 a fire burst forth in the interior of the church, and before the ravages of the destructive element could be arrested, the valuable fine-toned organ was completely destroyed. The Earl of Stamford is patron of the rectory; the incumbent is the Rev. George Chetwode, and the present curate the Rev. John Handforth. For a very long period St. Michael's was the only church in Ashton, but the increasing population imperatively demanded another sacred edifice, under the establishment. The parliamentary commissioners therefore applied a sum towards the erection of a new church; and on the 24th of October, 1821, the first stone of St. Peter's was laid, by the Right Rev. George Henry Law, D.D. late bishop of Chester. It is a beautiful edifice, of stone, situated at the west end of the town, in the style of Gothic architecture, with a square tower and pinnacles, and is deservedly admired for its chaste, light and elegant appearance: the expence of the erection is said to have exceeded £14,000. The Rev. Jno. Hutchinson is appointed perpetual incumbent. The other places of worship are for the independents, Wesleyan new connexion, and primitive methodists; and there is a tabernacle erected by a sect calling themselves Israelites, the deluded followers of that extraordinary impostor, the late Johannah Southcote. There are Sunday schools attached to nearly all these places of worship, which impart instruction to a great number of children of the labouring class; here is also one public endowed school, the funds of which have been lately increased by subscriptions: there are also a number of alms-houses; a ladies' charity, affording comfort to lying-in women; a mechanics' institution; and an auxiliary bible society. Ashton is admirably situated both for the purpose of trade and manufacture; mills are numerous on the banks of the Tame, and its waters are eminently useful in carrying away the continued ejection from dye-works. The Ashton, the Huddersfield, and Peak Forest canals approach to this place, and afford convenient transit for the manufactures of the place, as well as of coal and lime, which abounds about here. The manufacture of cotton is carried on to an astonishing extent, and the production of cotton fabrics by the power loom is increasing in a wonderful degree. Calico printing and the manufacture of silk in the vicinity, is also advancing in importance. About two years since the number of steam engines worked in Ashton was thirty-four, with the power of 840 horses; and at this period the number and power is considerably increased. Messrs. Lowe & Co. at Shepley hall, have large print works; and Messrs. Kenworthy & Swires' coal and coke works are on a grand scale. The gas establishment, in the Oldham road, is superior to any of the kind out of the metropolis. Improvements of the most prominent, extensive, and useful nature, are in the roads: within a few years many new ones have been opened and others repaired, and two more new roads to Manchester are in great forwardness, so that, in a short time, the approach to Ashton and its neighbourhood will not be excelled by any town in the kingdom. A charter for a market to be held on Wednesday was obtained in the reign of Henry VI, but it is now held on Saturday. The fairs are, March 23rd, April 29th, July 25th, and the 21st of November, for cattle, pedlary, earthenware, &c. The parish of Ashton contains four divisions or townships; in 1821 the population of each was as follows: ASHTON TOWN, 9,222 persons; AUDENSHAW, 3,781; HARTSHEAD, 9,137; KNOTT LANES, 3,827; total, 25,967: but this number has considerably augmented since the last returns.

STAYLEY BRIDGE is a village and township, partly in the parish of Mottram-in-Longdendale, in the hundred of Macclesfield and county of Chester, and partly in the hundred of Salford, in the county of Lancaster, the boundary of each part being effected by the river Tame, that glides between, and over which is a substantial bridge. In the population returns, directed by parliament to be made in 1821, Stayley bridge is described as being wholly in the parish of Mottram and county of Chester; it is one mile E. S. E. of Ashton, six miles S. E. of Oldham, and eight miles from Stockport and Manchester. The ancient name was Staveley, and the old mansion of the de Staveleighs still exists, near the line of the Roman road. The inheritance of the manor has passed successively by marriage to the Asshetons and Booths, and it is now vested in the Earl of Stamford and Warrington. This village, like many others in the populous district in which it is situated, owes its consequence to the extensive manufactories for cotton spinning, and the manufacture of various cotton goods established therein; and its situation for trade partakes of all those advantages which characterize Ashton. Great quantities of fire brick, of a superior quality, are made here; and as has been stated of Ashton, fuel is abundant in its vicinity. The scenery about here is of a bold character, at one time exceedingly thickly wooded; the progress of machinery, however, and the desolating stroke of the wood-feller, have shorn it materially of its natural beauties: the lovers of the picturesque must therefore take consolation from the circumstance, that science and wealth have increased, in proportion as the charms of rude nature and rural prospects have disappeared. The Wild Bank, which is elevated more than a thousand feet above the level of the sea, presents very extensive views combining both grandeur and beauty. St. George's chapel, standing upon an elevated site, of an octagon form, and the handsomest public building in the place, is under the rector of Ashton, in the patronage of the Earl of Stamford and Warrington; the Rev. J. N. France is the incumbent. There are also Wesleyan methodist and baptist chapels, each having Sunday schools. A society for mutual instruction was established in 1824, with a library attached, for the use of the members. A news' room, well supplied with London and provincial journals, and other literary periodicals, is opened here; and numerous benefit societies, which alleviate miseries attendant upon poverty in age, and sickness, do honour to the founders and supporters. Stayley bridge is governed by the old constitutional authority of the constable, who has a "lock-up," a place of temporary confinement for offenders, within which place is deposited the fire engines. A fair is held on the 5th of March, for pedlary ware, &c. In 1748 only thirty-four dwellings were in the place. In 1776 the first cotton mill was erected; in 1795 its first steam engine was worked, and in the latter end of 1825 there were in motion twenty-nine steam engines, worked by the power of 773 horses. The census of 1821 gave to Stayley bridge 1,609 persons, since which time its population has so much increased as to deprive the parliamentary document of any

BLACKBURN,

OVER AND LOWER DARWEN, ECCLESHILL, TOCKHOLES AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

BLACKBURN, a market town and parish, in the hundred and deanery to which it gives name, and in the archdeaconry of Chester, is 209 miles from London, 23 from Manchester, 16 from Bury, 12 from Bolton, 10 from Chorley, and 8 from Haslingden: it stands on the bank of a brook, anciently called Blake-burn, or "Yellow stream," from which it is said to take its name; in Doomsday it is written Blacheburne, and the district was formerly called Blackburnshire,
and for many ages was dreary, wild and uncultivated.
This entire territory was bestowed by the Conqueror
on Ilbert de Lacy, who, and his descendants, parcelled
it out to their dependants, and most of the estates derive their titles from these grants. The town is sheltered by a ridge of hills, stretching from the north-east to the north-west; its streets are irregularly built, their arrangement being evidently rendered more subservient to the purposes of manufacturing convenience, than to the views of uniformity and taste:
within these few years, however, the town has been much improved, and the lighting it with gas has been a great convenience; considerable attention has also been directed to paving the streets and repairing the highways; and in 1824 an act was obtained for a new road to Preston, which will shorten the distance nearly two miles. Two officers, called high constables, act for the higher and lower divisions of the hundred;
and the parochial concerns are under the management of a select vestry. The parish church is dedicated to St. Mary, and was founded and endowed before the Norman conquest; about nine years ago the old building was taken down and re-erected upon the site of the ancient grammar school: it is a rectory and vicarage, in the gift of the Archbishop of Canterbury;
the Rev. John William Whittaker, B. D. is the vicar,
and the Rev. J. W. Hubbersty is the curate. There are two other churches of the establishment, viz. St.
John's and St. Peter's; the former erected solely by subscription, and the latter partly by that means and partly by the parliamentary grant: the incumbent of St. John's is the Rev. J. Porter, and of St. Peter's the Rev. T. H. Backhouse. St. Paul's chapel is not consecrated, but the service of the Church of England is performed in it. Besides these places of worship, there are a baptist chapel, on the Town's moor; a friends' meeting house, in Paradise-place; independent chapels, in Chapel-street and Mount-street; a methodist chapel, in Clayton-street; a primitive methodist's, in Eanam; a Roman catholic chapel, Brook house; and Swedenborgian, in Ainsworth-street.

The institutions for the purposes of instruction, and for the upholding and disseminating religion, are very numerous in Blackburn. The free grammar school was founded and endowed by Queen Elizabeth, and although described as "free to all the world," does not contain at any one time above thirty scholars. The other schools are, a girls' charity school, by which ninety children are clothed and educated; a national school; three church Sunday schools; besides other schools attached to nearly all the dissenting chapels:
these several scholastic establishments, so highly honourable to the town, impart instruction to upwards of 2,600 children. The independents have an academy established here, which has for its object the preparing young men for the ministry, and foreign missions connected with the gospel. Here is an auxiliary Bible society, and branches of several missionary societies;
also a flourishing horticultural society. The charities for alleviating distress attendant upon sickness in poverty are, the general dispensary, the ladies' lying-in & clothing charities, and many well-conducted benefit associations. The manufactures of Blackburn may be dated as far back as 1650, when the place was distinguished for the production of Blackburn checks, which were superseded by the Blackburn greys; in process of time this town was enabled to lay claim to various improvements in spinning machinery; and, at this period, upwards of 100,000 spindles are at work in this town and its immediate vicinity; and it is estimated that the number of pieces of cotton goods manufactured at Blackburn weekly, approaches nearly to 50,000, giving employment to upwards of 10,000 persons. One of the grand causes of the extent of the manufactures here, is attributable to the abundant supply of fuel furnished in the southern vicinage; and another to the skill and enterprize of the inhabitants.
The Leeds and Liverpool canal passes one extremity of the town, affording, by its waters, the means of conveying goods from this place to others upon its line. The market days are Wednesdays and Saturdays, which are well supplied with vegetables and other provisions; but the want of a good spacious market-place is much felt by those bringing various commodities for sale. The annual fairs are held on Easter Monday, the 11th and 12th of May, and 17th of October, for cattle, Yorkshire cloth, &c.: there are also fortnight fairs for cattle, held on Wednesdays, from the first Wednesday before 2nd of February until Michaelmas. Blackburn parish embraces fifteen townships and eight chapelries, and in 1801 it contained 33,631 inhabitants; in 1811, 39,899; and in 1821, 53,350; of which last number 21,940 were resident in the township.

OVER DARWEN chapelry, four miles south of Blackburn; LOWER DARWEN township, two miles s.s.e. and ECCLESHILL township, three miles s.s.e. form the southern townships of Blackburn parish. OVER DARWEN has, since the introduction of the cotton trade, become a populous and flourishing district. Here are a chapel of ease under the established church, one for the independents, and several Sunday schools. Three annual fairs are held, viz. the first Thursday in October, first Thursday in May for horses and cattle, and on Holy Thursday for pedlary, &c. In 1821 Over Darwen contained 6,629 inhabitants; Lower Darwen, 4,329; and Eccleshill, 1,048.

TOCKHOLES, three miles s.s.w. of Blackburn, a chapelry in that parish, contained, in 1821, about 1,270 inhabitants, chiefly employed in the manufacturing establishments.

BOLTON,

THE VILLAGES OF TURTON, DARCY LEVER, LITTLE LEVER, HALLIWELL, HORWICH, FARNWORTH, KERSLEY AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

BOLTON, or Bolton-le-Moors, a market-town and parish, in the hundred of Salford, in the deanery of Manchester, and in the archdeaconry of Chester, is 197 miles from London, 12 south of Blackburn, 11 north-west of Manchester, the like distance south-east of Chorley, and 6 w.s.w. of Bury. It is composed of two townships, Great and Little Bolton, divided from each other by the small rivulet, Crowell, which runs at the bottom of a deep valley from east to west. The manor of Bolton is of considerable antiquity, and through various descents became possessed by Sir Thomas Pilkington, lord of Bury and Pilkington, and who, for adhering to the cause of Richard III., at the battle of Bosworth field, was attainted and beheaded, in the first year of the reign of Henry VII., and his estates given to Thomas Lord Stanley, then created Earl of Derby. The manor is at present held by five different lords, viz. the Earl of Derby, Lord Bradford, Samuel Freconten, Esq. holding one-fourth part each, and the representatives of the Levers the remaining fourth part. The lords of the manor hold a court leet annually, in October, at which are appointed a borough-reeve, two constables, a deputy constable, and some inferior officers. During the commotions which marked the reign of Charles I., this town witnessed more of the horrors of civil war than any other place in this county; and till the spring of 1644 maintained a garrison in the parliamentary interest, in which year the town was taken by storm, by the Earl of Derby, at the head of two hundred Lancashire men, principally his tenants. In 1651 a reverse in the fortune of war was the means of conducting the earl to Bolton, as a condemned criminal, when his blood was shed upon the scaffold; his remains were conveyed to Ormskirk, and interred in the family vault of the Stanleys. From the restoration of the Stuarts to the time of the civil war, when the young chevalier approached the town with his army, Bolton enjoyed uninterrupted quietness; and it was soon after the period of the defeat and expulsion of the royal adventurer that Bolton took to itself a share in the important inventions, which then, in their infancy, began to exhibit themselves. It was here that Richard Arkwright, the person so often named in the annals of Lancashire, resided; and during such sojournment, profited by the ingenuity of Highs, and Hargrave, and laid the foundation of his future fortune and notoriety, in the chronicles of fortunate industry and perseverance. The inventions of Samuel Crompton were engendered and brought to perfection in this parish, and the application of the valuable machine called the mule fully appreciated. Bolton has arrived at a great point of consequence within the last fifty years, a variety of causes combining to produce such effect; one of which is, its vicinity to Manchester, and the other to the abundant supply of coal with which it is surrounded; and at this period there are in the town and its immediate vicinity, upwards of twenty factories worked by more than thirty steam engines, of the aggregate power of 700 horses; and other factories are in progress of erection upon a large scale. The bleach works, foundries, & machinemakers, also employ a great number of steam engines, and it is estimated that the labour performed by steam in the town and direct neighbourhood, would require at least 1,450 horses. Originally fustians, jeans, thicksetts, and similar fabrics, were the principal articles woven here, but they have been superseded by plain and fancy muslins, calicos, power loom fabrics, quiltings, counterpanes and dimities, which are now the prevailing manufactures. Bleaching is carried on to a great extent: six millions of pieces being the average number bleached annually in the parish. The advantages of inland navigation, in common with numerous towns in this county, are attached in a valuable degree to Bolton; its canal to Manchester, and a branch to Bury, forming an excellent conveyance for the manufactures of the place as well as for passengers: and a rail-road is making from here to the canal at Leigh, which is expected to be of great advantage in bringing coal to the town. The public improvements in the town of Bolton have of late years exhibited themselves in a most extensive degree, embracing both utility and ornament. The town is lighted with gas, and plentifully supplied with water: new squares have, within a few years, been formed; and within these four years upwards of six hundred and twenty new houses have been built in Great and Little Bolton. The public buildings are, two handsome town-halls, assembly rooms, theatre; and the recent erections, adding consequence to the town, are the exchange buildings, and a handsome new church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity; towards the erection of which a sum was contributed by the parliamentary commissioners: it is in the patronage of the Bishop of Chester and incumbency of the Rev. John Jenkins. The parish church of St. Peter's, an ancient structure, is a vicarage in the same patronage, and in the incumbency of the Rev. J. Slade. All Saints' chapel, in Little Bolton, is in the patronage of the lord of the manor, and incumbency of the Rev. Robt. Bullock. The living of St. George's church, also in Little Bolton, is in the presentation of the proprietors, and the Rev. W. Thistlethwaite is the incumbent. There are besides, episcopal chapels in the parish, in the gift of the vicar of Bolton, and the lords of the manor. The dissenters' chapels in Great and Little Bolton are, for the various denominations of methodists, the unitarians, Swedenborgians, baptists and catholics. The charitable institutions are numerous, and consist of a dispensary; a ladies' clothing society, for the necessitous poor; a lying-in charity, &c.: besides which, the free, national, and Sunday schools, nineteen in number, impart instruction to more than 7450 children. Bolton has its mechanics' institute; philosophical and Bible societies; and a branch society, for the propagation of Christianity amongst the Jews. For the gratification of the student and politician, news' and reading rooms are established; and two weekly journals, the "Bolton Chronicle" and "Bolton Express" are published on Saturday. The market days are Wednesdays and Saturdays, which are exceedingly well supplied with provisions of all kinds. Fairs are 30th and 31st of July, and the 13th and 14th of October, for cattle, horses, pigs, and pedlary: a fortnight fair is also held for lean cattle, on Wednesdays, from 5th of January to the 12th of May. The progress of population has been very rapid in Bolton; in the year 1773 only 5,339 inhabitants were in the two townships; in 1801 Great Bolton contained 12,549, and Little Bolton 4,867; in 1821 Great Bolton contained 22,037 and Little Bolton 9,258 inhabitants. The whole parish contains twelve townships and six chapelries, and in the last named year 50,197 persons.

TURTON, a chapelry and village, in Bolton parish, 5 miles north of that town, is situated upon the site of a

BOLTON-LE-SANDS,

HEST, WARTON, PRIEST HUTTON, YEALAND CONYERS, YEALAND REDMAYNE, YEALAND STORRS AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

BOLTON-LE-SANDS is a village, township and parish, in the hundred of Lonsdale, south of the Sands, in the deanery of Kendal, and archdeaconry of Richmond, four miles north of Lancaster. The church is a modern erection, built in the year 1813, the living of which is a discharged vicarage, in the patronage of the Bishop of Chester, and in the incumbency of the Rev. Robert Gibson.

HEST, or Hest Bank, in the parish of Bolton, three miles north of Lancaster, is a pleasant village, frequented in the appropriate season for bathing, and possesses an excellent house for the accommodation of visitors, called the Hest Bank Hotel, in the occupation of Mr. George Hoyle. Hest Bank lodge, is a handsome and tasteful residence, the property of Robert Jackson, Esq. and commands fine sea views, and pleasing land scenery.

WARTON is a village, township and parish, in the same hundred as Bolton, seven miles north of Lancaster. The church is dedicated to the Holy Trinity, the living of which is a vicarage, in the gift of the dean and chapter of Worcester, and in the incumbency of the Rev. Robert Barnes.

PRIEST HUTTON is a small village and township, 9 miles N. N. E. of Lancaster, in the parish of Warton.

YEALAND CONYERS, eight miles north from Lancaster, YEALAND REDMAYNE, nine miles from that town, and YEALAND STORRS, ten miles therefrom, all in the parish of Warton, are small townships, scarcely partaking of the character of villages, and possess nothing of consequence to the tradesman, except the flax spinning concern upon Yealand common, of Messrs. Waithman and Son.

The population of the foregoing places, in 1821, was as follows: BOLTON 615 inhabitants; HEST-WITH-STYNE township 317; WARTON-WITH-LINDETH townships 558; Priest Hutton township 213; and the YEALANDS together about 500.

BROUGHTON-IN-FURNESS,

A SMALL market-town and chapelry, in the parish of Kirkby Ireleth and in the hundred of Lonsdale, north of the sands, 270 miles north-west by north of London, 31 north-west of Lancaster, 13 south-west of Hawkshead, 12 north of Dalton, and 10 northwest of Ulverstone. The town is healthfully and pleasantly situated, about half a mile from the river Dudden, which is navigable within the like distance of the bridge, and on the declivity of a gentle eminence, with a south aspect; it is in the form of a square, the houses of which are chiefly built of stone and covered with slate, and have a respectable appearance. Formerly a number of the inhabitants were employed in the home spinning of woollen yarn, but the introduction of machinery has taken from them
 the emolument derived from that avocation; the principal trade now consisting in the making of hoops and brush stocks, considerable quantities of which are shipped from hence, as well as iron, grain, malt, oak bark and blue slate; not less than 2,000 tons of the latter article being shipped from here annually. The church of Broughton is dedicated to St. Mary Magdalene, and is a curacy, in the incumbency of the Rev.

 Wm. Pearson. The surrounding country is very mountainous, and abounds with the minerals peculiar to the Furness fells: the air is salubrious, and the inhabitants famed for their longevity; in evidence of which, a stone in the church-yard is shewn, under which repose the remains of seven members of the same family, whose ages were, at their decease, 78, 80, 84, 92, 94, 101 and 104 years. The weekly market is on Friday; and the fairs are 27th April, 1st August, and the first Friday in October, principally for horned cattle and mountain sheep. The chapelry contained, in 1821, 1,253 inhabitants.

POST OFFICE, Ann Casson, Post M'stress.—Letters by horse post are despatched to

BURNLEY,

HABERGHAM EAVES AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

BURNLEY, a market town and chapelry, in the parish of Whalley, and in the hundred of Blackburn, is 210 miles from London, 25 from Manchester, 11 from Blackburn, 9 from Clithero, and 6 from Colne. The town is situated upon the banks of the Brun or Brown, about a mile and a half from its confluence with the Calder, and principally in a narrow vale. The government of the town is in a constable, annually chosen, and four magistrates, who act for the hundred, and meet every Monday in rotation. The church, or rather parochial chapel, of Burnley, dedicated to St. Peter, is of considerable dimensions, a valuable curacy in the patronage of Robert Townley Parker, Esq. of Cuerden hall, near Preston, and in the incumbency of the Rev. Robert Mosley Master; the present assistant curates are the Rev. John Raws and the Rev. Thomas Smith. At Holme, in the township of CLIVIGER, is a chapel under the establishment; in the gift of the Whittakers, and in the incumbency of the Rev. — Tindal, whose curate is the Rev. John Longfield. In the town of Burnley are chapels for the methodists, independents, baptists, and Roman catholics; a free grammar school, founded in the reign of Elizabeth, well endowed, but the scholars are subject to an annual payment to the master, who provides an assistant; the classics being taught to a limited number. The charities in the town are those of Miss Peel, for clothing the poor; Mrs. Thompson's, for relieving poor widows of Burnley annually; a ladies' lying in charity, and a strangers' friend society. An auxiliary Bible society, and branches of the Halifax and London missionary societies, have been established here for some years. Formerly the trade of Burnley was confined to woollen or worsted goods, but the manufacture of cotton has almost entirely superseded that trade, only one fulling mill being now in the neighbourhood. Upon the rivers are cotton factories, and print works of a very extensive nature. Upwards of 30,000 pieces of calico are manufactured per week in the town and neighbourhood, and the number of spindles in motion exceed 60,000. Burnley is very favourably situated for trade; coal, free stone, slate, and water, affording their valuable assistance; and in the high bleak grounds have been discovered some veins of lead. The Leeds and Liverpool canal, which nearly surrounds the town, and forms a junction between the Irish sea and German ocean, conduces much to the convenience of the manufacturers, in the conveyance of their various productions to other quarters. Since the year 1822 the improvements to the town have been of considerable magnitude; the streets are well paved and watched, supplied with water copiously, by the company's works; and the gas works illuminate the town in a bright and liberal manner. In the vicinity is Townley hall, the seat of Peregrine Edward Towneley, Esq. a large and venerable pile, with two deep wings, embattled towers, and strong projecting buttresses, all of which contribute to give the edifice a formidable and castle-like appearance. It contains a fine unbroken series of family portraits, from John Towneley, in the time of Queen Elizabeth, down to Charles Towneley, Esq. the uncle of the present proprietor, who presented the British museum with one of the finest and most valuable collections of ancient sculpture in the country. A great ornament to this interesting and ancient seat is the woods, principally of full grown oak, finely disposed and scattered over the park and demesne to a great extent. There are some other very respectable seats and residences in the neighbourhood; but the appearance of the country around is more bold than pleasing, incapable of being softened by the fertilizing powers of agriculture. The market days are Monday, chiefly for corn, and on Saturday, for other necessary provisions. The fairs are 6th of March, Easter-eve, 9th and 13th of May, 10th of July, and 11th of October, for toys, hardware, woollen and cotton goods, cattle and horses: a fortnight cattle fair is also held every alternate Monday, an annual wool fair on the second Thursday in July, and a horse fair on the third Thursday in October. The chapelry contained, in 1821, 6,378 inhabitants.

HABERGHAM EAVES, a township, large and populous, in the same parish and hundred as Burnley, is about seven miles north-east of that town. GAWTHORP, a large and substantial mansion in this township, was anciently the residence of the Shuttleworths, but has been rarely occupied since 1669. The spinning and manufacture of cotton is the staple trade of this place, and employs the greater portion of its inhabitants, the number of which was, in 1821, about 4,600, being an increase of nearly 2,000 persons within the last ten years.

POST OFFICE, Goodham-hill, BURNLEY, Isaac Cartmell, Post Master.—Letters by a horse post arrive from COLNE and the north every morning at eight, and are despatched at two in the afternoon.—Letters from BLACKBURN arrive every morning at nine, and are despatched at four in the afternoon.

BURY,

WALMERSLEY, TOTTINGTON-HIGHER-END, TOTTINGTON-LOWER-END, ELTON AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

BURY, a respectable, well-built and thriving market-town, in a parish of the same name, in the hundred of Salford and Blackburn, in the deanery of Manchester, and in the archdeaconry of Chester, is 195 miles from London, 16 from Blackburn, 9 N.N.W. of Manchester, the like distance south of Haslingden, 7 w. s. w. of Rochdale, and 6 from Bolton. It is situated in a fertile valley, on the left bank of the river Irwell, which runs close to the west side of the town, and about two miles from the confluence of that river with the Roach. The name of the town is from the Saxon word Byri, meaning a castle; a building of which nature, and one of the twelve ancient baronial castles of Lancashire, stood in Castle croft, near to the town, on the banks of the old course of the Irwell: it suffered demolition, along with other castles in this county, by the parliamentary army, about 1644, and its site is only now ascertained by the appearance of vestiges of the foundations being occasionally dug up. The town is governed by three constables, appointed at the holding of a court baron, by the agent of the Earl of Derby, annually, on Whit-Monday; another court is held under the same nobleman, every three weeks, at the Hare & Hounds, for the recovery of debts under 40s. The parish church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an elegant modern edifice, rebuilt upon the site of the ancient Gothic structure, which was taken down in 1776, except the steeple. The living is a rectory, in the patronage of the Earl of Derby and incumbency of the Rev. Geoffry Hornby; the Rev. Thomas Potter is the curate: the other place of worship under the establishment is St. John's chapel, in Stanley-street, of which the Rev. Thomas Selkirk is the officiating minister. Here are also chapels for the Wesleyan and methodists' new connexion, independents and Roman catholics; and the fanatical followers of Johanna Southcot have a meeting room, in Henry-street. The public charities and institutions in the town consist of a free grammar school, endowed by Dr. Kay; a national school, ably conducted by Mr. George Whitehead; Sunday schools, a Bible society, a ladies' charity and a savings' bank. The free schools educate more than 2,300 children, of which number about 100 of both sexes are fully clothed by benevolent subscriptions. The principal manufacture of Bury is cotton, but there are besides extensive concerns in the woollen trade, which was originally the staple of the place. This town, by the ingenuity of some gifted individuals, has given birth to some valuable improvements in the manufactures: John Kay, a native of this place, invented a new mode of throwing the shuttle, and Robert Kay, a son of his, invented the drop-box, by which the weaver can at pleasure weave a fabric of various colours, with the same facility as a common calico. But it was left to the enterprising firm, at the head of which stood Mr. Robert (now Sir Robert) Peel, to bring Bury into particular notice, by the establishment of their wonderfully extensive print works. Sir Robert resided for many years at Chamber-hall, in the immediate vicinity of Bury, and his son, the late secretary of state, was born here. The bleaching works in this town and vicinity are mostly upon a scale of great importance. Coal is obtained in abundance from several valuable mines, and the prolific supply of water from the various streams winding through and round the town, joined with the canal navigation, connecting Bury with Manchester and Bolton, all combine to render it most eligible as a place in which business may be conducted to a vast extent. A melancholy event, which will be long remembered in this town, occurred on the evening of the 5th of July, 1787, when the theatre fell and buried three hundred persons in the ruins; and although prompt and unwearied exertions rescued a considerable part of the audience, some lives were lost, many were dreadfully bruised, and others disabled. The country around here is rather hilly, but in the northern parts of the parish it is finely diversified. There is a charter for holding a market on Thursday, but custom has established the one now holden on Saturday, which is well attended and amply supplied with provisions. Fairs are 5th March, 3rd May and 18th September, for horses, cattle, pedlary, &c. The whole parish, by the last census, contained 34,335 inhabitants, of which number 10,583 were resident in the township of Bury.

WALMERSLEY is a township and village, in the parish of Bury, two miles and a half north of that town. The ancient edifice, called "Cob house," in this township, was the residence of Captain Kay, who made himself bravely conspicuous in the siege of Latham house, under the Countess of Derby. The population of this township principally consists of those employed in manufactures.

TOTTINGTON-HIGHER-END is a township, in the parish of Bury, five and a half miles north of the last named town, containing some manufacturing establishments of consequence.

TOTTINGTON-LOWER-END is a populous township and chapelry, in the same parish with Tottington-higher-End; distant from Bury two miles and a half north-west.

ELTON is a village and township adjoining to Bury, on the north-west.

The number of inhabitants in the foregoing villages is as follows; WALMERSLEY, 3,290; TOTTINGTON-HIGHER-END, 1,728; TOTTINGTON-LOWER-END, 7,333; and ELTON, 2,897.

CARTMEL,FLOOKBROUGH AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

CARTMEL, a small market-town and parish, in the hundred of Lonsdale, is 7 miles east of Ulverstone, 15 N.N.W. of Lancaster, 69 from Liverpool and Manchester, and 265 from London. Cartmel, or as it was originally called, Kertmell-fell, has its derivative from kert, a camp, and mell, a fell, or small mountain, and its etymology is certainly British. The town is but small, yet the buildings being chiefly of stone, white-washed, and rough cast, are remarkable for their neatness, if not for their grandeur. The situation is sheltered, being surrounded by high hills, which, joined to the general face of the country, has made it remarkable as bearing a strong similitude to the quietude and simplicity of a town in a Swiss canton. The bustle and animation of a manufacturing town is not to be met with in this: but at Upper Holker, on the banks of a mountain stream, are large cotton mills, and near to the town are paper and corn mills. Three miles south of the town is a brackish spring, issuing from a projecting rock of lime-stone, called "Humphrey Head;" celebrated as a remedy for the gout, stone, &c.; its medicinal qualities invite company during the summer months to Cartmel and the neighbourhood. At Pit Farm, in this parish, is also an intermitting spring of the same nature, though not so celebrated as the Giggleswick well, in Yorkshire. The priory, a distinguished ornament of Cartmel, is dedicated to St. Mary, and is said to have displaced the parish church, which existed here before the conquest, when Henry VIII. laid his rapacious hands upon monastic property. At a long subsequent period, when age was fast dilapidating its splendours, it experienced, through the liberality of George Preston, Esq., a renovation, that has preserved to this part of Lancashire an edifice of which the inhabitants have reason to boast. The building is of excellent masonry, in the pointed style of architecture, and its plan cruciform. The whole length is 157, and the height of the walls 57 feet: the interior is handsome and spacious, and the centre is supported by four large clustered pillars: the choir is beautiful, surrounded by stalls, twenty-six in number, the top and pillars of which are finely carved with foliage. The monuments in this church are numerous, and many of very ancient date; indeed, the walls are well-nigh covered with these silent and respectful mementos. With a country affording such cheap means, by its quarries, of upholding this fabric, it is to be lamented that the love and respect for antique sacred erections does not manifest itself in the inhabitants here, by propping this venerable pile and arresting the decay that is rapidly invading it. The living is a perpetual curacy, in the gift of Lord George Cavendish; the Rev. Geo. Preston is the incumbent, and the Rev. J. Remington the curate. Five chapelries attached to this church are also in the gift of his lordship. The free grammar school here owes its present utility principally to the liberality of Mr. Henry Bigland, who, in 1714, bequeathed £400. which, with sums from other benefactors, provides for the education of 50 boys, of whom one half are classical pupils. In the township of Lower Holker, is Holker hall, the seat of Lord Geo. Cavendish, situated in a beautiful and extensive park, which stretches down to the sands at Leven, and is enriched by fine mature timber. The market day, which was formerly on Monday, has been changed for about a century, to Tuesday. The fairs are held on Whit-Monday, the Monday following the 23rd of October; and two fairs for cattle have been lately established, one on the Wednesday before Easter, and the other on the 5th of November. Cartmel parish contains five townships and two chapelries, and the whole parish, in 1821, 4,923 inhabitants, of which number 1,959 appertain to the divisions of Lower Allithwaite & Upper Holker, in which Cartmel town stands.

FLOOKBROUGH, which was anciently a market-town, is now but a small village, pleasantly situated, a short distance from Cartmel, in the parochial division of Upper Holker, and in the midst of scenery at once bold and picturesque, embracing the Fells of Furness, the Bay of Morecambe, &c.

POST OFFICE, CARTMEL, William Field, Post Master.—Letters are despatched every morning at five, to meet the ULVERSTONE and MILNTHORPE mail, and arrive at eight in the morning.

CHORLEY,

BLACKROD, WHITTLE-LE-WOODS AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

CHORLEY, a market and manufacturing town and parish, without any dependent township, in the hundred and deanery of Leyland, is 208 miles from London, 22 from Manchester, 11 from Bolton, 10 from Blackburn, and 9 from Preston and Wigan. It is situated near the centre of the county, on the great west road from London to Glasgow and Edinburgh, and on the summit of a steep hill, near the spring-head of the rivulet Chor, which forms its confluence with the Yarrow, about a mile below the town; the name of the former stream conjoined with the Saxon word ley, a field, giving name to the town. The parish church, dedicated to St. Lawrence, is supposed to be of Saxon origin, and is a rectory, in the patronage of the Rev. John Whalley Master, who is the incumbent. A new church has lately been erected, partly from funds applied by the parliamentary commissioners, and the remainder by loan: it is dedicated to St. George, and the Rev. Thomas Birket is the minister. The other places of worship are for the methodists, independents, unitarians and Roman catholics; to some of which, Sunday schools are attached; besides which, there are a grammar, charity, and national schools. In 1682 alms-houses for six poor women were erected and endowed by Hugh Cooper, Esq.; and the poor of the parish are befriended by several charitable bequests. The government of the town is in a constable; and there are two visiting magistrates, who hold petty sessions once a fortnight, in the town-hall; and a court leet is held annually by Thomas Gillibrand, Esq., the present lord of the manor. The cotton manufacture is carried on here to a great extent; muslins and calicos being the principal fabrics produced from the loom; and considerable bleaching and print works are in the neighbourhood; which abounds in mines of coal, cannel and lead; quarries of stone, flag, slate, ashlar and mill-stone are produced here;

and at Anglezark, a short distance from the town, carbonate of barytes is found in abundance. The Leeds and Liverpool canal, which form their junction a little to the south of Whittle-le-Woods, passing within about half a mile E. S. E. affords excellent mediums for the conveyance of these weighty productions, as well as for the manufactures perfected here. The gas works, established in 1819, and the water works, in 1823, are of infinite advantage to the town, which may be said, altogether, to be progressively improving, both in extent, ornament and convenience. The face of the country around rises into gently swelling eminences, which embrace many pleasing and picturesque views, particularly towards the rich vale of the Ribble, and Irish sea. The soil is principally sand and marl, moderately fertile, but capable of being rendered more so with due attention to the modern system of agriculture. About one mile north-west from the town is Astley hall, a very ancient mansion, the seat of Sir Henry Philip Hoghton, Baronet; and the like distance south-west of the town is Gillibrand hall, a handsome modern erection, the property of the lord of the manor. A new market place is rapidly forming, and when completed will not only be a great convenience, but an ornament to the town. The weekly market is on Tuesdays: fairs are March 26th and May 5th, for horned cattle; 21st October for horses; and September 4th, 5th, and 6th, for woollen cloth, hardware and pedlary. The parish of Chorley contained, in 1821, 7,315 inhabitants.

BLACKROD is a village and chapelry, in the parish of Bolton-le-Moors and hundred of Salford, five miles S. S. E. of Chorley. It is pleasantly situated upon elevated ground, and is said to have been an ancient Roman station. A fair is held here on the first Thursday after the 12th of July, for toys, pedlary, &c. The chapelry contained, in 1821, 2,436 inhabitants.

WHITTLE-LE-WOODS, in the parish of Leyland, in that town, contains some valuable mill-stone quarries, the same hundred as Chorley, two miles north from and, in 1821, a population of 2,083 persons.

CHOWBENT, TYLDESLEY AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

CHOWBENT, a large and populous village, in the township of Atherton, in the parish of Leigh and hundred of West Derby, is two miles and a half N.E. of Leigh. Prior to the American war, it was much noted for enjoying a thriving trade in the manufacture of nails, and though it has fallen off very materially, is still of importance to the place. It also became famous upon the introduction of machinery, in the cotton business, for the manufacturing of carding engines, spinning frames, &c.; many minor as well as valuable improvements in the construction of those machines have originated with the mechanics of Chowbent; and here, it is said, was first discovered the value of the application of heat in the production of various cotton fabrics. Here is an episcopal domestic chapel, in the gift of Lord Lilford, without the jurisdiction of the diocese of Chester, also an unitarian chapel. A market was formerly, by custom, held here, but has long since been disused; two fairs are, however, still maintained, viz. on the 29th June and 24th August, for toys, pedlary, &c. The population of Chowbent is made up with Atherton township, which contained, in 1821, 4,145 inhabitants.

TYLDESLEY, or Tildesley, a large village and township, in the same parish and hundred as Chowbent, situated at the eastern extremity of the parish, about 2 miles from the town of Leigh. In ancient records this township is noticed as forming a portion of the Norman barony of Warrington. The local proprietors in the Tyldesley family flourished here so early as Henry III. Tyldesley house is now the occasional residence of George Ormerod, Esq., of Chorlton, in Cheshire, by whom also a considerable portion of the land is possessed in this township. The church at Tyldesley is a modern erection, reared under the auspices of the commissioners for building these national sacred fabrics. The architecture is in the early pointed style, and consists of a nave, chancel and side aisles, separated from the body by six pointed arches: three windows, painted in imitation of ancient stained glass, add to the ornaments of the interior. Over the principal western entrance is a tower, which, with the spire surmounting it, is one hundred and fifty feet in height: it has a peal of bells, and in the church is a good organ. The pleasant and healthful situation of this village and its neighbourhood, joined to the increase of establishments connected with the staple manufacture of this county, has produced a material improvement in the population of the township within the last ten years. By the last census, the number of inhabitants was 4,325.

POST OFFICE, CHOWBENT, James Cowburn, Post Master.—Letters are despatched to BOLTON, by horse post, every afternoon (except Tuesday) at three, and arrive every morning (except Tuesday) at eight.—TYLDESLEY, Castle-street, Rosanna Atkins, Post Mistress.—Letters are forwarded to CHOWBENT, LEIGH and BOLTON, every morning at nine, and afternoon at two.

CHURCH BANK, ACCRINGTON (OLD AND NEW), OSWALDWISTLE AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

CHURCH BANK, or Church Kirk, is a chapelry and village, in the parish of Whalley and hundred of Salford, four miles east of Blackburn, deriving its prosperity and the consequence it enjoys from the extensive print works established in it, belonging to the Messrs. Peels, as well as to factories for the spinning and manufacturing of cotton; and Messrs. Steiner & Co.'s chemical works; and the works of Messrs. Hawarth & Barnes, for the preparation of woods used in dying, are upon a very respectable scale. A lamentable catastrophe occurred here on the 29th of September, 1824, on which day Mr. Wm. Windham Sadler, in passing over this place, after ascending from Bolton, was thrown from his balloon and killed, in the parsonage field. In 1821 the chapelry contained 752 inhabitants.

ACCRINGTON (OLD and NEW) form one considerable and populous village, in the same parish and hundred as Church Bank, about three miles north-west of Haslingden, containing in its immediate vicinity some manufactories and print works of extent and importance. The duchess of Buccleugh is in possession of the manorial rights, and the town is governed by a resident magistrate, assisted by two constables. The places of worship here are, the parochial chapel of Old Accrington, in the gift of the vicar of Whalley, and incumbency of the Rev. John

POST OFFICE, ACCRINGTON, Thomas Charles, Post Master.—A foot post from BLACKBURN arrives every morning at half-past eight, and is despatched at half-past three in the afternoon.

CLITHERO, CHIPPING AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

CLITHERO, or Clitheroe, is an ancient market-town, honour and borough, in the parish of Whalley and in the hundred of Blackburn, 216 miles from London, 30 N. N. W. of Manchester, 20 N. E. of Preston, and 10 N. N. E. of Blackburn. This borough has been represented in parliament since the first year of

Elizabeth, but the elective franchise was not well defined till 1694, when it was ordained by a committee of the House of Commons, that the right of election should be vested in the burgesses and free-men, such being constituted by having freehold or inheritance, in houses or land, within the borough: out-burgesses, holding free burgage tenure within the precincts, having also the right of electing: the free-men are such as live in the houses within the borough, as tenants, but who can only vote when the landlords do not; the number who exercise the suffrage is about 100. The bailiffs are the returning officers and coroners for the borough; and the present members are, the Hon. Robert Curzon, and the Hon. Peregrine Francis Cust. The borough is not incorporate, but its government is vested in two bailiffs, chosen at the court leet, who exercise the power of one magistrate. Three courts are held in the Moot hall, viz. a court baron, court leet, or court of inquiry, in which courts the bailiffs, or one of them, sits as judge: there is also a court baron held at Clithero castle every three weeks, for the recovery of small debts under 40s. The exact period of the erection of this castle has not been satisfactorily ascertained, but it is supposed to have taken place either in the reign of the Conqueror, or his son, William Rufus; and in the early period of the Commonwealth was dismantled, by order of parliament: the chapel has totally disappeared, and nothing now remains of the ancient edifice but the square keep, and some portions of the strong wall, by which the whole was surrounded. Within the precincts of the castle a handsome castellated house has been built, as the residence of the steward of the honour, who administers the affairs of one of the largest and most valuable royalties in the kingdom. The privileges enjoyed by the inhabitants of this borough are, an exemption from serving upon juries, at the assizes and sessions for the county; and from doing suit and service at the court leet for the hundred of Blackburn. Formerly, this place was but unimportant, in regard to trade, but within the last twenty years the manufacture of cotton has been rising in consequence, and at this period, is carried on to a considerable extent; cotton spinning, power-loom manufactories, and print works, are of magnitude; and an immense body of machinery, in operation here, is turned by iron water wheels; and a steam engine has lately been erected to supply a deficiency of water power in dry seasons. To the north of the town, on the banks of the Ribble, is the valuable and inexhaustible bed of lime-stone, and there are seldom less than ten kilns burning, supplied from this source. A spa, contiguous to the town, is held in high estimation for its medicinal virtues, and a great object of curiosity is Pendle hill, rising more than 1,800 feet above the level of the sea, from which can be descried vessels riding upon the ocean; and on a clear day, from its summit, York minster may be recognized: it is also remarkable for the great damage sustained by the town and neighbouring country by the discharge of a great body of water from the mountain, on the 18th of August, in 1669; which is described as "a mighty torrent, rushing out near the top of the hill." The church of Clithero, dedicated to St. Michael, is a perpetual curacy, in the patronage of the Earl Howe and incumbency of the Rev. John Taylor Allen; the Rev. Joshua Lingard is the present curate. The methodists, Roman catholics and independents have each a place of worship, with Sunday schools attached; besides which, there is a free grammar school, in the church-yard, founded by Queen Mary, in 1554, which is also used as a church Sunday school. The market is held every Tuesday; and on every alternate Tuesday is a considerable cattle show. The annual fairs are, 24th and 25th of March, 1st and 2nd of August, the Thursday and Friday before the fourth Saturday after the 29th of September, and the 7th and 8th of December for horses, cattle, clothing, &c. The population of the borough, in 1801, was, 1,368; in 1811, 1,767; and 1821, 3,213.

CHIPPING is a village, township and parish, in the hundred of Blackburn, nine miles west of Clithero, ten east of Garstang, and twelve N. N. E. of Preston. The manor was held previous to the conquest by Richard de Chepin, lord of Chepin. Leagram hall, near Chipping, but in the parish of Whalley, was granted by Queen Elizabeth, to Dudley, Earl of Leicester, along with the manor. The present proprietor, George Weld, Esq. has lately much enlarged and beautified the seat. The parish church of Chipping is dedicated to St. Bartholomew; the living is a discharged vicarage, in the patronage of the Bishop of Chester. Two fairs are held in the village of Chipping, viz. Easter Tuesday and August 24th, for cattle. The parish includes the township of Thornley with Wheatley, and contains about 1,700 inhabitants, of which 1,230 are in Chipping township.

GREAT AND LITTLE MARSDEN, BARROWFORD AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

COLNE is an ancient market and manufacturing town, in the parish of Whalley and in the hundred of Blackburn, 217 miles north of London, 31 north of Manchester, 18 north-east of Blackburn, 9 east of Clithero, and 6 N.N.E. of Burnley. Whether its name is derived from the Columio of the Romans, the Culme of the Saxons, or the old British term Col-aun, meaning a station by a narrow river, is undecided. According to Mr. Whittaker, a Roman station was erected here by Agricola, who subdued Lancaster, A.D. 79; and there appears still the remains of a station, upon the eminence of Castor cliff, about a mile south of the town, the summit of which commands a very extensive view of the country around. Colne is elevatedly placed on a tongue of land, formed by the Leeds and Liverpool canal and the river Calder, on the borders of a fine grazing country, and forms a point of communication for the transit of sheep and cattle, continually passing to the populous districts.

As early as 1311 this place was known as one for the manufacture of woollen goods; but at this period, cotton spinning and the manufacture of printing calicos, for the Manchester market, are the productions of the town. The Leeds and Liverpool canal passes through a tunnel, a mile in length, at a short distance from the town, affording an advantageous conveyance for the slate, limestone and coal procured in this neighbourhood. The church is very ancient, said to have been founded in the reign of Henry I., repaired in the time of Henry VIII., and also in the year 1815, but a new erection is much wanted. The living is a perpetual curacy, under the vicar of Whalley, and in the incumbency of the Rev. John Henderson. The other places of worship are, for the Wesleyan and new connexion of methodists, baptists and independents; to each of these a Sunday school is attached, which institutions, collectively, impart instruction to nearly 1,500 children. The free school is a modern erection, built by subscription, upon the site of the ancient one, in which Archbishop Tillotson received his early instruction. Several auxiliary missionary and Bible societies, and a subscription library are established in Colne. There are in this neighbourhood many very ancient halls, some of which are occupied by opulent individuals, and others by respectable yeomen. The weekly market is on Wednesday: the fairs are, 7th March, 13th May, 11th October and the 21st of December, principally for woollen and fancy goods; there are also monthly fairs for cattle, on the first Wednesday in every month. By the population returns of 1801, Colne contained 3,626 inhabitants; in 1811, 5,336; and in 1821, 7,274.

POST OFFICE, Market-street, COLNE, Edmund Riley, Post Master.—Letters arrive by horse post from SKIPTON and the north every morning at seven, & are despatched to BURNLEY at the same time.—Letters from BURNLEY arrive every afternoon at three, and are despatched to SKIPTON at the same hour.

GREAT & LITTLE MARSDEN are two populous and thriving manufacturing villages, the former one mile and a half south of Colne, and the latter about three miles south-west of that town. A chapel of ease is in Great Marsden, dependent upon Colne, and under the patronage of the vicar of Whalley. The two villages contain rather more than 4,000 inhabitants.

BARROWFORD, a township, in the same parish and hundred as Colne, two miles west of that town, situated between Rowland Forest and the river Ribble, and is indebted to the increase of its population, (which amounted, in 1821, to about 3,000 persons) to the manufacturing establishments flourishing in its vicinity.

DENTON, AUDENSHAW, HOOLEY-HILL, GORTON, FAIRFIELD, DROYLSDEN & NEIGHBOURHOODS.

DENTON is a chapelry, in the hundred of Salford and parish of Manchester, six miles E. S. E. of that town. A free school is here supported, principally by subscriptions of the inhabitants of this place and Haughton, which educates about 300 poor children. The principal trade of this village is in the manufacture of hats and some cotton goods.

AUDENSHAW is a village and division, in the parish of Ashton-under-Line, four miles and a half east of Manchester. Some respectable hat manufacturers and cotton factories are here; and a great reservoir, into which the neighbouring streams pour their contributions, and supply Manchester with water.

GORTON is a chapelry, in the parish of Manchester, about three miles and a half E. S. E. of that town. In Gorton vale is a reservoir of water, covering upwards of seventy acres, belonging to the Water-works Company. Here are established some respectable cotton spinners, calico printers & power loom manufacturers.

HOOLEY-HILL, a village, in the division of Audenshaw and parish of Ashton, is two miles S. S. W. of that town.

FAIRFIELD is a neat and interesting village, four miles east of Manchester, in that parish; remarkable as possessing a large community of the followers of Nicholas Lewis, Count of Zinzendorf, commonly called Moravians. The erections appertaining to this establishment are laid out with singular neatness, not devoid of taste, forming a large square, with a chapel in the centre, opposite to which is their burial ground,

POST OFFICE, AUDENSHAW, Thomas Cumberbach, Post Master.—Letters arrive from MANCHESTER by the Sheffield mail at half-past seven in the morning, and are despatched at half-past six in the evening—and from MANCHESTER by the Stayley Bridge mail at half-past five in the evening, and are despatched at half-past seven in the morning.

ECCLES,

BARTON, CLIFTON, PENDLEBURY, WORSLEY, SWINTON, PATRICROFT, MONTON, IRLAM, IRLAMS-O'TH'-HEIGHT AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

ECCLES is a village and parish of the same name, four miles west of Manchester, in the hundred of Salford and archdeaconry of Chester. The church is a very ancient structure, dedicated to St. Mary de Eccles; and the living is a vicarage, in the patronage of the King: the present incumbent is the Rev. Thos. Blackburn. Several respectable cotton manufacturers are here, and it has been long famed by the lovers of pastry for a sort of sweet cake, called "Eccles cake," not dissimilar to those made at Banbury, in Oxfordshire. This parish is about nine miles in length and four in breadth, and has increased its population nearly 8,000 within the last twenty years. It contains the townships of Barton, Clifton, Pendlebury, Pendleton and Worsley, and by the last returns upwards of 23,000 inhabitants; but the actual number belonging to the village of Eccles does not appear.

BARTON, otherwise Barton-upon-Irwell, from being seated upon that river, is a populous township and manufacturing village, five miles w.s.w. of Manchester, in the parish of Eccles and hundred of Salford. At this place the Duke of Bridgewater's canal crosses the river, by means of a large aqueduct of three stone arches. The population of the whole township, in 1821, amounted to nearly 8,000 persons.

CLIFTON is a township, in the same parish and hundred as Barton, 5 miles N. W. of Manchester, containing, with its dependent hamlets, 1,168 inhabitants.

PENDLEBURY is a township, in the parish of Eccles, four miles north-west of Manchester, containing about 1,000 inhabitants.

WORSLEY is a township, containing a village of the same name, six miles west of Manchester, celebrated for its coal mines, and as being the place where originated the Duke of Bridgewater's inland navigation. The whole township and its dependent hamlets contained, in 1821, 7,191 inhabitants.

SWINTON, a village, in the township of Worsley, is one mile from that place, and its population is included therewith.

PATRICROFT and MONTON, five miles from Manchester; and IRLAM, eight miles w.s.w. of that town, are hamlets in the township of BARTON, which includes their several population returns.

IRLAM-O'TH'-HEIGHT, a village, in the township of Pendleton, is three and a half miles N.W. of Manchester.

GARSTANG,

ST. MICHAEL-LE-WYRE, SCORTON, CATTERALL, ECCLESTON AND NIGHBOURHOODS.

GARSTANG, a market-town and parish, in the hundred and deanery of Amounderness, and in the archdeaconry of Richmond, is 228 miles from London, 42 from Manchester, 20 from Chorley, 11 from Lancaster and Preston, and 10 from Kirkham. Its ancient appellation was Gayrsteng, supposed to be a Saxon personal name: the town is situated on the western bank of the river Wyre, on the great western north road from London to Edinburgh, and derives considerable advantage from the continual passing of different vehicles and travellers through it. Garstang was first incorporated in the seventh year of Edward II., its charter placing the government of the town in the hands of a bailiff and seven capital burgesses, who are empowered to try misdemeanors within the borough. The parish church, dedicated to St. Helen, stands a mile and a half from the town, in the township of Kirkland, and in that part of the parish called Garstang Church town: it is a vicarage, in the incumbency of the Rev. John Pedder, sen. The other places of worship are, a chapel of ease, and one each for the independents, catholics and methodists. The free grammar school educates six boys, who are nominated by the corporation, and the catholic school instructs twenty poor children. The present lord of the manor is Frederick Kepple, Esq., of Lexham hall, in Norfolk, who holds, by his steward, two courts in the year. Within a quarter of a mile south of the principal street, the Lancaster canal crosses the Wyre by a beautiful aqueduct, and upon the banks of that river are cotton, corn and flax mills. The weekly market is on Thursday, and there are cattle markets on the alternate Thursdays between the first Thursday in Lent and Holy Thursday: the fairs are on Holy Thursday, 10th July, and 22nd November. In 1821 Garstang parish contained 7,403 persons, of which number about 1,000 were resident in the township.

ST. MICHAEL-LE-WYRE is a parish without a township, bearing its own name, four miles s.s.w. of Garstang, containing a small church, simple in its structure, erected in the time of Henry VIII., of which the Rev. Hugh Hornby is the patron and incumbent. The POST OFFICE, GARSTANG, Sarah Clark, Post Mistress.—Letters for LONDON and the south are despatched at half-past three in the morning, and arrive at half-past nine at night, at which time letters are despatched for LANCASTER and the north.—The IRISH mail is despatched to LIVERPOOL at five minutes past one in the afternoon, and arrives from LIVERPOOL, on its way to LANCASTER, at twenty minutes past one in the afternoon.

SCORTON, a village, in the township of Nether Wyresdale, and parish of Garstang, is three miles N.N.E. of that town, and can only be noticed in a commercial point of view, as containing the large spinning and manufacturing establishment of Messrs. Webster & Co. WYRESDALE township contains about 800 inhabitants.

CATTERALL village, in the parish of Garstang, two miles south therefrom, has to boast of one of the oldest and most flourishing print works in the county of Lancaster, belonging to Messrs. Henry Fielding & Brothers, situated on the banks of the Wyre. The air of cleanliness and comfort which pervades this place in its habitations, extending also to the inhabitants in the employ of these gentlemen, bespeak the respectability of the establishment and the reciprocal regard that exists both with master and dependant. The township contains about 700 souls, of which number, about 500 are employed in the works mentioned.

ECCLESTON township, in the parish of St. Michael, is six miles south-west of Garstang, and is noted for the great quantity of rushes cut here, for the rush-light makers. There are three small annual fairs held here, viz. 14th April, the first Monday after Trinity Sunday, and the 4th of November. The township contains nearly 700 persons.

HASLINGDEN,

MUSBURY, RAWTENSTALL AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

HASLINGDEN, a market-town and chapelry, in the parish of Whalley and in the hundred of Blackburn, 204 miles from London, 18 north from Manchester, 9 north of Bury, and 8 from Blackburn and Burnley, is situated on the margin of the forest of Rossendale, and the principal portion of the houses forming the new town, are in a valley below the mountain, upon which the more ancient habitations are placed. The civil government of the place is in a resident magistrate, assisted by a constable; and the only court held here is a halmote court, in the spring and autumn, by the steward for the Duchess of Buccleugh.
Not more than fifty years since, the working population were dependent upon the capitalists of Rochdale, in making flannels, baizes, and coarse woollen goods;
but it has now many highly respectable resident manufacturers in the woollen trade; and establishments in cotton spinning and the production of various fabrics from that article are rapidly increasing. The church, or rather parochial chapel, dedicated to St.
James, is a substantial stone structure, standing upon an eminence, at the northern extremity of the town:
the living is a perpetual curacy, in the gift of the vicar of Whalley, and in the incumbency of the Rev. Wm.
Gray. There is a chapel of ease at GOODSHAW, dependent upon Haslingden; and at CRAWSHAW BOOTH
is a friends' meeting house: in the town are chapels

for the independents, methodists, baptists, Sweden-borgians, and Sandemanians. There are also church, methodist, and baptist Sunday schools, which educate, collectively, upwards of 1,400 children. Here is,
besides, an endowed grammar school for ten poor
boys; and a subscription library, and news' room.
Coal, stone, flags and slate are found in the immediate neighbourhood in abundance, and the river joins with these minerals in aiding the manufactures of the place.
The country around here is mountainous, and from the high hills, by the aid of glasses, vessels may be seen in the westward distance, upon the sea, which washes the Lancashire coast. The weekly market, which was formerly held on Wednesday, is now held on Saturday: the fairs are 2nd February, 8th May, 4th July, and 2nd of October, chiefly for cattle; and another fair has been lately established, on Easter Tuesday, for horses. In 1821 the chapelry of Hasling-den contained 6,595 inhabitants.

MUSBURY is a township and village, in the parish of Bury, in the hundred of Blackburn and forest of Rossendale, two miles s.s.w. of Haslingden, containing, in 1821, 728 inhabitants.

RAWTENSTALL, a village in Rossendale, partly in the populous township of New Church and partly in Lower Booth, is about four miles from Haslingden.

HAWKSHEAD AND CONISTONE.

HAWKSHEAD is a small market-town and parish, in the hundred of Lonsdale, north of the sands, in the deanery of Furness and Cartmel, and in the archdeaconry of Richmond, 266 miles from London, 80 from Manchester, 27 N.N.W. of Lancaster, 14 from Ulverstone and Cartmel, and 13 from Kendal, by the ferry. The parish is in the midst of the fells of Furness, and the town in the centre of a warm and sheltered valley. Before the introduction of machinery for the spinning woollen yarn, this was a flourishing little town, but now that the spinning of wool by the females in their own families has ceased, it has retrograded from prosperity, and is now of very little consequence in itself to the mercantile visiter. In the district are valuable veins of iron ore, worked to great advantage, and there are others of copper not so productive. The mountains also yield stone and slate in abundance, and large flocks of sheep pasture upon the hills and plains of the neighbourhood. The parish church is dedicated to St. Michael, and is in the patronage of the King, as Duke of Lancaster, and in the incumbency of the Rev. George Park: besides this church, a chapel of ease is at SATTERTHWAIT, in the patronage of the incumbent of the parish church. The free grammar school was founded in 1585, by Edwyne Sandys, archbishop of York, and in its constitution, drawn up by the reverend prelate in 1588, it is named "The Free Grammar School of Edwyne Sandys," free to all boys indiscriminately, except those coming out of the parish, who pay an entrance fee of two guineas, and the like sum every Shrove-tide, called their cock-penny; the number of scholars has been frequently one hundred, but there are now not more than fifty upon the establishment. Eight governors have the management of the concerns of the school, and the appointment of the master and usher.

POST OFFICE, HAWKSHEAD, John Jopson, Post Master.—Letters by a horse post are despatched to AMBLESIDE, every evening at six, and returns at seven in the morning during the summer months, and at five in the evening, and returns at eight in the morning during the winter months.

HEAP, HEAP BRIDGE AND HEYWOOD.

HEAP, a township and chapelry, in the parish of Bury and hundred of Salford, contains the village of HEAP BRIDGE, one mile from Bury, and the populous one of HEYWOOD. In this township the works of the loom, and the spinning and manufacture of cotton employ the chief of the population, which, in 1821, was 6,552 inhabitants.

HEYWOOD, situated on the bank of the Roach, three miles from Bury and Rochdale, and eight from Manchester, is a very flourishing village, and has for some years past been increasing in population and consequence amongst those places in which manufacturing establishments are successfully conducted. The manufactures here are not confined to a single branch, but embrace the spinning of cotton, the weaving calicos, muslins and fustians; and woollen goods are also produced here to a valuable extent. Here is one chapel under the establishment; the living is a curacy, in the gift of the rector of Bury, and in the incumbency of the Rev. Joseph Bland Jameson: one methodist and two independent chapels are also in Heap; and a national school, founded in 1815, by subscription, for the education of boys of the township of Heap, the number being limited to 500.

HORNBY, MELLING, WRAY, WENNINGTON, CLAUGHTON

AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

HORNBY is a small ancient market-town and chapelry, in the parish of Melling, in the hundred of Lonsdale, nine miles north-east of Lancaster. The principal object of attraction here is Hornby castle, erected by Nicholas de Mont Begons, soon after the conquest; in later years it became possessed by Wm. Lord Monteagles, to whom the mysterious letter was sent which led to the discovery of the gunpowder treason; and the castle, honour and estates are now the property of John Marsden, Esq., of Winnington hall. The ruins of a Saxon fortification stands in this honour, and also the remains of a premonstratension priory. Hornby had once a weekly market on Friday, which has merged in the fortnight fair for cattle, held on Tuesday: there is also an annual cattle fair on the 30th July. From Hornby castle the scenery is very beautiful, embracing the picturesque and fertile vales of the Lune and the Wenning, and in the distance is seen the hills of Ingleborough, Wharfedale and Pen-nigent.

MELLING, a village, township and parish, is two miles from Hornby, and contains the parish church, an ancient structure, dedicated to St. Peter, the living of which is a vicarage, in the gift of the King, and in the incumbency of the Rev. John Tatham.

WRAY is a small village, and the most populous of the townships comprised in the parish of Melling, about a mile and a half from that town. The making of nails is the most prominent trade in this township.

WENNINGTON is a township and village, in the parish of Melling, six miles and a half south of Kirkby Lonsdale.

CLAUGHTON is a village, in a parish of the same name, having no other dependent township, and in the hundred of Lonsdale, south of the sands, seven miles E.N.E. of Lancaster. The small church here, dedicated to St. Chad, is a rectory, in the gift of Thomas Fenwick, Esq., of London, who is also lord of the manor, and the Rev. Henry White, of Kew-green, Surrey, is the incumbent.

The population of the foregoing places, in 1821, was as follows; HORNBY chapelry, 477; MELLING, with WRAYTON township, 210; WRAY township, 808; WENNINGTON township, 160; and CLAUGHTON parish, the smallest in its number of inhabitants in this county, 123.

KIRKHAM, LYTHAM,

FRECKLETON, WARTON AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

KIRKHAM is a small and well built market-town and parish, in the hundred and deanery of Amounderness, and in the archdeaconry of Richmond, 226 miles from London, 40 from Manchester, 9 w. n. w. of Preston, and 8 s.e. of Poulton in the Fylde, of which district it may be termed the metropolis. The ancient church, in 1822, was taken down, except the tower, and rebuilt by a subscribed rate. The living is a vicarage, in the patronage of the dean and canons of Christ's church, Oxford; and the Rev. Thomas Webber is the incumbent. The independents, Wesleyan methodists and catholics have each a chapel, to which are attached Sunday schools; and there are besides national schools; one for clothing and educating forty girls, founded by Mr. John Langton, in 1760; and a free school for teaching the classics, founded in 1670 by Mr. Henry Coulbourne. The government of the town is vested in a constable, annually chosen; a meeting of magistrates takes place once a fortnight; and a court of requests sits monthly, for the deciding actions of debt under 40s. The manufactures are gradually increasing in importance: Messrs. Segar & Co. have a manufactory for sackings and sail cloths; and the cotton trade has been introduced rather extensively; the principal works in this branch are those of Messrs. Birley & Sons, which perform by steam power. Three miles south of this place, near the mouth of the estuary of the Ribble, a guide is stationed, to conduct travellers across the sand to Hesketh bank, at low water, which passage should not be attempted without such assistance. The weekly market is on Thursday; and the fairs are, the 4th and 5th February, the 29th April, and the 18th October. The whole parish contained, in 1821, 11,925 inhabitants, of which number 2,735 were in the township of Kirkham.

LANCASTER,

AND THE VILLAGES OF SKERTON, CATON, SUNDERLAND, SLYNE, GALLGATE, HALTON AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

LANCASTER is a market-town, borough and parish, in the hundreds of Amounderness and Lonsdale, south of the sands, in the deanery of Amounderness, and in the archdeaconry of Richmond, 239 miles N.N.W. of London, 53 from Manchester and Liverpool, 22 N.N.W. of Preston, 15 S.W. of Kirkby Lonsdale, and 11 north of Garstang. This capital of the principal palatinate county of England, is situated on the descent of a bold eminence, surmounted by the bastions of the castle and the lofty tower of St. Mary's church; beneath which is seen the river Lune, the eye following its windings till it empties itself in the bay of Morecambe. Its name appears to be derived from Lon, the name of the river, and castra, a tent, or camp, and was spelled, anciently, Loncaster.

That it was a Roman station of the first order has been satisfactorily ascertained, and if the evidences of many Roman antiquities found in this place were not sufficient to remove all doubt, the terminating word, castra or cæster, is a strong confirmation of the fact. From the early period of the Norman conquest, down to the rebellion of 1745, Lancaster has frequently been the theatre of war: in the invasion of the Scotch, in 1322, it was consigned to the flames; and the wars of the Roses, the disturbed reign of Charles I., and in other turbulent periods of history, the town suffered violence. The ancient history of the castle, (the most prominent building in the town,) is well embraced in a brief and interesting account given on an engraved view of the edifice, dedicated to Sir Thomas Lowther, Baronet, in 1727, which runs thus:—

"This Castle is perhaps one of y^e fairest Monuments of Antiquity that the Kingdom has to Shew. The Ditch was made by y^e Command of Adrian the Emperor, A.D. 124, & a Garrison there placed by him; who for their better security erected a Tower towards y^e West. A.D. 305 Constantine Chlorus (Father of Constantine y^e Great) built another fair Tower facing y^e Town, both which are now standing. After the Norman Conquest this Castle was considerably enlarged; John Earl of Morton & Lancaster contributed y^e most of any one to its Grandeur by erecting y^e beautiful Tower, now called the Gate House, & afterwards when he was King, did it y^e Honour to give Audience in it to y^e French Ambassadors, also there he received Homage from Alexander, K. of y^e Scots whom he subdued. It has been many Years, and is at Present, y^e County Goal, y^e Assizes have been held in it above Four hundred and Sixty years" (i.e. to the year 1727.)

The assumption, therefore, that the castle was reared by Roger de Poicton, is by this authority rendered somewhat doubtful. John of Gaunt re-edified the castle, and built towers and turrets to it, amongst which is the Lungess tower, called John o' Gaunt's chair, from whence a prospect of vast extent is taken in the range of sight; comprehending the hills of Cumberland and Westmoreland, the plain of south Lancashire, and the whole extent of the vale of Lune, terminated by the expanse of the Irish sea. It is estimated that upwards of £140,000. has been expended at various times, in the different alterations and improvements to this edifice, which now contains, besides the prison accommodations, with the various apartments appropriated to the classification of prisoners, the county and crown halls, nisi prius and crown courts, residence for the governor, &c.; the whole within the walls, which enclose an area of 10,525 square yards. Terraces on the north and south sides of the castle form a fine promenade beneath the stupendous structure, which, from these walks, is contemplated to advantage, as well as the fine scenery of the surrounding country. The constablenesship of the castle is vested in Sir Richd. Clayton, Bart.: the Rev. Jos. Rowley is the chaplain, and Mr. John Higgin is the governor. The other principal public buildings are, the town-hall, built in 1781; the custom-house, on St. George's quay, erected in 1764; the public baths, in Moor-street; the assembly-rooms, in Back-lane; and the theatre, in St. Leonard gate. The places of worship are, the parish church of St. Mary, situated on the "green and shapely knoll" of Castle-hill, a very ancient building, but that it is of coeval date with the castle is to be doubted; it consists of a central and two side aisles of equal length, with richly carved stalls, and the workmanship in front of the chancel and vestry is very beautiful, and highly attractive to the curious in church embellishments; the living is a vicarage, in the patronage of Lieut. Colonel Marton, and in the incumbency of the Rev. John Manby, and the present curate is the Rev. Robt. Watson: St. John's chapel, in Chapel-street, in the incumbency of the Rev. John Moresland; St. Ann's chapel, in Moor-lane, incumbent, Rev. Robt. Houseman, and the Rev. Myles Dixon is the officiating curate. The dissenting places of worship are, a friends' meeting house, presbyterian, Roman catholic, independent and Wesleyan methodist chapels, to all of these Sunday schools are attached; besides which, there are national schools for boys and girls; the blue school for girls, and the ancient grammar school. The charities are very numerous, amongst which, the first in consequence and utility is, "the county lunatic asylum," on Lancaster moor, a handsome stone erection, opened in 1816; it has a chapel attached, and the hospital is capable of accommodating 300 patients; Gardyner's charity, for four poor persons; Penny's hospital, for the residence and comfort of twelve poor men; Gilleson's hospital, for eight unmarried women: the dispensary and house of recovery; a lying-in charity; and a benevolent society. The societies for promoting religion, literature and the arts are, auxiliary Bible, church missionary and tract societies; "the Lancaster institution for promoting the fine arts;" "the amicable," a book society; a mechanics' library; and a savings' bank.

The town is governed by a corporate body, consisting of a mayor, who is coroner during the mayoralty, a recorder, chaplain, seven aldermen, twelve capital

burgesses, and twelve common councilmen, and inferior officers: the mayor is elected by the aldermen, the high bailiff by the capital burgesses, and the second bailiff by the freemen at large; and the manorial rights are vested in the corporate body. Exclusive of the assizes and quarter sessions, there are quarterly courts, a court for the wapentake of the hundred, for the recovery of debts under 40s. held on the first Wednesday in every month; and a borough court, held every fourth Thursday, for the recovery of debts unlimited in amount, contracted within the borough. Lancaster received its first charter, constituting it a borough, in the fourth year of the reign of Richard I; and in the 23rd year of the reign of Edward I. first sent members to parliament; the elective franchise suffered occasional interruption till 1547, from which year it has been enjoyed without intermission. The right of election is in the freemen, in number about 3,000; the returning officers are the mayor and bailiffs, and the present representatives are John Fenton Cawthorne, of Wyerside, Esq. and Thomas Greene, of Slyne, Esq. Lancaster has been long famous for the manufacture of mahogany furniture and upholstery, much of which is exported; in addition, sail cloth, cordage, linens, and caudles are made here to some considerable extent. There are cotton mills in the parish, a silk spinning establishment, and a sort of fine worsted yarn is spun here: there are also two ship building yards: and upon the Halton water are corn mills. The Lune is navigable so high as the town for vessels up to 300 tons burthen, and the canal to Preston passes over it by a noble aqueduct of five arches, which bestrides the river about a mile from the town. The seats in the immediate neighbourhood of Lancaster are numerous, most of them in delightful situations, commanding views varied and beautiful; the unwearied sight travelling over pleasing hills and fertile dales, from some points, and from others the eye rests delighted upon the expanse of waters. Two market days are held in the week, viz. Wednesdays and Saturdays; and there are three annual fairs, which last three days each, commencing on the 1st May, 5th July, and 10th October, for cattle, cheese, cloth, pedlery, &c. the last being the principal cheese fair. The parish of Lancaster has not kept pace with others in this county, in increase of population; in 1801, the whole parish contained 17,158 persons, the borough 9,030 of that number; and in 1821 the number in the parish had only reached 19,372: the borough containing 10,144 of that number, being an increase in 20 years of only 2,214 in the entire parish, and of 1,014 in the borough.

SKERTON, a township, separated from Lancaster by the Lune, is a considerable village, chiefly occupied by persons out of trade, and by farmers and their labourers. Here is an endowed free school for 20 poor children, and a Sunday school, in which 70 more are instructed, but there is no place of worship: 1,283 persons form the population of the township.

CATON, an extensive township & chapelry, in the parish of Lancaster, 5 miles E.N.E. of that town stands on the southern bank of the Lune, and is celebrated by the poet Gray for its beautiful scenery, who, in writing of it says, "every feature which constitutes a perfect landscape of the extensive sort, is here not only boldly marked, but also in its best position," among other Roman relics discovered here, was one found some years ago in the bed of the Fisherbeck, inscribed with the following letters:—

which being supplied with vowels, forms the following monitory couplet:—

Persevere ye perfect men,

Ever keep these precepts ten.

Several manufacturing concerns established here, afford employment to a considerable portion of the inhabitants; the whole, in 1821, amounting to 1,107, being a less number by 83 than were resident in the township in 1801.

SUNDERLAND, a village, in the township of Overton, and parish of Lancaster, 7 miles s. w. of that town, situated on a narrow tongue of land, terminating its point in the Irish sea, is rendered remarkable as being a place where cotton wool, (the now great staple of the county) was introduced, before it was imported at Liverpool; and the inhabitants of the neighbouring country came many miles to inspect it as a curiosity, but no one knew its use. The village is advancing in repute as a sea bathing place, and its population has increased since the last returns, when the number of actual inhabitants was about 400.

SLYNE is an ancient royal manor, in the parish of Bolton-le-Sands, 3 miles N. of Lancaster, possessed by Thomas Greene, Esq. M. P. for that borough. SLYNE-WITH-HEST township contains about 320 inhabitants.

LEIGH,

INCLUDING WEST LEIGH, PENNINGTON, BEDFORD AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

LEIGH is a parish and market-town, in the hundred of West Derby, in the deanery of Warrington, and in the archdeaconry of Chester; 197 miles from London, 23 N.E. of Liverpool, 12 west of Manchester, and 7 from Bolton and Wigan. Leag, Leax, or Leigh, which is pure Saxon, and synonymous with the English "Lea," a field or pasture, is pronounced gutturally by the inhabitants, oLEYgHH, the g being lost, and the o scarcely distinguishable. The division of PENNINGTON and WEST LEIGH townships arises in the middle of the town of Leigh; the market-place being in the former, and the church in the latter township: this place of worship is an ancient stone erection, dedicated to St. Mary. The living, which is a discharged vicarage, is in the patronage of Lord Lilford, and the present incumbent is the Rev. Jonathan Topping. Here are also an independent chapel, called Bethseda, built in 1813; a methodist chapel, erected in 1815; a small chapel, at Pennington hall, for the followers of Swedenborg; and a catholic chapel. Upwards of a thousand children have the happy advantages of instruction in the Sunday schools attached to the various places of worship in the town; and the methodists have here an auxiliary missionary society. The free school, situated in the parish church-yard, was founded and endowed in 1655, by Piers Ranicars, who left £5. per annum, chargeable on certain lands. Other benevolent individuals have subsequently increased this sum to £24. a year, and the master has a dwelling-house, rent free. Lord Lilford is lord of the manor of Pennington, and holds annually a court baron: a court is also held for the manor of West Leigh, of which that nobleman and Samuel Cheetham Hilton, Esq., are joint lords. Coal, and a sort of excellent brown lime, is found in this parish, the latter article having the property of growing hard in water, and is used for the interior coating of cisterns. The prosperity of the town has increased, by the advantages of inland navigation: a branch of the Duke of Bridgewater's canal forms a junction here with the Leeds and Liverpool; and boats pass the canal bridge, on the whole line from Liverpool to Manchester, and contrarywise, daily. In manufacturing annals this parish claims a conspicuous situation, as it was here that the first spinning-jenny was constructed, which occurred in 1763, by one Thos. Highs, a reed maker, who also invented the water-frame. This valuable invention was afterwards so much improved upon by Richard Arkwright, that he made a large fortune thereby; and through the reed-maker of Leigh, may be attributed, principally, the manufacturing eminence now enjoyed by the county of Lancaster. Leigh, though the birth-place of valuable inventions, never ranked very high as a manufacturing town; cambrics, muslins and fustians, however, employ many hands in the fabricating: but the trade of the place has certainly much improved of late years, and several new manufacturing concerns have augmented its population and consequence. Market-day, Saturday: fairs 24th and 25th April, and 7th and 8th December for black cattle, pigs, pedlery, &c. Leigh parish contains a population of 18,372 inhabitants, 5,193 of which number are in Pennington and West Leigh.

LIVERPOOL,

A SEAPORT town and borough, ranking with the first commercial towns, and excelled by none in its importance to the revenue of this kingdom, is situated in the hundred of West Derby, on the eastern bank of the river Mersey, in 53° 22' 30" of north latitude and 2° 57' 0" of west longitude, from the meridian of London, 205 miles north-west of that city, 36 west of Manchester, 53 from Lancaster, 31 from Preston, 18 from Warrington, and 8 from Prescot. In point of antiquity, the claims of Liverpool to consideration are but meagre: originally it was little more than a fishing village; its name is not to be found in doomsday book, and the etymology of it is enveloped in obscurity. Dr. Enfield favours the opinion that the true orthography of the place is Leverpool, and in the original patent of King John it is so written; this mode of spelling it receiving support from the Lever family, of ancient date in this county, whose pedigree and arms are to be found in the Harleian manuscript; and the latter part of the name, it is generally agreed, took its rise from a body of water formerly spread there, like a pool. Some, fastidious in etymological researches, desirous of giving authority which shall apply nearer to its present mode of spelling, have affirmed, that the former part of the name originated in a sea weed, called Liver, found on the sea coast, and known by the name of Laver in the west of England; while others have endeavoured to establish its appellation upon that of a bird, the Liver, formerly said to be found in this place; but no credit can be attached to this position, as such bird is not mentioned by naturalists, although delineated in the herald's office. The military history of Liverpool, although not so deficient in interest as that relating to its antiquity, may, nevertheless, be confined in narrow limits. According to Camden a castle was built here as early as the year 1076, by Roger de Poitiers, lord of the honour of Lancaster, which was dismantled in 1659; it continued in a dilapidated state till 1721, when it was razed to the ground, and St. George's church erected upon its site. During two insurrections in the north, in behalf of the abdicated family of James, the inhabitants, from the defenceless state of the town, were under just apprehensions for its safety; for though a fort was erected on the banks of the river, at the north-west end of the town, yet it was too weak to afford efficient protection to a place of such consequence. It is ascertained, that in 1695 the instrument of punishment for scolds, called the "cuck-stool," existed in this parish; and though modern refinement has discarded this seat of penance, yet it is hard to say at what period female manners and temper had acquired sufficient improvement to render such correctional cooling ablutions unnecessary. It was not till the 24th of June, in 1699, that Liverpool was emancipated, by an act of parliament, from its subjection to the parish of Walton, and became a parish of itself. There has been eleven different charters granted to the corporation of Liverpool, viz. the 1st, in King John, in the year 1207; 2nd, Henry III., 1228-9; 3rd, Edward II., 1332; 4th, Richard II., 1378; 5th, Henry V., 1413; 6th, Philip and Mary, 1555-6; 7th, Charles I., 1626-7; 8th, Charles II., 1676; 9th, James II., 1685; 10th, William III., 1695; and the 11th, George II., 1752. The corporation of Liverpool is one of the most opulent corporate bodies in the kingdom: some idea of its resources may be formed, when it is stated, that the extent of the borough forms an area of 2,202 acres, of which upwards of 1,000 belong to the corporation. This body has been termed powerful, proud, litigious, and arbitrary; the just constructive sense of these words has not, however, been given; that most apposite being, that it is powerful from its resources and respectability cannot be denied; that it is proud in the aggrandizement and increasing prosperity of the town over which it presides, and tenacious of infringement upon its rights, is most natural; and, that it is arbitrary in exercising its faculties to crush vice, under whatever form it is detected, is worthy of the great town and numerous population of which it is the head. The corporation consists of a mayor, recorder, aldermen, two bailiffs, town clerk, common councilmen and other officers; the four junior aldermen being coroners for the time being. The influence and patronage enjoyed by the chief magistrate are commensurate with the important duties attached to the honourable office; it is not, therefore, a subject of surprise that a laudable ambition should create anxious aspirants for the high civic honours of this town: and the month of October, in 1827, stands conspicuous as having witnessed one of the most unprecedented contests ever known in this borough for the election of a mayor: the struggle being between Mr. T. C. Porter and Mr. Nicholas Robinson, whose political sentiments accorded, and whose respectability and pretensions were as nearly equal as possible: the energies of each party and their respective friends were exerted to their highest tension. For the first four days the polling was equal, but on the sixth the preponderating influence of Mr. Porter became apparent, and Mr. Robinson's committee, perceiving the inutility of prolonging the agitation, resigned the contest in favour of Mr. Porter, who was elected by a majority of 15 votes, that gentleman having polled 1780, and Mr. Robinson 1765.

The elective franchise has been possessed by this borough since the 23d year of the reign of Edward I., when it knew no trade save that of fishing. From the 25th of that monarch's reign, till the time of Edward VI. no members were returned; in this reign the electors allowed their representatives two shillings per day for the maintenance of their rank and station. The elective franchise is vested in the free burgesses, in number about 4,000, a large proportion of which are artisans, chiefly employed in the ship yards. The returning officers are the mayor and the two bailiffs, and the present members are, General Gascoyne and the Right Hon. Wm. Huskisson: the last named gentleman was elected in 1822, upon the late Right Hon. George Canning being appointed to the office of secretary of state for foreign affairs. In 1812 one of the most arduous contests in the electioneering annals of Liverpool took place; the candidates were General Gascoyne, the Right Hon. George Canning, General Tarleton, Henry Brougham, Esq. and Thos. Creevey, Esq. when, after a struggle of eight days, the two former were returned, the numbers being, for Mr. Canning, 1631; General Gascoyne, 1532; Mr. Brougham, 1131; Mr. Creevey, 1068; General Tarleton, 11. The parochial concerns of Liverpool are, as might be anticipated, from the population of the town, of great weight and magnitude. The whole town forms one parish, and the workhouse has a resident population of from 1,000 to 1,500 souls: the building standing upon Brownlow hill was erected in 1771, at a cost of £8,000, and its affairs are administered by the churchwardens and overseers, aided by a select vestry. The expenditure in 1824 was £39,615. 19s. 4d. being a less sum by £23,247. 18s. 2d. than was laid out in 1821. The police of the town is well regulated; and at the town-hall the mayor or magistrates administer justice daily. The quarter sessions for the borough of Liverpool are held on Monday in the second whole week after the Epiphany, on Monday in the second whole week after Easter Sunday, on Monday in the second whole week after Thomas-a-Becket, and on Monday in the second whole week after the 11th of October. A court of requests was formed under an act past in 1751, for the recovery of debts under 40s. by a prompt and unexpensive process.

CHURCHES.—St. Peter's church, in Church-street, was built at the beginning of the last century, under an act of parliament, and is the parish church: the rectors are the Rev. Saml. Renshaw and the Rev. R. H. Roughsedge; and the curates the Rev. T. Knight, the Rev. John Pulford, the Rev. Peter Bulmer, and the Rev. Thomas Johnson. St. Nicholas, usually called the old church, or parochial chapel, is supposed to have been erected prior to the 13th century. In 1809 a most melancholy event happened connected with this church, the tower of which, containing heavy bells, it was deemed necessary to strengthen. Notwithstanding the frail state of the tower being well known, the bells, as usual, were rung for the morning service, and while the second peal was ringing, and just at the moment the procession of children of the Moorfields charity school was entering the church, the girls being foremost, the tower gave way, and the spire was precipitated through the centre aisle of the church; 24 girls were either killed on the spot or died immediately after, one boy was killed in the belfrey, and three women in the body of the church. The ringers, admonished of their danger by a stone falling upon one of the bells, escaped out of the church, the moment before the bells, beams, and upper floors, fell to the bottom of the tower. The rectors and curates are the same as those officiating for the parish church of St. Peter. The other churches are all of more modern date; they are, St. George's, standing upon the site of the ancient castle, in Castle-street, consecrated in the year 1734; it is in this church that the mayor usually attends divine service. The patronage of the living is in the corporation, and in the incumbency of the Rev. Jonathan Brooks, and the lecturer is the Rev. Augustus Campbell. St. Thomas', a neat substantial building, in Park-lane, was opened in 1748: the chaplain is the Rev. John Hill Smith, the lecturer the Rev. John Charles Price, and the curate the Rev. Thomas Lloyd Pain. St. Paul's, in the square to which it gives name, was opened for divine service in 1769, the appearance of this church (except its dimensions) is similar to St. Paul's in London: the divines attached to this church are the Rev. George Monk, chaplain, the Rev. Richard Cardwell, curate, and the Rev. John B. Monk, evening lecturer. St. Anne's, in Great Richmond-street, opened in 1773, is in the patronage of the corporation, and the chaplain is the Rev. Wm. Blundell. St. James's, in Parliament-street, Toxteth park, is a plain brick structure, built by 27 share-holders, in 1774, at a cost of £3,000, on land given by the Earl of Sefton. The patronage is with the proprietors; the chaplain is the Rev. Thos. H. Heathcote, and the curate is the Rev. John Smith. St. John's, in the Haymarket, was opened in 1785; attached to this church is a public burial ground, in which was consigned, in forty years from its opening, no fewer than 47,023 bodies: the chaplain is the Rev. Richard Loxham, and the lecturer is the Rev. Thomas Moss. Trinity church, in St. Anne's-street, consecrated in 1792, was built by a number of proprietors, at a cost of £7,000. of which the Rev. Miles Formby is the chaplain. Christ's church, in Hunter-street, one of the most elegant erections for the purposes of religion in the town, was opened in 1799, at a cost of £15,000.: the chaplain is the Rev. John Tetlow, and the curate the Rev. John Lingard. St. Mary's, a small chapel or oratory, used as a public cemetery for the poor, was consecrated about the year 1800, the chaplain of which is the Rev. Charles Lichfield Swainson. St. Mark's, in Duke-street, opened in 1803, has for its chaplain the Rev. Richard Blacow. St. Andrew's, in Renshaw-street, built by John Gladstone, Esq., M.P. at a cost of £10,000., and consecrated in 1815; appointed the Rev. John Jones the chaplain. St. Philip's, in Hardman-street, built in 1815, at a cost of £12,000, has for its minister the Rev. Thos. Stanley Bowstead, and the Rev. Charles Thomas Gladwin is the chaplain. St. Michael's, in Upper Pitt street, the first stone of which was laid in 1816, cost the parish, up to the year 1824, £35,000, when the pile was transferred to the corporation, who completed its erection, and appointed the Rev. Ambrose Dawson and the Rev. James Aspinall its ministers. The church of the "School for the Blind," in Duncan-street, opened on the 6th of October, 1818, by the Bishop of Chester, is a chaste and beautiful erection, of the doric order, of which the Rev. Edward Hull is the chaplain. St. Stephen's church, in Byrom-street, built in 1722, and St. Matthew's, in Key-street, in 1707, were originally used as dissenting meeting-houses, but the former was consecrated to the established church in 1792, and the latter in 1795; the chaplain of St. Stephen's is the Rev. Joseph Hilton, and of St. Matthew's the Rev. Thos. Tattershall. The new church, in Rodney-street, is for a congregation of the Scotch national establishment. The dissenters in Liverpool are as respectable as they are numerous; and their places of worship are all neat and commodious, and some are handsome, approaching to elegance, in their architecture. They are too numerous to describe particularly and singularly: they consist of edifices appropriated to the worship of the various denominations of calvinists, presbyterians, the several classes of methodists, Sandemanians, friends' meeting-houses, Welch chapels, a jew's synagogue, in Seel-st, & five Roman catholic chapels. In addition to all these religious erections there are two nautical sanctuaries, one formed out of the ship "William," purchased by the "Seamen's Friend Society and Bethel Union," and the other out of his Majesty's frigate the "Tees." A new church is building in St. Martin's-in-the-fields; and a district free church is erecting in Bold-street, to be dedicated to St. Luke.

The CHARITABLE INSTITUTIONS of Liverpool are as extensive in their operations, as they are meritorious in the design for which they are severally founded; meriting a wider space and a larger measure of encomiastic notice than can be apportioned to them in these pages: they embrace several bible, missionary and tract societies; & others for promoting christian knowledge. For the cure of disorders incident to the human frame the establishments are in extent commensurate with their usefulness: the general infirmary is the principal, opened in 1749; the new erection was begun in 1821; and the expense of the establishment is estimated at £5,000. annually. Appendant to the old infirmary is the seaman's hospital, established in 1752; and in the infirmary gardens, is the lunatic asylum. The dispensaries, and the house of recovery for the parish poor, are highly beneficial. There are also two hospitals for curing diseases of the eye; an American seamen's and military hospitals; a marine humane society; a female penitentiary; the ladies' lying-in, benevolent, Dorcas, strangers' friend, catholic orphan, and other societies; which, though varying in their regulations, all have for their principal objects the relief of the necessitous poor. The alms-houses are numerous; and the friendly societies are, one for commercial travellers, several benefit, and an institution for the relief of decayed actors. The Sunday, national, and various charity schools, belonging to the several places of worship, and others unattached to any particular sect, are more than 50 in number, many of which entirely clothe, and all collectively bestowing the invaluable blessing of education upon more than 12,000 children of both sexes. The school for the indigent blind is a most interesting institution, having for its object the rendering useful members of society, and by the employment of their hands, happy in themselves, those by whom the sun is not seen. The principal occupation of the pupil is spinning, the making of baskets, twine, sash, fish & clothes line; hearth rugs, mats, stair carpeting, floor cloth, list & worsted shoes, &c. &c.; the learning of music is also a branch cultivated, and many have been qualified for organists, in this truly valuable establishment. The amount of goods manufactured and sold at the school is nearly £2,000. a year. The literary and scientific institutions are worthy of the growing opulence of the place. They consist of the Liverpool library, established in 1770, held in the Lyceum; the Athenæum, in Church-street, established in 1779; the botanic garden, in 1800; the Lyceum, in Bold-street, in 1804; the Union rooms, in Duke street, in 1811; the exchange news rooms, and the underwriter's rooms, established in the same year; the royal institution, in Colquitt-st. in 1814; and the medical library. The philosophical and literary society was established in 1812. The royal chartered institution opened in 1817, which has its museum; its object being the promotion of literature, science and the arts; liberally co-operating with other societies, who may associate for similar purposes. The libraries for the use of male and female apprentices, opened, the former in 1822, and the latter in 1824, are most useful channels of public instruction to the young of both sexes. The musical festivals, held every four years, are deserving notice, and may be said to rival those of York; as an illustration of their utility—the last one, held in the month of October, 1827, produced upwards of £9,000, leaving a surplus, after defraying every expense, of near £6,000, to be disposed of for benevolent purposes.

The PUBLIC BUILDINGS for the purposes of trade and commerce are numerous; some of them of great magnitude, others splendid, and all well adapted to their respective purposes. The first in consequence is the Town-hall, which was erected in 1749, at an expence of £30,000. It is a noble stone building, with two elegant fronts, decorated with some fine pieces of sculpture; one of which, representing Commerce presenting her treasures to Neptune, is particularly admired; within the building are the town-hall, council-room, assembly-room, &c. In 1803 the ground to the north was cleared of the old and almost useless buildings by which it was covered, and in their place three ranges of offices and warehouses have been erected, which form, with the old exchange, a most elegant square, the centre of which is ornamented by a noble monument, to the memory of the late Lord Nelson. In the area of this square the merchants assemble, for the daily transaction of business, elegant piazzas affording a complete shelter when the weather is unfavourable; and a news-room, situated in one of the wings, offers every information which the newspapers, reviews, &c. are capable of affording. The whole of these buildings have an aspect of the metropolitan grandeur, and form one of the principal ornaments of the town. The other public buildings are the corn-exchange, where a market is held every Tuesday and Saturday, from ten to one o'clock. The custom house, situated at the east end of the Old dock, and nearly in the centre of the town, is a brick edifice, ornamented with stone; but is an inconvenient building, as well as a mean one, compared with most of the other public erections which so conspicuously adorn this town, and testify its wealth and liberality: a new one is to be erected, suitable to the extent of its transactions, for which the corporation are to give the site, government having agreed to the allowing a sum of money towards its erection, to whom, after the lapse of twenty years from its completion, it is exclusively to belong. The tobacco warehouses, where that article is deposited previously to the payment of the duty, are extensive and commodious edifices, situated on opposite sides of the King's dock. The docks are of a magnitude corresponding with the commercial importance of the town. So far back as the year 1699 the Old dock was constructed; and in 1738 an act was passed for enlarging the entrance, erecting piers, &c. The trade of the port increasing, it was found necessary to construct other docks.—Salthouse and St. George's were finished: the first stone of the latter was laid on the first of April, 1767. These being found insufficient, the King's dock was opened on the third of October, 1788: yet so rapid was the increase of trade, that another was deemed necessary, and the Queen's dock admitted shipping into her spacious bosom on the 17th of April, 1795. There is now added another called the Regent's dock, situated on the north shore, the first stone was laid May 17th, 1816, and it was opened July 19th, 1821, and the Prince's dock has been completed since that period. Some of these docks communicate, so that ships can pass from one to the other, and into the graving docks, without being obliged to return into the river. All the wet docks are also connected by large tunnels, for the purpose of one dock washing or cleansing another, and steam is successfully employed in clearing them from the accumulation of mud—a dredging machine by this power raises 50 tons per hour. Here are also five graving docks, and three dry docks. In the month of July, 1827, actions were tried before a sheriff's jury, between the owners of a property known as Jackson's mill dam, and certain appurtenances; and the Earl Sefton, and the corporation of Liverpool; who, to carry into effect the building of a new dock and basin, on the north shore, for which they had obtained an act, required the dam and strand contiguous. The corporation had offered a compensation, but it not being considered adequate, Mr. Jackson resolved to rely on the decision of a jury, and procured the talent of Mr. Brougham, who received with his brief the sum of £300. & aided by other legal assistance, so ably enforced the rights claimed by Mr. Jackson, that a verdict, in the whole, including the Earl Sefton's award, was obtained to the amount of upwards of £100,000. It being the first time of Mr. Brougham's visit to Liverpool, since the memorable contest, in the year 1812, when he was one of those put in nomination to represent it; the leading gentlemen of the town availed themselves of this opportunity to testify their admiration of his splendid talents; and invited him to a public dinner, at which, upwards of three hundred persons were assembled, all of the first respectability and opulence; and, although politicians of every grade were to be seen in the assembly, yet all mingled in unison to give a hearty welcome to their talented guest. In convenient situations, contiguous to the shipping, immense ranges of warehouses are constructed; some of these are much admired for their height and extent. On the 15th of February, 1802, a fine range, on the east side of St. George's Dock was destroyed by fire; the damage was estimated at £323,000. Others have been since constructed; and so near are the warehouses to the vessels, that the expense of loading or unloading is considerably less than in most other commercial towns.

Liverpool carries on a trade to most parts of the world, and is a depôt for East and West Indian and American produce. From this port the various manufactures of Manchester, Birmingham, Sheffield, Staffordshire, Leeds, &c. are spread over the surface of the greater part of the habitable globe. By inland navigation Liverpool communicates with every principal town in the kingdom, and by this means receives additional wealth and importance. The manufactures of Liverpool are principally refined sugars, glass, watches, soap, &c. there are also salt works, copperas works, iron works, and many considerable breweries. Near the town are many wind-mills, for grinding corn and other articles; there is also a large tide mill. An immense number of shipwrights or carpenters, ropers, sail makers, &c. are also constantly employed in making, repairing, and equipping vessels. The rapid extension of commerce, with its attendants, wealth and population, constitute the great features of the town and port of Liverpool. About two centuries ago, this place was designated as "the little creek of Liverpool," and was dependent upon the port of Chester. At the commencement of the eighteenth century the shipping belonging to Liverpool consisted of 84 vessels, their aggregate tonnage being 5,789: at the end of the reign of George II. the number of ships amounted to 226, and the amount paid for dock duties in that year was £6,597. 11s. 1d.: in 1800 the number of ships had increased to 4,746; the amount of duties paid, £23,379. 13s. 6d.: in 1823 the number amounted to 8,916, the tonnage, 1,010,819, and the sum paid for duties, £115,783. 1s. 6d. The gross receipt of customs at Liverpool, in 1823 was £1,808,402., of which sum £1,012,857 was paid for tobacco duty alone; and the King's warehouse, in that year, contained 12,000 hogsheads of that commodity. The number of bags of cotton imported in the same year was 578,300; and the importation of various commodities besides, including Baltic and colonial produce, and other articles of merchandize generated in different parts of the globe, tend, in the whole, to enhance the value of this port in its contributions towards the revenue of the kingdom, and swell its consequence in the class of mercantile towns. The estimated value of bonded property in the port generally amounts to one million and a half sterling. The history of the canals given in a preceding sheet, in the historic of the county of Lancashire, and the "conveyance by water," forming a portion of the directory of this town, in a subsequent sheet, gives full evidence of the benefit Liverpool has derived from the facilities afforded to it by inland navigation. The periodical press of Liverpool is chiefly confined to the newspapers: their names and days of publication will be found in the classed arrangement. The first newspaper ever issued in Liverpool was on the 28th of May, 1756, by Robert Williamson; and in 1766 the first directory of Liverpool was published, which sold for sixpence. In 1757 the post passed for the first time through Ormskirk, from Liverpool to Preston; and in 1760, the first stage coach was established from hence to London, which started once a week, and performed the journey in four days. In 1567, a cockpit was erected; and in 1576 horse races were first instituted here, and held on Ascension-day, in every year, upon the shore; the prize being a silver bell, which was tied to the forehead of the winning horse, and hence the phrase, to "bear away the bell," applied to successful emulation. From 1774 to 1786 annual races were held on Crosby-marsh, near the town, when they were discontinued till 1826, when, in the month of August in that year, the corporation gave a cup to be run for, which took place about six miles from the town. The established places of public amusement are, the theatre, in Williamson-square; the music hall, in Bold-street; the olympic circus, in Christian-street; a beautiful new circus theatre, called "the Royal Amphitheatre," lately erected in Great Charlotte-street, by subscription, and opened by Mr. Cooke in the spring of 1826, in which part of the musical festival before mentioned was held; the Wellington-rooms, at Mount pleasant, under the able management of Mr. James Edwards; the ball-room, in the town-hall; and the rotunda, in Bold street. A Mr. Lassells has also lately opened a spacious room, called the St. Ann's saloon, in Great Richmond-street, for dancing and music, which has been fitted up at a considerable expense, and with adequate taste: opposite to the orchestra are three beautiful paintings of views in Ireland and Scotland, taken by Mr. Daniel Williams; the subjects indicative of the three portions of the day—morning, noon and evening.

The improvements in the appearance of the town within the last half century have kept pace with its increasing trade and consequent wealth; expence has not been a consideration with the projectors when any works were agitated which had for their object either convenience or splendour. Amongst the improvements of magnitude now in progress is the railroad from this town to Manchester, for which an act of parliament has been obtained, and £300,000. subscribed. A new beacon or light-house is also building, the first stone of which was laid in July, 1827, by Thomas Littledale; Esq. the then mayor, accompanied by the corporation. Its situation is contiguous to the Rock perch, and when finished, will be hailed with delight by many a weary mariner as affording the surety of a long wished for haven. The present battery on the north shore not being considered sufficient protection to the town, it is in contemplation to erect another in a more secluded yet more advantageous situation on the opposite shore, or Black-rock; indeed, it is matter of speculation whether or not the present one will not be required by the corporation, as the new dock erecting comes so near, that if more docks are required it would be entirely hid; and if ever called into operation, would first have to destroy its own interest before it could annoy the enemy. A grand measure, having for its object the nearing the distance from this town to the metropolis by sixteen miles, has been suggested; proposed to be effected by throwing a chain bridge over the Mersey at Runcorn-gap, to be connected with an entirely new line of road from Liverpool to Newcastle-under-Line: difficulties, however, at present stand in the way of the execution of this plan, among which is its tending to interrupt the navigation of the Mersey; but it is to be hoped that all obstacles will vanish in proportion as the plan becomes digested by mature and unimpassioned consideration. A line of telegraph from Liverpool to Holyhead is completed: its machinery was first tried on Friday, the 26th of October, 1827, and so successful was the arrangement, that communications are now frequently effected from one extremity to the other, a distance of 128 miles, in five minutes. The individual who has had the superintendence of this undertaking is Lieutenant Watson, who is about to establish a similar communication between the great commercial towns of Liverpool and Manchester, as a private undertaking; the eminent utility and importance of which measure, regarded only in a mercantile point of view, is too evident to need comment. The improvements in Castle-street and Lord-street are particularly deserving of notice; one entire side of Lord-street has been pulled down, and houses of the first order are now erecting: part of Castle-street and Castle-ditch has been removed, making a direct line and thoroughfare from the top of Bold-street to St. George's church, which now stands in a fine open area or rather crescent. Contiguous to the docks, which were choked up with so many dirty narrow streets, the work of demolition is going rapidly on; Dale-street, Tithebarn-street, and Water-st. also exemplify the utility of, and services which, the improvement act has and will ultimately produce. The town is brilliantly lighted with gas, by two companies; the coal gas company incorporated by an act passed 23d May, 1818, and that for producing the vapour from oil in 1823; both are well supported, but the coal gas shares bear the highest premium. Liverpool has become a town of considerable resort as a sea-bathing place; and the neighbourhood abounds with delightful situations. The villages of Everton, Kirkdale, and Bootle, to the east and north, and of Wavertree, Toxteth-park, and Allerton, to the east have all their attendant beauties. The language of the late Lord Erskine forcibly speaks to the mind of the visitor to Liverpool; he says, upon ascending a hill, "all you see spread out beneath you—that immense place, which stands like another Venice, upon the waters—which is intersected by those numerous docks—which glitters with those cheerful habitations of well protected men—which is the busy seat of trade, and the gay scene of elegant amusements, growing out of its prosperity—where there is the most cheerful face of industry—where there are riches overflowing, and every thing that can delight a man who wishes to see the prosperity of a great community, and a great empire—all this has been created by the industry, and well disciplined management of a handful of men since I was a boy." No town in England, the metropolis not excepted, can boast of market accommodations equal to Liverpool. There are nine different markets in various parts of the town: namely, St. James's market, near St. George's place; St. Thomas's market, Cleveland-square; St. John's market, Great Charlotte-street; the market in Derby-square; Islington market; the markets in Scotland-place, and in Pownal-square; the pig market, near Gibraltar-st. and the cattle market in Lime st. have each their local advantages; but the market in Great Charlotte-street affords conveniences both to the buyer and seller, unrivalled, perhaps, in the kingdom. The market-days are Wednesday and Saturday; but every day (excepting the sabbath) may be considered a market-day here. The corn market is on Tuesday and Saturday; and there are two annual fairs, on the 25th of July and the 11th of November; ten days before each fair, a hand is exhibited in front of the town-hall, which remains there during and for ten days after each fair, denoting protection, during which period no person going from or coming to the town on business connected with the fair can be arrested for debt by a borough process, within its ancient liberties.

POPULATION.—In the year 1272 a census was taken of the town, from which it appeared that it consisted of 168 houses, and about 800 inhabitants; at the end of the year 1700, the number of persons amounted to 5714; in 1720, the number amounted to 11,833; in 1750, the number is stated at 18,400; in 1801, the number was 77,653; in 1811, 94,376; and in 1821, the population amounted to 118,972: exclusive of EDGE-HILL, EVERTON, HARRINGTON, KIRKDALE, and LOW-HILL, all in the suburbs, containing collectively 22,515—total 141,487: exclusive of the seafaring men belonging to the port, which were estimated at 9,000, making an aggregate of 150,487 souls.
